A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, Oct. 3, at approximately 12:30 a.m., Officers Chris Donovan and Tom Gaeta were dispatched to Brook Road for a report of a male suspect possibly breaking in to motor vehicles.

Upon arrival, the officers were flagged down by the caller who stated he just saw a male walk into the driveway of a Brook Road apartment complex and believed that he was going to break into cars. When asked why he believed the male was suspicious, the caller said he resides at there and knows all the other tenants but did not recognize this particular male. The caller added that he first saw the suspect look in to another vehicle parked on the street and knew he was not the owner. The caller described the suspect and his clothing description to the officers and they conducted a search of the area.

Officer Donovan walked into the driveway of the apartment complex and observed one vehicle with the front driver's side door ajar. As the officer approached the vehicle, he observed the doors to be unlocked with the glove compartment and center console open. There were several items (registration/other paperwork, pens, compact discs, etc.) laid out on the front seats. The appearance of the vehicle was consistent with a vehicle that had just been rummaged through.

As the officer continued through the parking area, he observed a male fitting the description in the neighboring driveway walking away from the officer's location. Officer Donovan illuminated the suspect with his flashlight and yelled to the suspect to stop where he was.The suspect then began to walk away faster and was again told by the officer to stop. At this time, the suspect began to run toward the rear of 295 Water St., which abuts the yard he was in.

Officer Donovan radioed to Officer Gaeta that he was in foot pursuit through the rear yards. The officer chased the suspect from yard to yard and over a fence to Water Street westbound. Officer Donovan caught up to the suspect in the driveway of The Bauer House (314 Water St.), and guided him to the ground where the suspect was handcuffed. At this time, Officers Gaeta and Dabilis took custody of the suspect while Officer Donovan returned to gather more information.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Donovan then further interviewed the witness who said that he was just coming home and was in his car using his phone before entering his residence. He said he was sitting in his car and observed the suspect walk up to a vehicle and start looking in the windows. The suspect could see that the vehicle was locked so he moved on and entered the driveway of the apartment complex and peered into cars there. The witness/caller then called the Quincy Police to report the suspicious behavior.

As he waited for the police to arrive, the caller watched the suspect in the parking area near vehicles but couldn't tell what he was doing. The caller said he thought the suspect was "on something." At this point, Officer Donovan brought the witness to the location of the suspect and asked if this was the same male who was at the vehicles. Upon seeing the male, the caller said, "That's absolutely him." A search of the suspect uncovered $2.58 in coins. There was also a bottle of cologne he stated belonged to him, as well as five hypodermic needles and two bottle caps.

The suspect, a 30-year-old Quincy resident, was transported to the station by Officer Dabilis, and was charged with breaking and entering to a motor vehicle in the nighttime for felony and knowingly resisting arrest.

CHIMNEY CLEANING SCAM IN QUINCY: A resident received a telephone call from a man claiming to be from a chimney cleaning service, stating that his company was in the resident's neighborhood and offering a full cleaning for only $69. He said that two workers will come out to do the work, with one on the roof and the second at the fireplace area. He said that they will show you a photo of the work that they did.

The resident's concern was that they knew his name and when he asked how they got his name; the caller said that chimney cleaning companies often close up and sell the names of their clients.

For more information about this practice, I called Boston Chimney and spoke to Lindsay, a manager, seeking her advice about the call. She said that no reputable company would "cold call" people to solicit their business. She said legitimate companies do not sell their client lists either. She thought the cleaning price was much too low and said that the introductory offer could be a prelude to photos (fabricated?) that they would show the homeowner. It would show damage that immediately needed to be repaired.

The other possibility would be that they would do the work and pressure you to pay up. Upon looking up this company's address, it showed that they originated in New York and now shows an address on School Street in Boston, above a parking garage. This address, a high rise, seems unusual for this type of company.

The caller told the resident that chimneys with oil heat should be cleaned yearly and gas should be done every two years. I spoke to a representative of the oil and gas heat field and he told me that wood burning chimneys need to be cleaned every year and for oil, rain will often clear the walls of the chimney.

For gas heat, he recommended every 4-5 years. It seems clear that this company, which begins with an "E", appears to be a scam. Keep in mind that companies like this often use multiple names. As always, do your homework as this resident did to prevent being scammed.

ISS Distributing Halloween Costumes To Children Served By Food Pantry

Organization Collecting New, Gently Used Costumes Until Oct. 17

On Saturday, Oct. 22nd, Interfaith Social Services will be distributing Halloween costumes to hundreds of local children served by their food pantry.

The organization reports that over 300 children have already asked if they could collect a costume this year. Interfaith is looking for the community's help in collecting new and gently used costumes for these kids.

"Our food pantry serves upwards of five-hundred children each month," said Interfaith's executive director Rick Doane. "Helping these kids and their families is paramount to our organization's mission. All parents know the joy that kids experience each October 31st. Our youngest clients, many of whom are living in some very difficult situations, deserve to experience that joy more than anyone else."

Interfaith Social Services operates one of the largest emergency food programs in Greater Boston. Their programs are a safety net for thousands of children and families from the South Shore who are struggling to make ends meet.

Anyone interested in donating should stop by Interfaith's offices with new and/or gently used Halloween costumes no later than Monday, Oct. 17th.

Interfaith Social Services is located at 105 Adams St. in Quincy. Business hours are Monday through Friday 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and Tuesday 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

For more information, or to make a monetary donation, visit www.InterfaithSocialServices.org.

Public Notice: Quincy College Announcement

Quincy College, Quincy, MA 02169, will undergo a comprehensive evaluation visit from November 6th to November 9th 2016, by a team representing the Commission on Institutions of Higher Education of the New England Association of School and Colleges.

The Commission on Institutions of Higher Education is one of the seven accrediting commissions in the United States that provide institutional accreditation on a regional basis. Accreditation is voluntary and applies to the institution as a whole. The Commission, which is recognized by the U.S. Department of Education, is the regional accrediting body for 242 colleges and universities and eleven overseas institutions.

Quincy College has been accredited by the Commission since 1980 and was last reviewed in Fall 2006 (October 29, 2006 to November 1, 2006). Its accreditation by the New England Association encompasses the entire institution.

For the past two years, Quincy College has been engaged in a process of self-study, addressing the Commission's Standards for Accreditation. An evaluation team will visit the institution to gather evidence that the self-study is thorough and accurate. The team will recommend to the Commission a continuing status for the institution; following a review process, the Commission itself will take the final action.

The public is invited to submit comments regarding the institution to:

Public Comments on Quincy College
Commission on Institutions of Higher Education
New England Association of Schools and Colleges
209 Burlington Road
Bedford, MA 01730-1433
Email: cihe@neasc.org

Public comments must address substantive matters related to the quality of the institution. The Commission cannot settle disputes between individuals, and institutions, whether those involve faculty, students, administrators, or members of other groups. Comments will not be treated as confidential and must include the name, address, and telephone number of the person providing the comments.

Public comments must be received by November 9th 2016. The Commission cannot guarantee that comments received after the due date will be considered.

Product Launch Expert To Speak At ENC

Product launch expert Kaitlyn Adams will be the featured speaker at the second presentation of Eastern Nazarene College's Professional Speaker Series, to be held Wednesday, Oct. 26 at 6 p.m. at 180 Old Colony Ave. in Quincy.

The presentation is free and open to the public.

A global product manager for Smith & Nephew, Adams will discuss the importance of U.S. companies building product launches that are receptive to global markets. She will also discuss her experience with global product launches in the medical device industry, and how she draws on her background in biomedical engineering to understand the science behind the products.

Sponsored by Eastern Nazarene College's Division of Adult and Graduate Studies, the Professional Speaker Series brings business experts to campus to share their insights with students, alumni, business and community leaders, and the general public.

"The Professional Speaker Series is a great opportunity to gain industry insight directly from an accomplished leader in the field," said Katherine Smith, assistant director for marketing and communications. "It's also a chance to network and make business connections with other professionals."

Registration is free. To register, visit www.enc.edu/adult-studies/professional-speaker-series.

NQ Girls Soccer Battles E. Bridgewater In 5-0 Loss

By BILL GRIFFIN

There are games when the final score does not accurately reflect the effort shown on the field.

Undefeated East Bridgewater opened up the match with three goals in the first half and rode a skilled, fast attack to a 5-0 non-league win over North Quincy Oct. 7 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The Red Raiders played hard and well from start to finish despite the margin of victory.

"They are very good. They can put the ball wherever they want, and they showed that today," said North assistant coach Bridget Coleman. "But I saw good things on defense and in the midfield area. Our passing was better. What I liked best is we were able to get everyone into the game, and we never gave up."

The Vikings (12-0) are excellent. They move the ball efficiently from defense through the midfield to the attack, and they know how to finish. They are physical and tough on 50-50 balls. Emily McCormack led the winners two goals while Sara Lafstrom, Katie Smith, and Danielle Griffen had singletons.

"They have a lot of weapons," said Coleman. "It was very physical. I liked the way we kept our cool and stood up to them. We took the high road with the way we played, but we didn't back down either."

North was especially tough on defense led by senior keeper Shannan Kennedy and fullback Mandy Hazelton. Forget the score. Kennedy was terrific. Kennedy, who holds the school record for shutouts with 29, made 15 saves, nine in the second half, and several of them were acrobatic efforts that only a top goalie can make.

"Shannan is mentally aware of everything that is happening on the field. She holds us together. She has great instincts and reflexes, but the most important thing is every player trusts her," said Coleman.

In the first half, Kennedy made two diving stops off two crosses which were labeled for the far corner. She stopped two clean breakaways. Twice she leaped high and deflected high floaters over and off the crossbar.

She was even better in the second half. Kennedy turned back three clean breaks. She had a kick save on a one-on-one showdown with the clear shooter. She made the play of the day when she timed her slide perfectly on a break by Kristen Smith to stuff the shot before it had a chance to elevate into the goal. It was great stuff.

"Against Pembroke, she stopped a penalty kick with an unbelievable save. I think she is the best goaltender in the league," said Coleman.

Hazelton anchored a fullback line which never wilted in the face of the Vikings' relentless attack. She used her strong leg to clear threats and create chances off free kicks. She headed away corner kicks. Hazelton rolled to the ground to tackle and take away the ball from attackers. She flourished in the physical play in front of the goal.

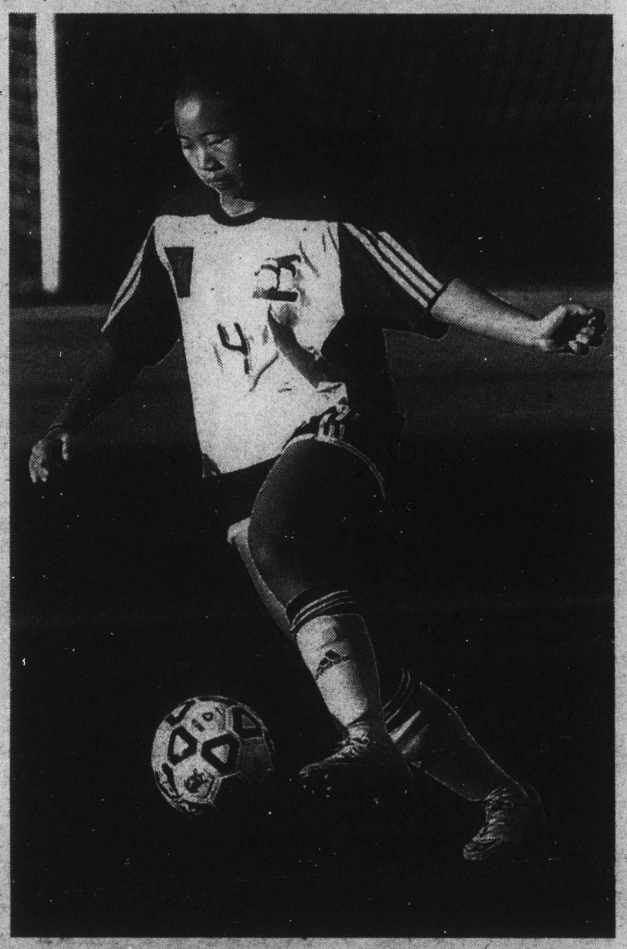
In the first half, Kennedy went high to deflect a shot which grazed the crossbar and then sat inches from the goal line in front of a wave of eager shooters. Hazelton quickly and calmly won the race and sent away the threat. She played every second of the match except for a brief pause due to concussion protocol after she took a hard shot in throat. One more thing. She did all this while playing with a broken arm.

"Mandy makes smart decisions. She knows when to dribble clear and send the ball away with a long kicks," said Coleman.

Nora McLaughlin, Kerin Coleman, and Ciara Viscione also played well on the fullback line.

"I thought we did a good job marking their shooters," said Coleman.

One of the most improved parts of North's play over the past two weeks has been its passing through the midfield. Junior Jill Hallisey distributed the ball well and moved her teammates from defense to offense. Senior Abby Koch battled for every 50-50 ball and did a good job possessing the ball to give the offense a chance to get started. Sophomore Samantha Smith also played well in the midfield.



SENIOR MIDFIELDER VIVIAN TRAN dribbles in the offensive zone for the North Quincy Red Raiders.

"Jill is strong and smart. She has good passing skills and moves the ball forward with passes right on the feet. Abby just never stops playing hard," said Coleman.

Junior Olivia Hussey and freshman Olivia Fitzpatrick gave North's offense a boost. In the first half, Hussey had a good run up the with wing and crossed the ball to Emily Butruccio for a testing shot on net. In the second half, Fitzpatrick used her speed and determination to force the ball deep into East Bridgewater territory.

"Olivia Hussey made a good play. She dribbled clear and made the cross at just the right moment. Olivia Fitzpatrick gave us a good lift in the second half," said Coleman.

North Quincy Boys Soccer Showing Improvement

By BILL GRIFFIN

It is a season for improvement and learning for North Quincy boys' soccer team. In the first half last week against Plymouth South, the Red Raiders saw a model of how well they can play the game when they share the ball.

For nearly 30 minutes, North controlled the match with a short, quick passing game which moved the ball smoothly through the midfield. Players gave up the ball, moved to an open spot to receive a return pass, and created an attack on the fullback line. The passes were sharp and crisp. North controlled the flow of play.

Plymouth South's Peter Duncan tuned the match around with two of his four goals before halftime and the Panthers posted a 5-0 win over North in a Patriot League match Oct. 6 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

"It's frustrating because we're still getting to know each other," said coach Rich Hanlon. "We lost eight starters from last year. We have periods when we play well like the first half tonight, but we got away from what we were doing well."

Go back to the passing. That is the model for success. Senior Stephen Cobble triggered much of the feel-good style of play with either long, clearing passes from the fullback line or short feeds from midfield, but everyone joined the party. Cobble worked a combo passing play with Abdel El Hashash and Nam Huynh which produced a good chance. Cobble sent Thein Ngo clear through midfield with another spot-on pass.

Devlin St. Marie, Aiden Ring, Ryan Fantin joined Cobble in working the ball from offense to defense. El Hashash rattled a drive from the corner off the near post. North had good chances. The defense had a chance to rest. It all begins with passing. When the Red Raiders pass the ball, they can be a good soccer team.

"That's when we are our best. The passing for most of the first half was very good," said Hanlon. "The problem is we get away from it. We get a little impatient, a little anxious. That comes with a team that hasn't played together for very long."

Cobble earned the No. 1 star of the match. It seemed like he was playing three positions at the same time. He was North's best defender. He is strong, he dominates the scoring area, and has a powerful leg for clearing shots. He moved to the middle where his passing, both long and short, was accurate. On the attack, he sent a booming free kick and a second drive from outside the penalty area which just missed connecting for a goal.

He is an athlete, and his skills are exceptional whether he shows them on the fullback line, in the midfield, or on the attack.

"There's no question that if the season ended today, he would be my league All Star," said Hanlon. "Stephen is a four-year starter. He is so much better this year that it's hard to believe. He works at his game. He plays soccer year-round and it shows on the field. He can play any position for us."

El Hashash also played an excellent game. His dribbling in the midfield baffled defenders and created open spaces for his teammates. He did more than advance the ball, he produced North's best offensive chances with strong drives to the net.

"Abdel is like Steven. He plays club soccer in the off-season. His dribbling skills are excellent, and he can do a lot with the ball to help us" said Hanlon.

Keeper Phillip Thalheim played another fine game for the Red Raiders. He was especially effective in the second half when he made nine saves against a Plymouth South offense which took control of the match. He went high to grab a corner kick. He made a diving kick-save similar to the one he made against Quincy. He dove fully-extended and turned aside a hard drive with both fists.

"I think he is one of the best goalies in the league at coming out 12 or 15 yards to challenge the shooter or beat the attacker to the ball," said Hanlon. "He can stop a threat before it gets started. That kick-save he made when he went to the ground was incredible."

Thalheim had no chance on any of the goals. Duncan is a fine player. He scored on everything from a breakaway to a rebound. Once Plymouth South opened up its offense, it changed the game. But that is not what North should take away from the match. The Raiders should remember how well the match flowed when their passing game was working and moving the ball.

"I have seen improvement, especially in the teamwork aspect of the game. We still have things to improve. It gets back to gaining experience playing together," said Hanlon.

North Quincy (0-8) is at Hingham today (Thursday) at 4 p.m.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

TOEING THE LINE

During an initial chiropractic evaluation, attention is paid to patients' gait, upright posture, and orientation of their feet. With this in mind, it is interesting to point out that about 20%-30% of the population is born with a foot trait known as "Morton's foot." Often also referred to as "Morton's toe," this term refers to a second toe that appears to be longer than the first toe, caused by a first metatarsal bone that is shorter than the second metatarsal. As a result, it can contribute to various musculoskeletal issues, as the weight normally carried by the ball of the foot at the base of the big toe shifts to the balls at the bases of the other toes.

There are amazingly 26 bones in the foot, with each and every one capable of causing pain! At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are seriously concerned with the education of our patients about health and the body's natural state. The next time a health problem strikes someone in your family, or you think you could benefit from a chiropractic check-up, think about the quality and expert care we provide. We invite you to call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. Our office is located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans.

P.S. Morton's foot/toe is also referred to as "Greek foot" because the ancient Greeks found the trait to be so aesthetically appealing that they incorporated it into paintings and sculptures, including Michelangelo's David.

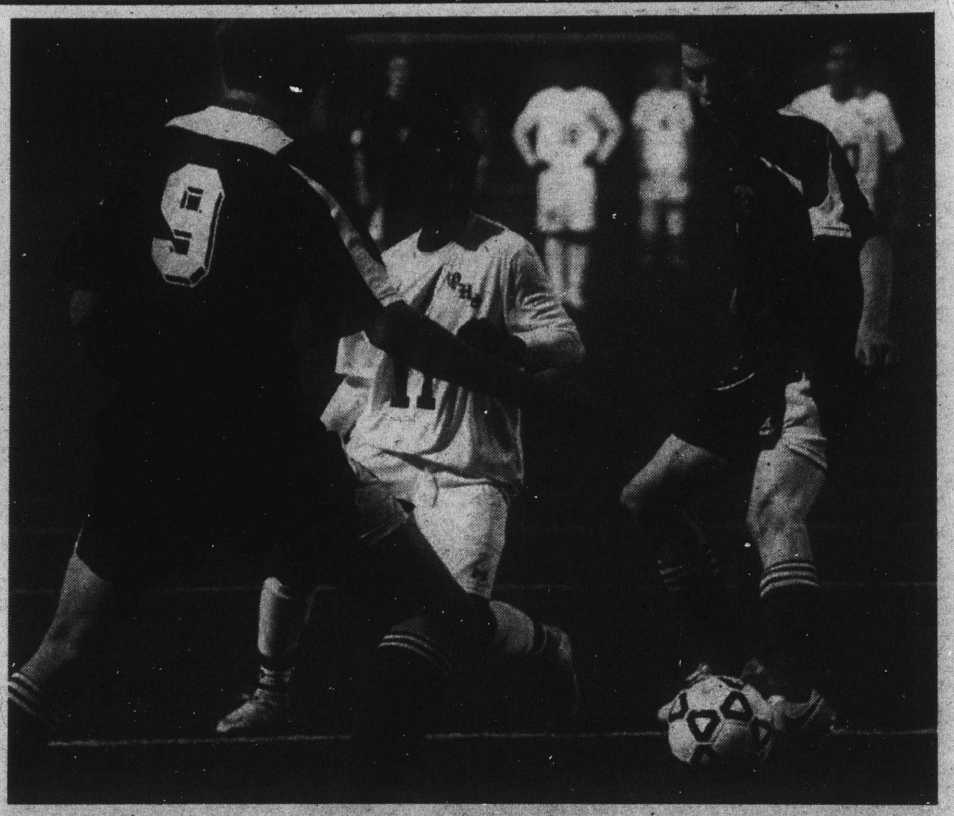
Quincy Blanks W-H, 5-0

Leandro Batista scored the first goal against Whitman-Hanson in the first minute of the Presidents' match against the Panthers Oct. 7 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Quincy went on to score three quick goals in the first 10 minutes of the game enroute to a 5-0 shutout win.



QUINCY'S CLAYTON RODRIGUES carries the ball upfield, splitting Whitman-Hanson's defense. Rodrigues scored the Presidents' second goal of the game five minutes in ending up as Quincy earned a solid 5-0 win over the Panthers Oct. 7 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. With the win Quincy improved to 4-3-3 on the season. Quincy Sun Photos/Larry Carchedi

SENIOR CAPTAIN Tristan McCormick scores on this shot in the first half. Quincy dominated the game with most of the play in the Whitman-Hanson end of the field.

QUINCY JUNIOR Kennedy Ramos battles for the ball with W-H defender Ian Duffy. Ramos scored one of the Presidents' five goals in a 5-0 win Oct. 7 over the Panthers.

Q-NQ Cross Country Bows To Plymouth South

Cross country meets are not always filled with drama at the dual meet level. Often teams come in and the results could be predicted on paper. The QNQ meet versus Plymouth South was NOT one of those meets.

Each school came in with top league runners and ever improving squads. Unfortunately, QNQ wound up on the losing side of both matches.

The girls race came with a lot of hype. QNQ boasted talented sophomore Abby Murphy, undefeated in four duals against perennial powers like Whitman-Hanson, Hingham and Pembroke. Plymouth South had Jillian Callahan, another sophomore who turned in some impressive track times last spring and had come off a summer of running camp. The two raced shoulder to shoulder for most of the grueling 2.5 mile Pageant Field course. It all came down to a 100-meter sprint in front of a crazed crowd of parents, teammates and middle schoolers from Central who had just finished their workout.

Callahan finished a stride ahead of Murphy. Devin Hiltunen and Kara Polsgrove came in 4th and 5th, and Olivia Palazzi finished 8th and 9th but the score was a one point loss 27-28 to the Panthers.

"We ran a very smart race but in the end someone was going to lose," said Coach Geoff Hennessy. "We just wound up on the wrong side of the ledger. Our average time per girl was better than theirs and the time gap from 1-5 was better than theirs. In a big meet we would finish ahead of them. It will be fun to see what happens as the season progresses. We're only halfway right now."

Murphy's time of 16:10 is the fifth fastest all time at Pageant and is the fastest by a Quincy High student. Indeed seven of the eight finishers ran a season or personal best.

The same was true in the boys race a 21-39 loss. QNQ's Jimmy Cannon and Plymouth's Drew Mahoney raced together wire-to-wire before Mahoney pulled away slightly over the last 400 meters breaking a 10-year old course record in 13:18. Cannon was 13:25, a time only beaten by Mike Mullaney back in 2014 as North Quincy's best time ever at Pageant.

Aidan Golden was 7th, Ryan Polsgrove was 8th, Kevin White was 10th. All ran lifetime bests at Pageant. Other finishers for QNQ were Brian O'Connell (16), Dakota Pendleton (18), Tyler Carey (19), Nick Ouellette (20), Braeden Kopp (25), Alex Ouellette (26), Ryan Mahoney (27), Eric Mei (28), Kevin Mortimer (29) and Ty Kehoe (30).

QUINCY TRACK CLUB is participating in the eight-race Brockton Kids series held bi-annually at DW Field Park. Sponsored by Brockton Community Schools, the program is run in the spring and fall and consists of eight Saturday morning road races along the 2.2 mile auto road around the reservior at the park. Directed since 1977 by Dave Gorman, over 100 youngsters run weekly. Quincy Track Club held its annual awards banquet Oct. 6 at Lombardo's of Randolph and the athletes all got new uniforms courtesy of College Hype Sports in Dorchester. Members of the Quincy Track Club shown here are (from left) Colin Geagan, Patrick Geagan, Blake Nelson, Charlie Cannon, Maria Cannon, Zoe Nelson, Alex Giaquinto and Alanna Fidalgo.

Quincy Youth Football Week 5 Scores, Highlights

Scores and highlights from Quincy Youth Football League Week 5 action:

Quincy Point Panthers vs. Milton Mustangs

VARSITY

Mustangs 0

The Panthers played in the last game of a triple header at Veterans' Memorial Stadium, Sunday Oct. 9. In the aftermath of Hurricane Matthew, when the rain never stopped, the Panthers improved to 2-3 with a 19-0 win over the Milton Mustangs. Early in the second, quarterback Michael Coote bulldozed into the end zone on a 2-yard TD run and the Panthers led at halftime 6-0.

The third quarter was scoreless. In the fourth quarter Coote found Jalen Roach for a 15-yard TD pass. London Donnee caught the point after and put the Panthers up 13-0. On the Panthers next offensive possession, Coote threw a 40-yard TD pass to Roche for his second TD of the game.

The Panthers defense caused six turnovers. Manny Maloof (2), Proudley Louis, Victoria Carvalho, Andrew Kabilian and Jaiden Remy had the fumble recoveries. Head Coach Noel DiBona said, "This was our first time everyone has been in uniform since game one, four weeks ago. We had our share of injuries but being healthy will be the key to our success down the road."

North Quincy Apaches vs. West Quincy Elks

VARSITY

APACHES 6

There were heavy downpours all day at Veterans Memorial Stadium, as the North Quincy Apaches and West Quincy Elks had a defensive battle. Elks DB Aby Lopes had a blocked Punt and Apache DB Jamal Maximillien had an interception in the first quarter.

Late in the second quarter, Elks DE Amarion Robinson recovered an Apache fumble on the 10-yard line. Three plays later, Elks QB Joe Brahimi ran for a 5-yard TD. Eoin Gormley kicked the two-point conversion, as the Elks led 8-0 at halftime.

The Apaches opened the second half with a 68-yard TD run by James Ward. The conversion kick failed and the Apaches trailed 8-6. Both defenses held each other scoreless throughout the rest of the game as the West Quincy Elks defeated the Apaches, 8-6 to improve to 4-1.

The Apaches (3-2) were led on both sides of the ball by Dillon Donahue, Maximillien, Ward, Connor Plante, Danny Scolaro, Matt Kelly, James Ward, Alex Demerit, Clayton Corley, Declan Geary and Colm Geary. The Elks (4-1) saw fine performances from Joe Brahimi Bobby Jaehnig (14 Tackles) Robinson, Billy Hibbard (5 tackles, 1 sack), Aby Lopes, Aidan Dyer, Danny Ly (4 tackles, 1 sack), Eoin Gormley and Malik Francis.

JUNIOR VARSITY

Apache DT Justin Neil recovered an Elks fumble on the opening drive. The Apaches capitalized with an 11-yard TD pass from QB J.C. Petrongolo to WR Ruben Parilla. Apache Keira Sleiman recovered an onside kick on the ensuing kickoff, but the Apaches failed to capitalize. The Elks took possession and RB Thomas Murray raced down the sideline on a 60-yard TD run. Elks QB Gianni Perea rushed for the conversion as the Elks took lead, 8-6. Murray scored again, on a 52-yard run, as the Elks led 14-6 at halftime.

Early on the second half, Elks RB, Murray scored his third TD of the day on a 55 yard run. Chase Morales added the conversion and the Elks led, 22-6. Morales added the Final score of the day on a 27 yard TD run, as the West Quincy Elks defeated the Apaches 28-6.

The Apaches (2-3) saw fine performances from Pat McDonald, JC Petrongolo, Billy MacDonald, Matt Craig, Grant Murphy, Keira Sleiman, Nicky Hughes and Aden Le. The Elks (4-1) were led by Thomas Murray, Dallas Hudgins, Samee Akhouzine, Patrick Berry, Ben Travers, Dyani Joyce, Devin Nellany, Ady, Lopes, Jordan Souza and Scott Ritz.

The Elks got on the scoreboard early as RB Ivan Yhomby ran for a 43-yard TD. On the next series, Elks DL Jordan Mohoney recovered a fumble. The Elks capitalized as QB Shane Wright scored on a 23-yard TD run. The Elks led 12-0 at halftime.

Early on the second half, Elks DL Enea Panariti forced a fumble on the goal line and Ben Hudach recovered the ball in the end zone for a TD. Late in the game, Elks QB Shane Wright hit Ben Hudach on a 5-yard TD Pass. Matt Nellany rushed for the conversion as the West Quincy Elks defeated the Apaches 26-0.

The Apaches saw fine performances from Max Gaudano, Kobe Ngyuyen, Olivia O'Driscoll, Noah Baker, Tommy Wirtz, Ronan Brown, Nick DePalma and Jack Greene. The Elks (3-2) were led by Ivan Yhomby, John Toland, Shane Wright, Dan Teixeira, Nellany, Ben Hudach, Dan Hudach, Enea Panatriti and Jordan Mahoney.

Houghs Neck Manets vs. Squantum Storm

VARSITY

STORM 0

Zac Luggelle ripped off a 45-yard TD run to cap the scoring for the Manets. Isaiah Steinberg and Ryan LaRoche scored the first two touchdowns. Agu Ugwu converted the extra point catching a screen pass over the middle from ISAIAH STEINBERG (right) on his feet followed by fellow Manet Ryan Larouche.

Campbell Tierney. Great defensive efforts by Jake Mutch, Kevin Gomez, Dana Gagne, and David Dennis. Special teams led by Walter Bardon who completed a successful on-side kick.

The Storm offense couldn't gain traction in the rain but played well on defense with big performances from Brendan and Liam Hines, DeAndre McPhail and Sean Feeney. It was another great day for running backs Sean Jackson and Devante McPhail. Unfortunately, miscues on the wet field stalled several drives. Both also contributed on numerous tackles.

JUNIOR VARSITY

STORM 6

Two touchdowns by Mike Cascarano, followed by touchdowns from Marcus Moore, Steven Gallant and Willie Ploof on a 50-yard run. Mason McDonough and Kennedy Santoro caught two point conversions. Also starring for the Manets on defense were Sam McGahan, Andrew Engren, Kyle Regan, Brendan Regan and Nate McMillen.

The Storm had great efforts from Elias and Connor Walsh on defense, combing for nearly a dozen tackles. Benjamin Walinjom stepped up to the JV level as an injury replacement this weekend at running back and scored the Storms lone touchdown. Danny Bellotti also stepped in at running back and performed well.

STORM 0

Mike Galligan, Chris Brady scored the touchdowns and Owen Desmond caught both two point conversions for the Manets. Solid defensive efforts by Gavin Regan, Leo Steinberg, Elijah DuBois and Jack Dunn. Goal line stand sealed the game mid way through fourth quarter.

Storm Freshmen standouts were Charlie Ambroult, Dominic Perry, Michael Phinney, Paulie Glynn and Michael "Soup" Campbell.

Flags For Veterans Island Decorated, Vets Day Observance Nov. 6

MORE THAN 50 volunteers helped decorate Flags for Veterans Island in Fort Square, School and Pleasant Streets, Quincy on Monday morning with 400 American flags. The group of volunteers included students from The Woodward School, Air Force Junior ROTC students from North Quincy High School, and members of the Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 294, Morrisette Legion Post that maintains the island. American flags on the island were donated in memory of deceased veterans – some who were killed during wartime – as well honor flags that recognize veterans who served and are still serving in our nation's Armed Forces. There are also 416 engraved bricks on the island - each representing a veteran. The bricks line the walkway to the island's main flag pole. The Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 294, will host its annual Veterans Day Observance Sunday, Nov. 6 at 1 p.m. at the island. The public is welcome to attend. Guest speaker will be Squadron 294 member Robert Bosworth, publisher of The Quincy Sun, and son of the late Henry W. Bosworth, Jr., a World War II Navy veteran. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

QPS Population Up, Open Enrollment Requests Down and the previous year there was a hike of 40 students. There was a decrease of 74 students in 2012-13.

"There have been ups and downs," DeCristofaro said. "It changes frequently."

School officials said they are cracking down on students who do live not live in the city that illegally enroll in Quincy's public schools.

Maura Papile, director of student support services, told the committee that residency checks are conducted on a regular basis.

So far this year, she said 200 checks have been conducted and a number of enrolled students have been found not living at their registered addresses.

"We have discharged 39 students who do not live in the city," she said, adding that 16 were not allowed to enroll because they could not prove residency.

According to the latest data, the kindergarten population is up by 52 students this fall.

The elementary level has grown by 77 students this year. Montclair School's enrollment has grown by 20, all in kindergarten; Parker is up by 27, 10 of the 27 in kindergarten; and Lincoln-Hancock has 29 more students this year.

At the middle school level, Broad Meadows had the biggest increase this year with 32 more students enrolled, mostly in grade six. Overall, the middle schools are down five students this year.

Enrollment at North Quincy High School dropped by 40 students this year while Quincy High's went up by 33. North Quincy has 1,165 students and Quincy High has 1,470.

The superintendent said overall class sizes remain "well within our guidelines."

"We're very proud for what we are offering for class sizes," DeCristofaro said.

Classes sizes at the elementary level average 19 or 20 students. Atherton Hough has several classes of 17 students and one with 13 and Squantum and Atherton Hough each have one class with 14.

At the higher end, Atherton Hough has two kindergarten classes of 24, Snug Harbor has one grade 3 with 24 and Lincoln-Hancock's four, grade 4 classes have 24 each.

At the middle school level, 94 percent of the classes have 24 or fewer students and more than half have 20 or fewer students per class. The only exceptions are Atlantic Middle with six classes of 26 students and two classes of 27 each; Broad Meadows has one class with 27 students and one with 28; and Central has one class of 26.

According to DeCristofaro, 88 percent of the high school classes have 25 or fewer students. A few exceptions are two classes at North Quincy High that has 11 classes with 29 students and three classes with 30. Quincy High has three classes with 28 and six with 29.

The superintendent said maintaining class sizes are vital to learning.

"(Reasonable) class sizes are optimum for student achievement," he said.

Over the past decade, Snug Harbor, Clifford Marshall, Montclair, Wollaston elementary schools and Sterling Middle have seen the largest gains in student population.

Clifford Marshall experienced the biggest spike with 115 more students, followed by Montclair with 89, Snug Harbor with78, Wollaston with 52, Atherton Hough with 44 and Merrymount with 40.

Sterling Middle's enrollment went up by 62 students over the past 10 years. Broad Meadows gained 57 and Central has an additional 45.

Atlantic and Point Webster middle schools experienced decreases in the past decade – 26 and six respectively.

The high school population has decreased each year over the past 10 years, from 2,927 in 2007 to 2,635 this year.

DeCristofaro said enrollment fluctuations are typical.

Register O'Donnell: Increased Lending in Norfolk County

O'Donnell added:

"While there is no question the local economy remains on solid footing, some of our neighbors continue to face economic challenges.

"The third quarter saw 83 foreclosure deeds recorded, a sobering 34 percent increase year over year. More encouraging was the reduction in the number of Notice to Foreclose Mortgage recordings, the first step in the foreclosure process. A total of 201 Notice to Foreclose Mortgage filings were recorded during the third quarter period compared to 238 for the third quarter 2015.

"While one foreclosure filing is one too many, hopefully this trend in reduced filings will continue," the Register said.

O'Donnell listed the ways the Registry of Deeds can help those facing a foreclosure.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds continues to partner with Quincy Community Action Programs at (617) 479-8181 x-376 and Neighbor Works Southern Mass at (508) 598-0950 to help anyone who has received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage from a lender. Another option is to call the Massachusetts Attorney General's HomeCorps program at (617) 573-5333.

"I would urge those facing issues paying a mortgage to avail themselves of these excellent programs," O'Donnell said.

On another consumer note, Homestead recordings were flat during the third quarter. A total of 3,710 Homesteads were recorded versus 3,700 during the same time period in 2015.

Reiterating the importance of filing a Homestead, O'Donnell said, "A Homestead recording provides for limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000. I encourage homeowners to continue to avail themselves of this important consumer protection tool."

In conclusion O'Donnell said:

"While the Norfolk County real estate sales figures were flat for the third quarter 2016, I am glad there was no significant drop- off. What was really encouraging were the solid numbers seen in lending activity. One note, however, the Federal Reserve is again considering raising interest rates before year's end. We will need to watch this carefully to see how it affects real estate activity."

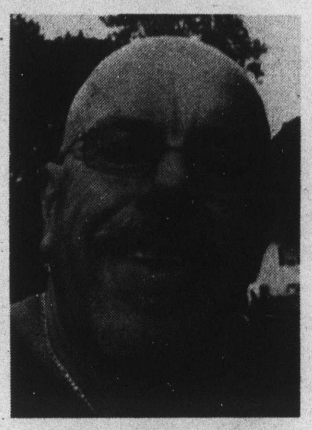
OBITUARIES

Peter Pepdjonovic, 63



PETER PEPDJONOVIC

Peter Pepdjonovic, age 63, of Braintree, formerly of Quincy, died peacefully, Friday, Oct. 7, at home, surrounded by his loving family.

Peter was born in Pistula, Montenegro, formerly Yugoslavia, on July 9, 1953, to the late Mark and Paulina (Marnikovic) Pepdjonovic. He was raised and educated there and immigrated to the United States in 1974.

He had lived in Braintree for two years, previously in Quincy for over thirty years. He had been employed as bartender in the restaurant industry for many years. Peter was devoted to his family, especially to his cherished wife and children.

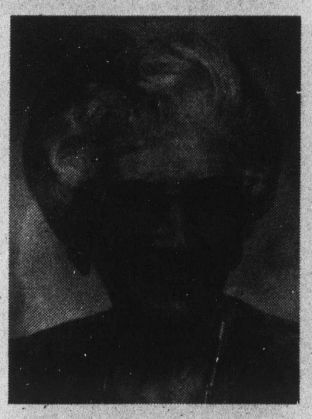
Beloved husband of Hana (Ivezaj) Pepdjonovic. Devoted father of Nick Pepdjonovic, Tony Pepdjonovic, and Elizabeth Pepdjonovic, all of Quincy. Loving brother of Luka Pepdjonovic and his wife Tonka of Weymouth, Zef Pepdjonovic and his wife Katrina of Montenegro, and Paul Pepdjonovic and his late wife Victoria of Montenegro. Peter is also survived by many nieces, nephews, cousins and friends.

Funeral from the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Avenue, Quincy on Thursday, Oct. 13, at 9 a.m. Funeral Mass in Saint John the Baptist Church, 44 School Street, Quincy at 10 o'clock. Relatives and friends are invited to attend. Visiting Hours at the funeral home Wednesday from 4 – 8 p.m. Interment Blue Hill Cemetery in Braintree.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Peter's memory may be made to the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society – MA Chapter, 9 Erie Drive, Natick, MA 01760

You are invited to visit www.thesweeneybrothers.com or call 617-472-6344.

Eleanor M. Evans, 102



ELEANOR M. EVANS

Eleanor M. Evans, 102, formerly of Cornish, NH, died on Oct. 3 at Valley Regional Hospital in Claremont, NH.

She was born in Boston on Jan. 8, 1914, the daughter of Jason O. and Lillian D. (Hartford) Gilson.

She was a graduate of Simmons College in Boston. She was a nurse throughout the Boston area.

She was the widow of Raymond A. Evans, whom she married on Feb. 22, 1940. She is survived by two daughters, Judith Evans Lewis of Chesapeake, VA and Barbara Evans Rotundo of San Jose, CA; a daughter-in-law, Loretta Evans of Cornish. She was predeceased by her son, Raymond Evans, in 2007.

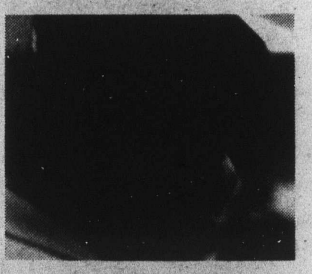
Maxwell A. Dora, 79



MAXWELL A. DORA

After a short but courageous battle, Maxwell A. Dora, 79, of Houghs Neck quietly left those who knew and loved him on Oct. 5.

He was the devoted husband of 42 years to the late Dorothy (Gamelin), and after her passing she remained the love of his life. They shared a wonderful life and he loved to talk of the many trips they had taken over their years together.

Mac was a painter by trade and loved to reminisce about his days painting the Mystic River Bridge and many others in Massachusetts. He was a proud retired member of the Painters Union Local 577 and loved to attend union events. He worked for Boston Housing retiring after 18 years of service where his claim to fame was the many times he portrayed Santa Claus, a role he loved and a memory he cherished.

In his later years he could be seen taking daily walks in his beloved neighborhood of Houghs Neck, where he always had a wave or a few words to say to all he passed on his journey.

He grew up in Charlestown, and was the eldest of 10 children born to the late Cecil & Agnes (Graham) Dora. Loving brother to William Dora of Nevada, John Dora of South Boston, Shirley Donovan of Wilmington, Liz Shepard of Florida, Nan Connolly of East Boston, Cindy Adams of Houghs Neck and the late Robert Dora, Judith Cromwell and Janet Fidler. He was the loving cousin of John Jackson and loved to spend time with him, his daughter Laura and her husband Colin. He shared his home, love and friendship with his sister Cindy her husband Glenn and their 3 children Jeremy, Nicole and Dylan who loved him dearly.

He was a loving uncle to many nieces and nephews. He had a few close friends whom he cherished dearly and loved talking with on a regular basis. He lived a long and colorful life and was loved by many. He will be missed.

Visiting Hours were Tuesday, Oct. 11, at the Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy Center, followed by a short Wake Service with the Rev. Felix Carrion, Pastor of Houghs Neck Congregational Church, officiating. Funeral and interment are private.

The family asks that donations in lieu of flowers be made in his memory to the American Cancer Society, 30 Speen St., Framingham, MA 01701.

Marie B. Sheahan, 96

Marie B. Sheahan, age 96, a lifelong Quincy resident, died peacefully, Tuesday, Oct. 4, at the Marina Bay Skilled Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Quincy.

Marie was born in Quincy on Oct. 14, 1919, to the late Marie A. (Magee) and George M. Sheahan, M.D. She was raised and educated in Quincy and was a graduate of Boston University. Marie was a retired schoolteacher having worked for the Abington and Quincy Public School Departments.

Following her retirement, she continued as a substitute teacher in Quincy for many years. She was a member of the Quincy Retired Teachers Association.

As a young woman, after World War II, Marie worked with the U.S. Army teaching American dependents in Europe. Marie was an active supporter and former board member of the Quincy Historical Society for many years.

She was the last of four siblings and was pre-deceased by Joan S. Schwab, George M. Sheahan, Jr. and Joseph M. Sheahan. She was niece of the late Henry Beston and is survived by many cousins.

Funeral was from the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy, on Saturday, Oct. 8, followed by a funeral service in the Holy Trinity Parish at the Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, 227 Sea St., Quincy.

Interment Mount Wollaston Cemetery in Quincy.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Marie's memory may be made to Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams Street, Quincy, MA 02169.

You are invited to visit www.thesweeneybrothers.com or call 617-472-6344.

Richard Bosworth, 90

Richard Bosworth, age 90, of Weymouth, formerly of Quincy, passed away on Oct. 9, 2016 peacefully surrounded by his loving family.

Dick was born in Boston then raised and educated in Quincy. In 1943, Dick enlisted in the Navy and served with distinction as a combat veteran in World War II. In 1950, Dick re-enlisted in the Navy and again saw combat in the Korean War.

He met his wife, Irene Manupelli (Frongillo), and soon got married and settled in Weymouth where they resided for the last 35 years.

Dick worked for The Patriot Ledger for 35 years, and relished his retirement for many years thereafter. He enjoyed the time he spent with his family, especially the annual vacations he took with his three children. Dick was a passionate gardener, and loved puzzles. He also liked bus trips, and accompanying his wife Irene to the Whipple Senior Center. He will be remembered for his big heart, and is described by his family as a man of integrity and honor.

Dick is survived by his beloved wife of 34 years Irene Bosworth (Frongillo). He is the loving father of Tracy Bosworth-Downey and her husband Lloyd of Charleston, ME, Richard Bosworth Jr. and his wife Mary of Anchorage, AK, and Laurie Bosworth of Golden, IL; step-father to Linda Hanover, Elaine Colonna, and Steven Manupelli, and devoted grandfather of Kevin, Kristen, Robyn, Melanie, Shane, Cameron, Ally, Dan, and Chris. Dick is also survived by many loving nieces, nephews, and great-grandchildren.

Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to the visiting hours for Dick on Thursday, Oct. 13, 2016 from 5-8 p.m. in the C.C. Shepherd Funeral Home located at 134 Pleasant St. (Columbian Sq.) S. Weymouth, MA.

Relatives and friends will gather Friday at the Old South Union Congregational Church, located at 25 Columbian St., Weymouth, for a Funeral Service which will begin promptly at 11 a.m. Internment will be at the MA National Cemetery located in Bourne at 1:45 p.m.

Donations in memory of Dick may be made to the Pat Roche Hospice House located at 86 Turkey Hill Ln., Hingham, MA 02043.

Ralph H. Post, 86

Ralph H. Post, age 86, of Quincy, died peacefully, Thursday, Oct. 6, at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth, surrounded by his loving family.

Ralph was born in Quincy on July 4, 1930, to the late Elmer E. and Celia (Wiley) Post. He was raised and educated in Quincy and was proud to be a lifelong Quincy resident.

He was co-owner, with his late twin brother Raymond, of the former Twin Window Cleaning Company, Inc. of Quincy. They founded their business in 1957 and were in operation for forty-nine years before retiring in 2006.

He was former member of the Grange and the Montclair Men's Club. Ralph was an automobile enthusiast and enjoyed spending time working and driving his late father's 1939 Chevrolet Master Deluxe. He was devoted to his family and especially to his three cherished grandchildren.

Beloved husband for sixty-five years of Irene (Johnson) Post. Devoted father of Glen A. Post and his wife Deborah of Weymouth. Loving grandfather of Erik, Megan and Molly Post. One of nine siblings, he was brother of Peter D. Post of OK and pre-deceased by Gertrude Goodrich, Arthur Post, Lawrence W. Post, Richard E. Post, Hazel Taylor, Louise Conway and his twin, Raymond H. Post. Ralph is also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Funeral Services were conducted at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Avenue, Quincy on Wednesday, Oct. 12. at 10 a.m. Visiting hours were Tuesday.

Interment Blue Hill Cemetery in Braintree.

You are invited to visit www.thesweeneybrothers.com or call 617-472-6344.

Susan K. Columbus, 68

Susan Kathleen (Lahive) Columbus, 68, of Manchester, NH, died Oct. 5 after a period of declining health.

Born in Quincy on July 7, 1948, she was the daughter of Paul and Rose (Foster) Lahive. She graduated from North Quincy High School class of 1966 and earned a degree in retail design from Lasalle College in Newton.

Before retirement, Susan had worked for the Quincy Public School System as a bus driver for over 30 years.

Susan enjoyed decorating, reading a good mystery and following the New England Patriots. She will be remembered as a loving mother, grandmother, sister and friend who will be greatly missed.

Family members include her daughters, Amy Signore and husband Nick of Austin, TX, Michelle Leonard and husband Michael of Manchester; her son, Jonathan Columbus and wife Suzannah of Bridgewater, MA; her grandchildren, Elijah, Alex, and Tessa Signore, Makena and Teddy Columbus, Jake, Ryan, Gabriella and Sophia

Leonard; her siblings, Patty Kearns, Jimmy Lahive and Karen Lahive. Susan also leaves behind many nieces and nephews who she loved dearly.

Visiting hours at Lambert Funeral Home & Crematory, 1799 Elm St., corner of North St, Manchester, were Sunday, Oct. 9, followed by a brief memorial service in the funeral home chapel.

Donations may be made in her memory to the Make-A-Wish Foundation, 814 Elm St., Suite 300, Manchester, NH 03101.

Seaside Social Club Meets Oct. 18

The Seaside Social Club will meet Tuesday, Oct. 18 in Fellowship Hall of the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave.

The business meeting will begin at 6:30 p.m. and the program will begin at 7 p.m. The program this month will be Kerry Byrne who will speak on dining and hospitality in Quincy Center.

Byrne is a life-long Quincy resident who was raised in Adams Shore and now resides in Wollaston. He's the long-time food and drink writer for the Boston Herald and various national magazines, the founder of FootballNation.com and a frequent guest on sports radio and TV programs here in Boston and around the country. He launched his consulting company, KJB Trending Hospitality, in 2016 and his clients today include the City of Quincy, where he's charged with developing and promoting the city's restaurant community to media outlets here in New England and around the country. The program is open to the public.

Refreshments will be served by Betty Baldwin and Carol Hallett.

A raffle will be drawn to benefit the MAC Student Fund.

Quincy Point Congregational Collecting Coats for CoatBoston

The Quincy Point Congregational Church Missions Committee has a lot of information to share this October. For the month of October the church will be collecting coats for the City Mission Society's CoatBoston. CMS's goal this year is to distribute over 3,000 coats to school children this year. To donate bring in a new coat any Sunday this October to add to this operation to help keep children warm. Don't forget to use your coupons or credit card points.

The church also collects non-perishable food items every month for Interfaith Social Services in Quincy. The donations are due to the church the third Sunday of every month for delivery to ISS.

The Missions Committee announces the "Just Peace Players" will perform at the church on Sunday, Oct. 23rd starting at 10 a.m. worship. Their performance is, "Women of the Greatest Generation: Stories of Faith, Hope, Love and Courage." Everyone from the community is invited to this event where you can hear the amazing stories of women who lived through World War II.

Saturday, Oct. 22nd from 6 to 8:30 p.m. in the upstairs fellowship lounge the Christian Education Committee is hosting a Halloween Party. All are invited. Wear a costume, enjoy fun and games and watch a special Halloween movie. The Halloween party is a free event but if you are inclined, preceding the party, the St. Joseph's Holy Name Society is also hosting a pasta supper in the QPCC Social Hall after the 4 p.m. Mass at St. Joe's.

Tickets for supper: $6 per person (Maximum $20 per family).

Council Votes 7-1 Opposing Charter School Referendum

ing the cap on them, which he said would be chaotic.

"This is not simply an issue of whether one believes in charter schools or is opposed to charter schools," Finn said. "This is really about a very bad, chaotic choice in terms of lifting a cap that takes away any type of local or municipal control that kind of just allows them to expand over time without any regulation."

City Council President Kirsten Hughes opposed the resolution. She said she supports charter schools and lifting the cap on them in the state, saying they provide an option for inner city students and do not drain local school systems' budgets.

"Charter schools are public schools," Hughes said. "Since education dollars follow students and not the school, charters don't drain from public schools, districts are reimbursed when kids attend charters, and charters again are public schools.

"Raising the cap in inner city areas where children need education – they need good education and need another option – is an important option and an important responsibility that we have as a commonwealth to the children of the commonwealth."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci did not vote on the resolution.

Prior to the vote of the full council, the body's education committee met to review the resolution. During that meeting, councillors heard from Quincy Education Association President Allison Cox and Nick Puleo, the director of government relations for the Massachusetts Teachers Association. Both spoke against raising the cap on charter schools.

The School Committee in September had approved a resolution opposing Question 2 in a unanimous vote.

RESPONDENT
Incapacitated Person/ Protected Person

To the named Respondent and all other interested persons, a petition has been filed by Department of Mental Health of Taunton, MA in the above captioned matter requesting that the court: Accept the Resignation of the Guardian.

The petition asks the court to make a determination that the Guardian and/or Conservator should be allowed to resign; or should be removed for good cause; or that the Guardianship and/or Conservatorship is no longer necessary and therefore should be terminated. The original petition is on file with the court.

You have the right to object to this proceeding. If you wish to do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance at this court on or before 10:00 A.M. on the return date of 11/02/2016. This day is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline date by which you have to file the written appearance if you object to the petition. If you fail to file the written appearance by the return date, action may be taken in this matter without further notice to you. In addition to filing the written appearance, you or your attorney must file a written affidavit stating the specific facts and grounds of your objection within 30 days after the return date.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The outcome of this proceeding may limit or completely take away the above-named person's right to make decisions about personal affairs or financial affairs or both. The above-named person has the right to ask for a lawyer. Anyone may make this request on behalf of the above-named person. If the above-named person cannot afford a lawyer, one may be appointed at State expense.

Prayer to The Blessed Virgin
(Never Known to Fail)

O, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendour of Heaven. Blessed mother of the son of God, Immaculate Virgin assist me in this necessity, O Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my Mother. O Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. O, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3 times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (3 times). Thank you for your mercy to me and mine. Amen. This prayer must be said for three days and after that the request will be granted. The prayer must be published. M.T. 10/13

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Mars, your ruling planet, begins a journey that will open up a growing number of possibilities. Put that surging Arian energy to good use and explore it to your heart's content.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This is the time to prepare for a career move coming up next month. Update your resume. Get those proposals in shape. And don't forget to buff up that Bovine self-confidence.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your Gemini instincts will guide you to the right people who might be able to help you get over that career impasse that has been holding you back. Expect to make changes.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You're getting closer, but you still have a ways to go before reaching your goals. Continue to stay focused, no matter how difficult it can be for the easily distracted Moon Child.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your Leonine pride might be keeping you from getting to the source of a disturbing situation. Don't be shy about asking questions. Remember: Information is power.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's a good time to shake up your tidy little world by doing something spontaneous, like taking an unplanned trip or going on a mad shopping spree.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) This is a good week to get advice on your plans. But don't act on them until you feel sure that you've been told everything you need to know to support your move.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Be careful. You might be probing just a little too deeply into a situation that you find singularly suspicious. The facts you seek will begin to emerge at a later time.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good week to make new friends and to look for new career challenges. But first, get all those unfinished tasks wrapped up and out of the way.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Relationships need a fresh infusion of tender, loving care. Avoid potential problems down the line. Stay close to loved ones as the month draws to a close.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Aspects favor relationships, whether platonic, professional or personal. On another note: Be a mite more thrifty. You might need some extra money very soon.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) This is the absolute right time to let those often-hidden talents shine their brightest. You'll impress some very important people with what you can do.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are impelled by a need to find truth, no matter how elusive. You would make a wonderful research scientist or an intrepid detective.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

MEMORIALS HIGHLIGHTED in a new self-guided tour pamphlet of Mount Wollaston Cemetery by City Historian Tom Galvin includes (from left) Quincy Police Chief Alfred Goodhue, Medal of Honor recipient Ralph Talbot and Quincy Mayor John Miller. Goodhue was a Quincy police officer for 28 years including six as chief. He was a beloved law enforcement officer who died while serving as chief. Talbot, who was killed during World War I, is the only Medal of Honor recipient buried at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Mayor Miller was elected in 1914 and died in office nine months later at age 60.

za Susan Quincy, daughter of the "Great Mayor" and noted diarist of the Quincy family.

"They were the main families I wanted to focus on. The rest of it I had to break down into who I thought the audience would be. I couldn't get away from granite because that's important part of the cemetery.

"I looked at veterans – they're a big part of the cemetery and the city's history. We put 8,000 flags on the graves of veterans here every year. Politicians – there are 17 mayors buried at Mount Wollaston Cemetery and I had to pick a few and that wasn't easy. I took some well-known (James McIntyre, Charles Ross, Thomas Burgin) and some not so well-known (John Miller). They are worth looking at."

Galvin also included some business leaders including the head of Boston Gear Works, where he retired as an executive vice president 17 years ago, and John R. Graham, a big contributor to the Quincy boot and shoe making industry in the 19th century. His boots were perhaps the best known, well crafted in the country – they were sought out by everyone. Graham also founded the electric trolley system in Quincy, too.

Referring to his research, Galvin said, "I had to research hundreds of people. What this all boils down to is I wanted to pick some monuments that are interesting. You get taphophiles – cemetery enthusiasts – and they want to see the artwork of the monuments – and the Quincy history.

"There's 150 years of Quincy history in that cemetery. I call it an outdoor museum. Every one of those stones is a story."

While the grave stones often show years of birth and death, Galvin says his research and descriptions are all about the dash in between those two dates.

"The dash – that's were the story is. In order to talk about people you have to go investigate what that dash is. You might know that person was a mayor but what about him? What else did he do? Years ago, mayors served only one year and were mainly a figure head with 28 city councillors.

"I did a ton of research. It's not so much who's in there it's who isn't in there. I discarded dozens of people for whatever reason – very subjective of course – and I didn't ask for any outside opinion. In some cases I'm very skimpy on a person's bio. For example, John Quincy Adams II. I don't really say very much about him. I talk about him being the last resident of the family farm."

Galvin has been reluctant to have his walking tours videotaped. He sees the pamphlet as a way to perpetuate the information he has acquired through the years.

"This is a gift to the citizens of Quincy," a fourth generation Quincy resident and retired Boston Gear Works vice president says. "I'm a Rotarian and Rotary's motto is 'service above self.' It's giving back and serving the community.

"That's why I do my cemetery tours, too. People ask me if I get paid to do the tours and I tell them I wouldn't take five cents to do them. That's not why you do it.

"You do it to contribute.

"The most important thing, in my mind, is to get people interested in Quincy history."

Some 10,000 pamphlets have been produced. They are available at the James R. McIntyre Government Center (Old City Hall) museum, Quincy Chamber of Commerce, Adams National Park Visitor Center, Adams Crypt (United First Parish Church) and The Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Galvin hopes his pamphlet leaves two impressions with folks who read it and use it.

"I think the pamphlet is two things. It's an introduction to the cemetery for those who don't really know about it and it's a very brief historical record of some important things in Quincy. Mount Wollaston Cemetery has a 150-year history. It's an outdoor museum and if you don't know what the dashes are what is it?"

He calls Mount Wollaaston Cemetery – bordered by Southern Artery, Sea Street, Samoset Avenue and Merrymount Road – perhaps the most visible on the South Shore.

"Over 50,000 cars a day go by there. It's a huge cemetery – almost 52 acres. And it has a great history that dates back to colonial times.

"If you're interested in history and people should be I'd like to see more people interested in it."

OTHER MEMORIALS FEATURED in Tom Galvin's new self-guided tour pamphlet of Mount Wollaston Cemetery include monuments for English sea captain Eugene N. Hultman (top) and Theophilus King – longtime president and chairman of the Granite Trust Bank.

JIMMY CANNON heads to the finish line in record time in the Quincy-North Quincy cross country meet against Plymouth North Oct. 11th at Pageant Field. Cannon, a North Quincy High School senior captain, crossed the line at 13:21 to set a new NQ boys' record eclipsing Mike Mullaney's mark by one second. Plymouth North's Nick McNamee finished first in the boys race setting a new overall course record in 13:04. Cannon's time is the fourth fastest ever on the hilly layout. Early Voting Begins Monday

Voters Can Cast Ballots In Nov. 8th Election Starting Oct. 24 Through Nov. 4 At City Hall

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Vote early - but not often.

That's the message from Quincy election officials as voters can begin to cast ballots in this fall's state election as early as next Monday.

Early voting in Quincy, as well as municipalities throughout the state, will commence Monday, Oct. 24 and continue for two weeks through Friday, Nov. 4. The early voting period has been mandated by the federal government throughout the country in an effort to give voters more opportunity to cast their ballots than just on election Day Tuesday, Nov. 8th.

COMPOSITE ★ BALLOT ★ Pages 10-12

Early voting is different than absentee voting. Absentee voting is generally reserved for voters who will not be in Quincy on Election Day. Early voting provides a longer period of time for voters to cast their ballots and avoid potentially long times at the polling precincts the day of the election.

In Quincy, early voting will take place in the atrium of the James R. McIntyre Government Center (old City Hall), 1305 Hancock

New Zoning Rules Proposed At 3 T Stations

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch has proposed new zoning rules for three of the city's four MBTA stations to encourage mixed-use, transit-oriented developments on site.

Koch's proposal to create the three transit-oriented districts was introduced at Monday's meeting of the City Council. If approved, the North Quincy, Wollaston and Quincy Adams stations would be rezoned into the districts. The Quincy Center station would not be rezoned. It is, however, already in one of the special zoning districts for Quincy Center.

The transit-oriented districts would allow for taller buildings at the stations with

225 New Affordable Housing Units In Pipeline

By SCOTT JACKSON

Some 225 new affordable housing units are under construction or going through the permitting process presently and will be available by the year 2018.

Robert Muollo, the housing program manager for the Planning Department, discussed the new affordable units coming to the city during Monday's City Council meeting. Muollo presented councillors with a new five-year housing production plan, which the council

Ceremony To Mark John Adams' Birthday

Historian, Author David McCullough Expected To Attend

By SCOTT JACKSON

A wreath-laying ceremony to mark the 281st birthday anniversary of President John Adams will be held at noon on Friday, Oct. 28, in the United First Parish Church in Quincy Center.

Author and historian David McCullough is expected to be in attendance for the wreath laying, though it is unknown whether he will speak during the ceremony. McCullough's 2001 biography of the second president, entitled "John Adams," won the author his second Pulitzer Prize and was later adapted into an Emmy- and Golden Globe-winning HBO miniseries.

This year's celebration of Adams will begin with a procession of the wreath from the Old House at Peace field, part of the Adams National Historical Park at 135 Adams St., to the church at 1306 Hancock Street. The procession from Peace field will begin at 11:30 a.m.

Bob Damon, the director of the history and visitor program at the United First Parish Church, said speakers at this year's ceremony will focus on commemorations and why we chose to commemorate events.

The theme was chosen because 2016 includes several key anniversaries. President Lyndon B. Johnson began the tradition of laying wreaths at the graves of late presidents 50 years ago in 1966 (though Damon noted the first such ceremony at the church was in 1967), and the church started offer-

Early Voting For State Election Begins Monday

St. A short corridor connects the atrium to the glass annex building of City Hall.

Early voting hours at the old City Hall atrium will be available Monday through Friday, Oct. 24 through Nov. 4. Hours are Monday and Wednesday from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Tuesday, Thursday and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Quincy has also established extended early voting hours on Saturday, Oct. 29 from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at North Quincy High School.

To assist voters who want to vote early at the Old City Hall atrium, walkways have been paved from the City Hall parking area at the Quincy Center MBTA station to the glass City Hall annex. There will be a number of parking spaces designated for early voters marked with signs.

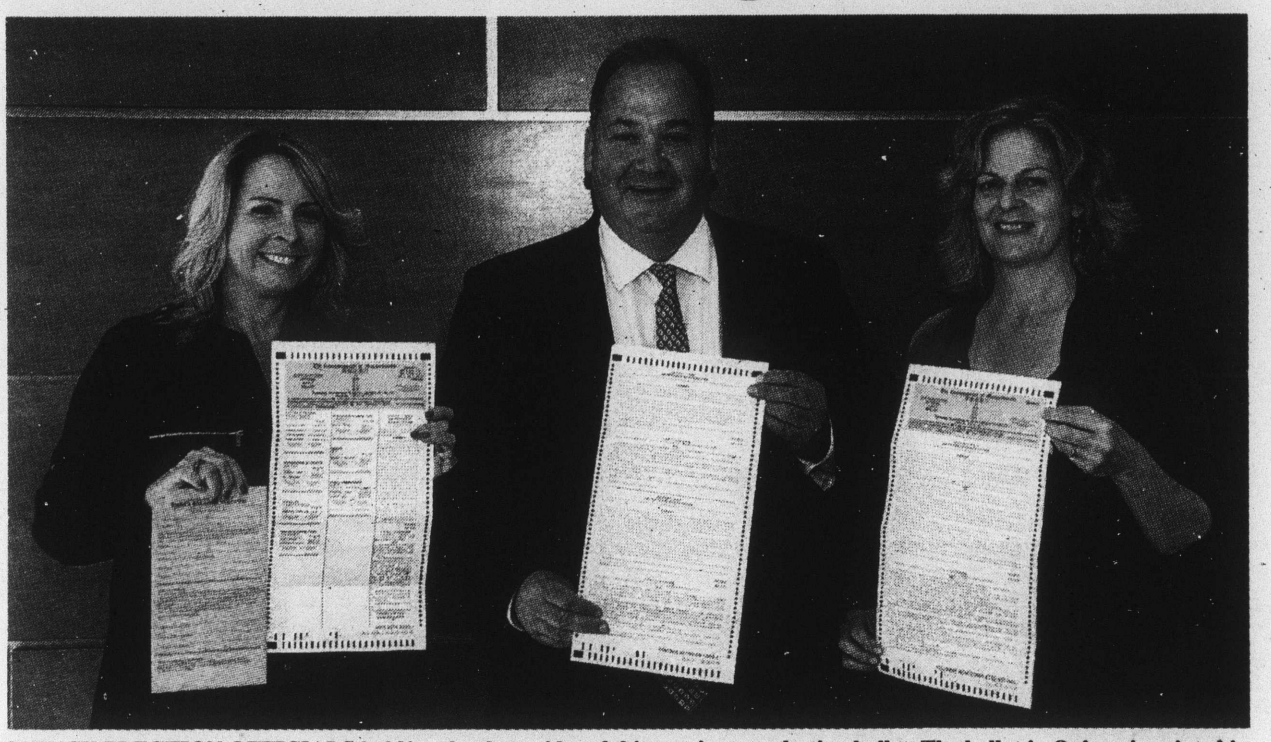
There will also be handicapped spaces available for early voters in the rear of the glass annex building.

City Clerk Nicole Crispo is predicting a city-wide turnout of approximately 72 percent or some 41,760 voters for the Nov. 8th election that is headlined by the Donald Trump-Hillary Clinton race for President. Of that 72 percent figure, she sees potentially 10 percent of the city's electorate – or 5,800 voters – casting ballots during early voting.

"I'm going to encourage people to take advantage of early voting. We will be placing sandwich-board signs at some of the major intersections reminding citizens that early voting is available Oct. 24 through Nov. 4," Crispo said Monday afternoon. "If they don't want to stand in line Tuesday, Nov. 8th to vote, then I would strongly encourage local voters to take advantage of early voting."

Casting a ballot this year could take considerably more time than in the past. In Quincy the bilingual ballot consists of two cards – and three separate sides – because it is printed in English and Chinese. Besides voting for President, there are other choices to make including contested races for congressman and state senator. There are also four ballot questions appearing on the ballot.

The front side of Card 1 lists the candidates and the office they are seeking as well as Question 1 which would allow the Gaming Commission to issue an additional slots license.



QUINCY ELECTION OFFICIALS hold up the three sides of this year's state election ballot. The ballot in Quincy is printed in both English and Chinese and has three sides – two on Card 1 and one on Card 2. City Clerk Nicole Crispo (left) holds the front side of Card 1 that lists candidates running for various offices including President as well as Question 1 (more slots licenses). Assistant City Clerk Joseph Newton holds the back side of Card 1 that lists Questions 2 (more charter schools) and Question 3 (animal containment). Christine Chaudhary (right), administrative assistant, Election Department, holds the front side of Card 2 which lists Question 4 (legalizing marijuana for recreational use age 21 and over). The back side of Card 2 is blank. Crispo is also holding an affirmation envelope that early voters will fill out after they cast their ballot. Early voting begins Monday, Oct. 24 and continues through Nov. 4 at a polling precinct set up in the atrium of the James R. McIntyre Government Center (Old City Hall), 1305 Hancock St. Early voting will also take place Saturday, Oct. 29 at North Quincy High School.

The back side of Card 1 lists Questions 2 and 3 in English and Chinese.

Question 2 would authorize the approval of up to 12 new charter schools or enrollment expansion in existing charter schools by the state Board of Elementary and Secondary Education per year.

Question 3 would prohibit certain methods of farm animal containment.

The front side of Card 2 lists only Question 4 in English and Chinese. Question 4 would legalize recreational marijuana for individuals at least 21 years old. There are no races or questions on the back side of Card 2.

Summaries of the four ballot measures are contained in a voter's guide produced by the Massachusetts Secretary of State's office. The guides have been mailed to every household in the Bay State.

City Seeks To Amend Downtown Legislation

Koch Petition Referred To Ordinance Committee

By SCOTT JACKSON

Special state legislation adopted in 2011 to help bolster the redevelopment of Quincy Center needs to be corrected to accommodate changes in the plan since then, according to city officials.

Mayor Thomas Koch introduced a home rule petition to the City Council Monday that seeks a series of edits to the 2011 special act, known as the Act Facilitating Urban Redevelopment in the City of Quincy.

The home rule petition was referred to the council's ordinance committee, which will meet Nov. 10.

The amendments to the 2011 act are necessary because it was written to reflect the city's plan at the time, which included a single master developer – StreetWorks – responsible for the entirety of the Quincy Center project. The new plan for the downtown includes multiple developers, and the proposed changes to the act are intended to reflect that.

"The key here in making these proposed changes is that they are technical corrections to an existing law, as opposed to making new law," William Geary, Koch's special counsel for downtown redevelopment, said at Monday's meeting.

"It's intended to endow the city with the tools that were previously granted to it, and unfortunately we were unable to use those tools once the previous designated master developer was terminated."

Councillor Joseph Finn said Jim Shea, the attorney retained by the council for consultation on downtown matters, assisted with the proposed changed to the 2011 law.

MORE GLITTER, MORE GOLD

Fourteen karat may be the accepted standard in gold jewelry in this country, but many U.S. consumers are taking their cues from abroad and moving up to the luxury standard of higher-karat gold. Many of the current gold designers work solely in 18-, 22-, or 24-karat gold, attesting to its richer hue. With its higher gold content, high-karat gold possesses a rich color that harks back to Etruscan and Byzantine gold pieces. With this in mind, those who love gold jewelry view 22- and 24-karat gold as the true classic gold. It is the gold that was used when people first began to adorn themselves with the beautiful metal. High-karat gold looks warmer against the skin and is simply more pure.

Gold is a soft metal so other metals have to be added to strengthen it before it can be made into jewelry. For example, rose gold is 75% gold and 25% copper. It's the copper that produces the rose color. To learn more, please call 617-773-3636, or stop by our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. The John Adams Statue Campaign

Next year the third statue for second President John Adams will be dedicated in Quincy.

The new Adams statue – along with one for Declaration of Independence first signer John Hancock, will be unveiled at the new "Hancock-Adams Green" public park being built near City Hall, United First Parish Church and Hancock Cemetery.

There are two other John Adams statues located in Quincy: one on the Burgin Parkway and the other outside City Hall. The latter one – commissioned by the Quincy Partnership – will be relocated in the new park along with its companion statue depicting Abigail Adams and a young John Quincy now standing across the street next to the historic "Church of the Presidents."

Quincy takes great pride in its distinction as the birthplace of father-son Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams.

Next Friday, a wreath-laying ceremony marking John Adams' 281st birthday anniversary – and the 50th anniversary of the Presidential wreath tradition – will be held at United First Parish Church. Among those expected to attend is author and historian David McCullough. McCullough's biography "John Adams" won him his second Pulitzer Prize, spawned an HBO mini-series and sparked meteoric interest in the Second President and his family as well as tourism here.

It's hard to think of a time when honoring someone like John Adams with a statue was not a slam-dunk in this city.

But it happened – some 56 years ago.

In 1960, a group of Quincy High School students came together to mount a public campaign for a statue for John Adams here. At that time, there was no such monument for Adams.

DUNLEAVY

"He was our second President and we thought that was kind of odd that there wasn't a statue for him," recalls Stephen Dunleavy, one of the QHS students who spearheaded the drive back then. "We kept talking about it for a month or two and as more kids talked about it we thought we should get a campaign together and convince everyone that there would be a statue of John Adams in Quincy. Later we expanded it to both Presidents," he explained.

They began to get the word out about their goal and to hopefully garner public support for the statue. One of their ardent supporters and key advocates turned out to be Henry Bosworth, who years later would establish this newspaper in 1968.

"We started writing letters to some area newspapers including the Boston Traveler. The Traveler had a South Shore bureau headed by Henry Bosworth. He also wrote a daily column for the Traveler. The Traveler was an afternoon newspaper that competed directly with The Ledger. The Globe really didn't have anyone covering the South Shore," Dunleavy says.

"At the time we were just trying to get the word out that there should be a statue for John Adams. It seemed like a simple thing and everyone would think it was a great idea. So, we had gone to the Ledger and to Henry and he wrote a number of columns that these kids had banded together and it was a good idea and that people ought to get behind it.

"As a result, state Rep. Joe Brett – a prominent Quincy public official who at one time ran for mayor – got behind it as well as a number of city councillors and eventually the entire school committee voted in support of it. That had a lot to do with Henry's columns. He talked about what we wanted to do and we were pretty aggressive promoting it."

One prong in their media blitz was putting up posters in downtown stores with the slogan "Quincy Should Have a Statue for John Adams."

"We would call the businesses and we'd get our cheerleaders to pose for photos putting up posters. We even sent press releases as juniors in high school. This was all pre-social media.

"We brought a little mimeograph machine at the old Barker's Office Supply store in Quincy Center so that we could mimeograph notices and news clippings. Merchants thought it was a good idea. We had posters all over Foy's Market. Some of the kids worked in some of the stores like Sher Drug (where Quincy Market is at the corner of Washington and Temple Streets) and of course they would get the owners and managers to put up posters.

"We pretty much plastered the downtown with posters stating Quincy needs a statue of John Adams," Dunleavy says. "At that point, Rep. Brett got behind us and got a bill filed setting up a study commission. Other people got involved and discussed what should be involved and discuss questions like what kind of granite should be used.

"There was a Granite Cutters Union that got involved in it. We got a lot of positive reaction to it. We went to a city council hearing, went before the school committee, and when we got the bill filed we had the school department hire a bus for us to send us to the State House so we could appear and testify at the public hearing."

About 120 QHS students joined the grass-roots effort; about 50 of them went to the State House.

"We also had a meeting with then Gov. Foster John Furcolo who also supported us. A few of us got to sit in his chair in his State House office. Eventually, that bill passed."

Then, the statue hit a snag. A big one at that.

You would think that a statue for the Second President of the United States erected in his hometown would be a cinch.

Nope.

Soon after that study bill was signed into law, the Quincy Historical Society came out against the monument.

"They sent out a press release stating 'statues were for the birds.' It was a very harsh release stating no one put up statues any more and they were out of style," Dunleavy says. "They basically said we shouldn't be doing this which sort of blind-sided us. Why would anyone oppose this?"

Dunleavy said the group in general opposed it and some prominent members of the Historical Society were also adamantly against the statue.

But the battle wasn't over yet.

"Henry took them on a number of times with some very strong columns. There was a split in the ranks of the historical society with some of them starting to support the idea.

"This became a big controversy. People were taking sides on the whole thing. Eventually, after a few years the opponents were able to get an adverse report and defeat this in the state Senate. Eventually the study commission came out against building the statue in a majority report. There was also a minority report. The main objective was that statues were out of style and no one was building statues anymore. That's what they said," Dunleavy remembers.

"They also said it would be too costly."

The campaign ended when graduation rolled around in 1961. Many of the student proponents scattered; some off to college, some entered the military; others the work force.

"The opponents outlasted us," Dunleavy says simply.

Looking back, the 1961 QHS graduate considers the statue effort one of the most important lessons he learned during his high school days.

"It was a very interesting learning experience for some kids who started off at age 15 through 17 thinking this was an interesting thing to do and get involved in. We testified before the City Council, the School Committee, and state legislature so we got involved in city government. It wasn't one of those one-day field trips that you go and see how government operates.

"We were involved in a fight that also got covered nationally," Dunleavy notes. "There were some AP stories about it. There were editorials about it. The Boston Herald and Herald Traveler supported us but the Ledger eventu-

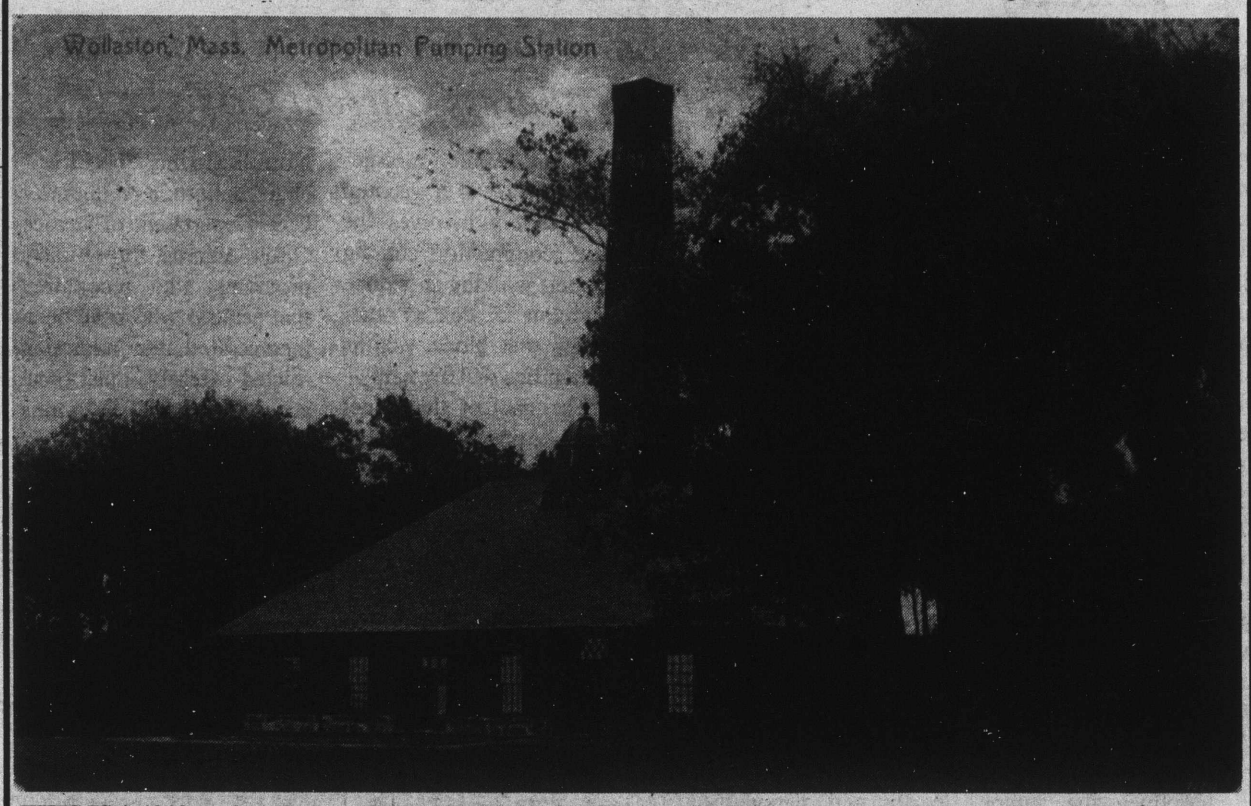
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1910 postcard view of the old sewage pumping station in Merrymount Park. It was located behind the tennis courts on Fenno Street and was pretty much hidden from view by trees even with its 80-foot chimney. Built in 1892 by the city's new sewer department it was sold a few years later to the newly formed Metropolitan Water and Sewage Board charged with building a sewer system for Boston and its surrounding cities and towns. This pump house was used for over 100 years when the MWRA built a new station here to replace it. This old building and its chimney have since been demolished. City Salary Survey Planned By Mayor

A committee will be appointed to make a general salary survey, preparatory to giving all city employees pay raises in 1947, according to plans outlined by Mayor Charles A. Ross at an executive meeting of the city council, sitting as the finance committee, last night in his office.

According to the plan of Mayor Ross, the committee will consist of seven persons. Three will be appointed by the mayor, three will be appointed by the council and Mayor Ross would act as ex-officio chairman.

Several weeks ago the mayor announced his intention of giving all of the city's 1,800 regular employees a general raise in 1947. The rising cost of living makes it necessary. "The purpose of this committee is to find facts upon which it can make a recommendation for fair general adjustment of salaries," Mayor Ross said.

FERRIS Vs. DICKSON IN WORLD SERIES GAME 7

Little Murray Dickson, a pitcher with a fighting heart and a 14-game arm, and big Dave Ferris, a 25-game winner, went out after the seventh and deciding contest of the World Series today with the St. Louis Cardinals and the Boston Red Sox tied at three games all.

Dickson was Manager Eddie Dye's choice to make his first season as a big-time manager a success. It was the second time in the series the two hurlers faced each other. In the third game Dickson gave up three runs in the first inning, and was charged with the loss as Ferris pitched a 4-0 shutout.

The weather forecast for the final game: clear and warmer.

(Editor's note: The Cardinals won the final game of the World Series by a score of 4-3. Enos Slaughter scored the eventual winning run when he scored all the way from first base on an outfield hit. Shortstop Johnny Pesky, who received the relay from the outfield, hesitated before throwing to the plate, allowing Slaughter to score.

Beechwood Knoll School Thanks Fall Festival Sponsors

On Saturday, Oct. 1st, people flocked from all over the city to come to the Beechwood Knoll's 19th Annual Fall Festival.

People come from years past that haven't had any students at BKS for ages to come and help out. It's like a big family reunion! This event is organized with the intentions of all monies going back into the school to help with the aid of field trips, classroom necessities and technology that is needed for the students to learn.

We had so many local companies help us out like the Fours of Quincy, Balducci's House of Pizza, Wollaston Ice Co., JP Fuji Group, and many others. Not to mention that DJ Neil McCole rocked it out for us during the day.

I love this day seeing the families come together and having so much fun. Whether you painted a pumpkin or ate cotton candy, everyone knows when the BKS Fall Festival is in October.

Below we would like to thank some of our many sponsors:

'Perfect Time' To Retire Yakoo

Re "New Diversity, Respect Program at High Schools:"

This is the perfect time and situation in which to retire "Yakoo." By doing so, we will show our children, who are always listening to what we say, observing what we do, and comparing the two, that we really do value all people equally.

The very difficulty of the task of changing the mascot, when we undertake it, will prove to our children that our commitment to respect for diversity is real and not just some pretty words that we mutter when we think we may be overheard.

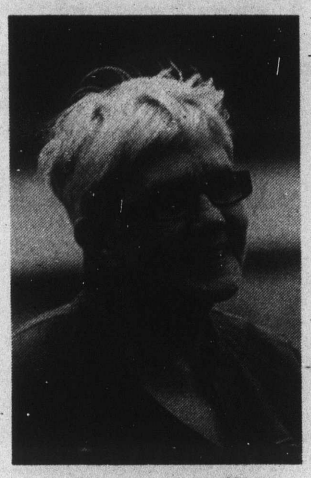
Quincy Poet Launches New Book, Public Reading Sunday

Molly Mattfield Bennett will launch her latest book "Point No Point" (Future-Cycle Press) Sunday, Oct. 23 at 3 p.m. with a public reading and book signing at United First Parish Church, "Church of the Presidents," Quincy Center.

A Quincy resident for 30 years, Mattfield Bennett is an active participant in the Boston poetry community. She has published in the journals Knock, Antioch (Seattle, WA.), Constellations, Ibbetson Street (Somerville,), Off the Coast, Wilderness House Review and the Bagel Bards. She has combined writing poetry with teaching young children and their teachers, teaching at Quincy College, raising daughters, and being wife to the Rev. Sheldon Bennett, Minister Emeritus, United First Parish Church, where she founded and led the Writing Group for many years, advocating writing as a spiritual practice.

Mattfield Bennett has been honored as an invited reader at the Boston Public Library during the Boston National Poetry Month



MOLLY MATTFIELD BENNETT

Festival and as one of three poets invited to participate at the June 2012 Jeff Male Memorial Reading at the William Joiner Institute's Writers' Conference, the University of Massachusetts, Boston.

"'Point-No-Point' is about people who live on the edges, who travel from place to place; at home nowhere, who wander through life's journey," she said. "It is about all of us who are outsiders, Pilgrims, immigrants, homeless on the streets, Masai on the Serengeti, those who seek enlightenment. We are all outsiders. These poems dwell in para-dox: with beauty amid horror that can change in an instant from one to the other; with the light that shines through pain; that daily the bush that shelters is on fire."

In the title poem, "Point No Point," a lighthouse on Puget Sound, is the starting point of a spiritual pilgrimage around the Olympic Peninsula to end at Cape Disappointment, near the mouth of the Columbia River.

The book launch event is hosted by United First Parish Church as a public event for the larger community. Jim Petosa, current leader of the Writing Group and Director of the New Rep Theater, will introduce the author and conduct an interview with her about her poetry. Molly will read selections from her new book and do a book signing, with books available for purchase. Admission is free.

United First Parish Church is located at 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Panel Presentation On Barriers To Care for Substance Use Disorders

Maria Droste Counseling Services To Host Panel Nov. 17 At QHS To Address Current Crisis

Senator John Keenan, Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti, along with Middlesex County Sheriff Peter Koutoujian, and others will be part of a panel discussion hosted by Maria Droste Counseling Services of Quincy.

The event will be held at Quincy High School Thursday, Nov. 17, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. and is free to the public.

The panel will address barriers to addictions treatment, support options for victims and families struggling with a substance or opiate use disorder, and efforts in the community, locally and nationally, to combat the nation-wide substance use epidemic. Information tables will be available at the event along with the opportunity to ask questions of panelists.

Maria Droste Counseling Services wants to send the signal that "You are not alone in your own or your loved one's recovery," said Executive Director Michael Shanahan. "Addiction issues do not occur in a vacuum and recovery involves the entire community coming together, working to reduce the stigma as well as other barriers that block victims and families seeking help.

"The goal of this panel event is to provide education about the issue and what's being done about it, and to direct families to available resources in the community," Shanahan said.

The panel will be moderated by Quincy Access TV's Joe Catalano. The panelists are Sen. John Keenan, vice chairman, Senate Committee on Opioid Addiction Prevention, Treatment and Recovery; Middlesex County Sheriff Peter Koutoujian, a former public health official who recognizes the essential role of health care in continuing to rehabilitate those effected by addiction and how essential access to critical substance use disorder and behavioral health-related resources are to persons returning to the community; Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti, a recipient of U.S. Department of Justice Grant Awards for re-entry programs who recognizes that persons who have been incarcerated for addiction related offenses, must have access to special programs to help them to return and successfully reintegrate with their respective communities; Georgia Thomas, an addiction, trauma and mental health clinician from Boston Healthcare for the Homeless; Kathy Deady, a local parent who is a tireless advocate for families impacted by addictions; and addictions counselor Danielle Owen, LADCII, from Maria Droste.

The program will be open to the general public and light refreshments will be served.

'The Irish Experience In The Great War' At Historical Society Oct. 27

Thomas O'Grady, director of Irish Studies at University of Massachusetts Boston, will present a talk, "Brothers In Arms: The Irish Experience in the Great War" on Thursday, Oct. 27, at 7 p.m. at Quincy Historical Society, Adams Academy, Quincy.

This year – 2016– is the centennial of the Easter Rising in Dublin that began the struggle against British rule that led to establishment of the Irish Free State and, ultimately, the Republic of Ireland. It is also the mid-point of the centennial of the First World War.

At least 200,000 Irishmen fought in World War I, the vast majority of them in units of the British military. The program will explore the complexities of the Irish wartime experience through the perspective of one family.

In his presentation, Professor O'Grady will share his reconstruction of the experiences of his paternal grandfather, Pvt. William O'Grady of the King's (Liverpool) Regiment, and his grandfather's two brothers, Pvt. Peter O'Grady of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers and Pvt. Patrick O'Grady of the Leinster Regiment, during the Great War of 1914-18. His research, which includes tracing (literally) his grandfather's bootsteps across the Western Front, reveals the difficulty of describing "the Irish experience" in any one definitive narrative.

Thomas O'Grady has been director of Irish Studies at the University of Massachusetts Boston since 1984. He writes widely on Irish matters—literary, historical, and cultural.

Everyone is welcome to attend.

There is no admission fee.

Calzone With Ravioli Filling

By MARIE

Last week before our yearly trip to Martha's Vineyard I wanted to bring something we could all enjoy once we arrived, so I chose to make individual calzones so they would be easy to serve either room temperature or warmed up in the oven.

Those who were really hungry ate theirs room temperature, while others waited to eat them warm from the oven. I used a delicious ricotta and spinach filling - the same as you would use in raviolis or stuffed shells. This filling is so tasty in ravioli and stuffed shells I thought it would be equally tasty in a calzone – and it was! I purchased the dough at the market and separated it in small round pieces as if making a turnover.

The following recipe made 10 individual calzones. As you can see by the photograph I made some in the shape of a turnover and some like a cannoli.

RECIPE:

2 pounds of dough - purchased at the market
1 pound of Ricotta
1 package of frozen chopped spinach, thawed, cooked and drained.
2 to 3 tablespoons of grated cheese - Parmesan or Romano
Salt and pepper to taste
1 ½ tablespoons of fresh parsley
1 egg for the egg wash

Directions – Preheat oven to 375 degrees

Once spinach is cooled place in a bowl, add ricotta and beat well. Add grated cheese and fresh parsley and mix until well blended. (Just a note, sometimes when you are making a filling such as this one for instance when stuffing a shell or manicotti you would add an egg to the ricotta, but in this filling I didn't use the egg.)

Roll out each piece of dough to a 4 to 5 inch round circle. Shape some of the calzones like a turnover and some like a cannoli.

Place mixture in the middle of each round and spread on dough. Turn the dough over and seal with a fork. Then pierce tops of each one so air will escape.

When all finished put them on a cookie sheet with parchment paper or sprinkle cookie sheet with corn meal.

Beat the egg for egg wash and with a brush cover each calzone with the egg wash. Bake in 375 or 400- degree oven for about 20 minutes or until golden brown on top.

Remove from cookie sheet, cool and store in tightly covered Tupperware.

Turkey Burger With Avocado Cream

By SUSIE

You will love this burger. You wont even need a bun! (But if you do, make sure you get a nice sour dough or whole sprouted grain bun with limited ingredients.)

This is easier than it sounds, and you will certainly impress your family and friends with this one. I got this recipe from one of my professors, Dr. Mark Hyman. He has written many books about healthy eating, and this one comes from his book "Eat Fat Get Thin", which I recommend to all my fat phobic patients.)

1 1/4 pound dark ground turkey (if you cant find dark ground turkey just add a tablespoon of olive oil to mixture)
12 oil packed sulfite free sundried tomatoes, chopped
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh basil or parsley
1 tablespoon plus a teaspoon of Dijon mustard
1/4 or so teaspoon sea salt
1/4 teaspoon or so black pepper
1 teaspoon olive oil

Just mix all together and form patties. Cook on both sides uncovered until both sides are browned on med/high heat. Now Turn on LOW and cook with cover on until inside is no longer pink. DO NOT overcook.

Avocado cream

Place 1 ripe avocado, 1/4 cup healthy mayo (like Sir Kenington brand) 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 2 pinches sea salt. Mix in food processor until smooth and creamy. Spread on burgers and top with your favorite toppings. I love onions and pickles on mine!

Houghs Neck Church Holiday Fair Nov. 4, 5

Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy, will hold its "By the Sea Holiday Fair" Friday, Nov. 4th from 6 to 9 p.m. and Saturday, Nov. 5th, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The fair will feature new tables with gift baskets and pet items as well as crafts, media tables and the resale shop. There will also be homemade pickles and jams, baked goods, Christmas items and raffles.

There will be dinner on Friday night and breakfast/lunch on Saturday.

For questions call or e-mail the church at 617-479-8778 or hncc@comcast.net. Admission is free.

Toiletry donations will be accepted for DOVE, Inc. (Domestic Violence Ended).

Walk For Water Oct. 29

The public is invited to take part in the Glad Tidings Church Walk for Water Saturday, Oct. 29 at 1 p.m. at Wompatuck State Park in Hingham.

The fundraising goal for this year's event is $10,000.

All donations benefit Water Mission, a nonprofit Christian engineering organization that builds safe water solutions in developing countries and disaster areas. Water Mission will use the funds to drill a well and construct the plumbing infrastructure at Enkeriyian Primary School in rural Kenya.

To sign up for the Walk or to make a donation, visit elev8water.org or call 617-773-9797.

The Walk for Water promotes awareness of the global water crisis while raising funds to provide sustainable safe water around the world. During the approximately three-mile walk, participants are encouraged to carry a bucket of water to symbolize the burden that millions of women and children bear every day as they collect dirty water in developing countries.

The Enkeriyian community in Rural Kenya does not have clean water. Kids are always sick and miss school because of water-related illnesses.

For more information about the Glad Tidings Church Walk for Water, visit elev8water.org or contact Renny Varughese at 617-773-9797 or info@gtc-quincy.org.

Granite Telecommunications Raises $4,058 For Adaptive Sports Partners

Granite Telecommunications, LLC, a provider of communications solutions to businesses, recently raised $4,058 for Adaptive Sports Partners, an organization that provides opportunities in sports and recreation for persons with physical or developmental disabilities.

The organization was founded in 2009 and has helped hundreds of persons with disabilities enjoy the thrill of activities such as hiking, biking, paddling, skiing, snowshoeing, Special Olympics training and various athletics.

Adaptive Sports Partners operates under the belief that the satisfaction of accomplishment can be a life-affirming experience. With this as a guiding principle, the nonprofit offers participants a safe and supportive environment to take risks with the goal of enhancing their personal development and helping them accomplish things they never thought possible.

Quincy Lions, Leonardo's Salon Partner For Hurricane Matthew Relief

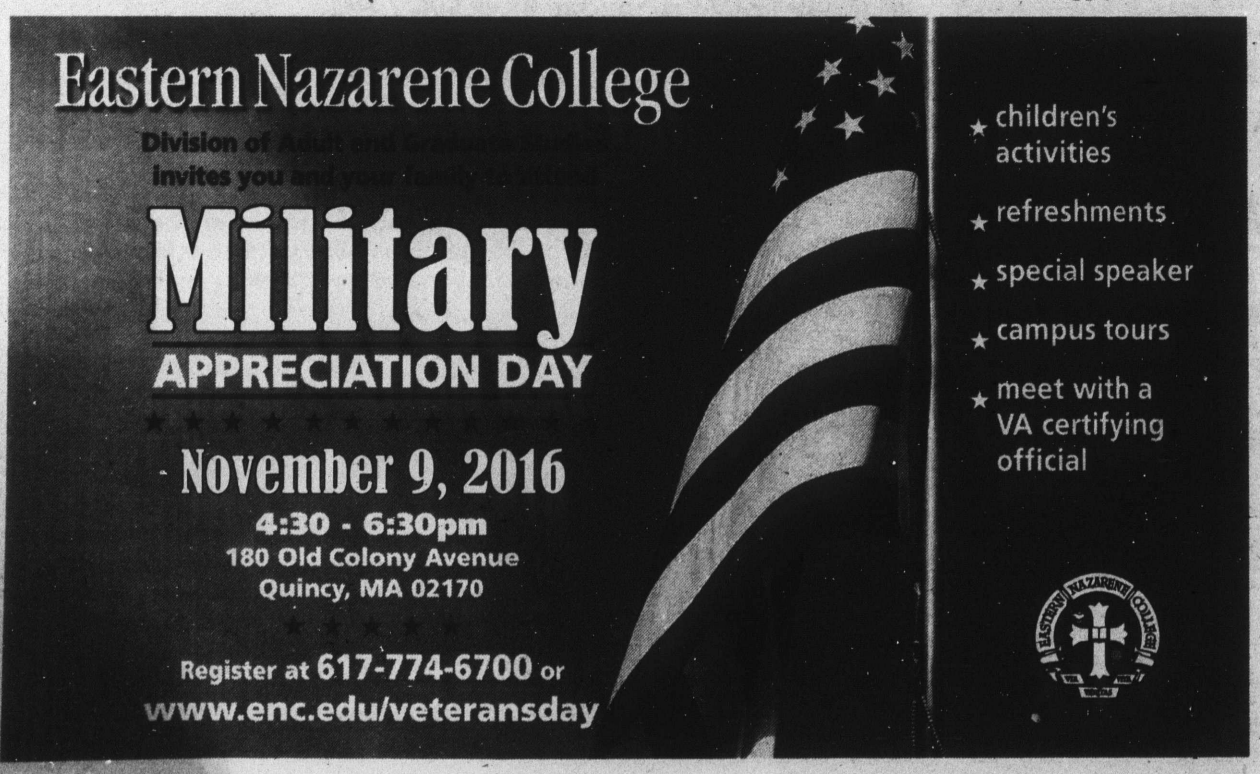
The Quincy Lions Club has partnered with Leonardo's Salon, located at 620 Hancock St. Quincy, to help raise much needed funds for the Hurricane Matthew relief efforts.

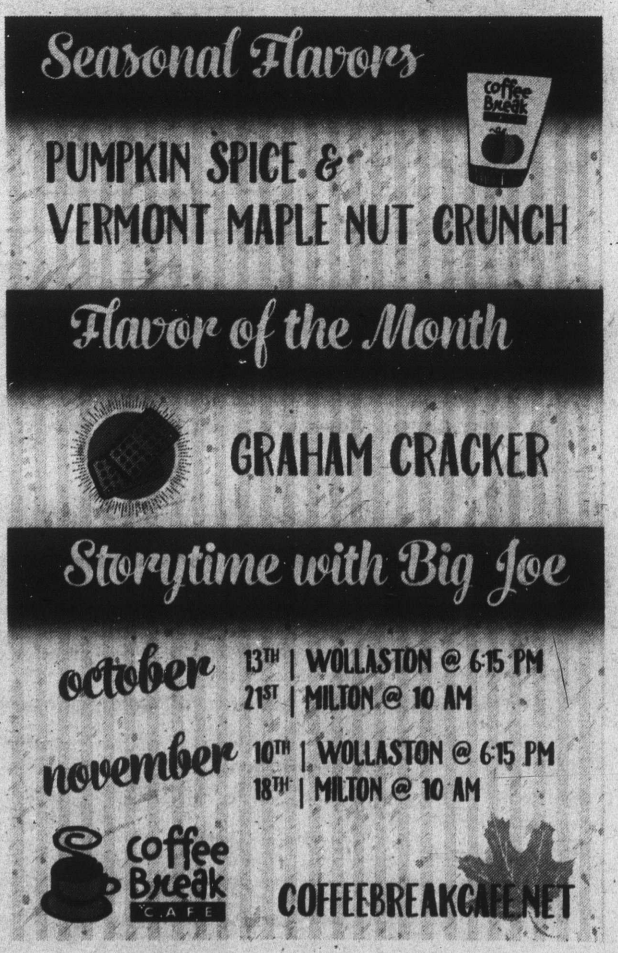
Hurricane Matthew affected several areas, including the Caribbean and the United States. It was the deadliest hurricane in the Atlantic Ocean since 2005.

Many main roads are impassible and many bridges have been washed away. Food and drinking water are in short supply and many of those who need aid the most are still waiting for it to arrive.

Quincy Lions Club President Amy Huber said funds raised by Leonardo's Salon will be used to support those in need in affected areas. She said Lions have been working to not only provide immediate relief (food, water, and medicines), but also long-term rebuilding support.

Leonardo's Salon is raffling off over $250 of services and products to help support the Quincy Lions Club efforts. Tickets are $5 and can be purchased at Leonardo's Salon 620 Hancock St., Quincy.





Falls And Older Adults: Risk Factors, Prevention

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Falling is not a normal part of aging, and usually doesn't occur coincidentally.

Frequently, several underlying causes or risk factor are involved in a fall. A risk factor is something that escalates a person's risk or susceptibility to a medical problem or disease. As the number of risk factors rises, so does the risk of falling. Many falls are related to a person's physical condition or a medical issue, or could be associated with safety hazards in the home or community.

Experts have linked a number of personal risk factors to falling. Muscle weakness, particularly in the legs, is one of the most significant factors. Seniors with weak muscles are more inclined to fall than are those who maintain their muscle strength, as well as their flexibility and endurance.

Your balance and your gait are other crucial elements. Older adults who have poor balance or difficulty walking are more likely to fall. These problems may be the result of a lack of exercise, a neurological cause, arthritis, or other medical disorders and their treatments. Keep in mind also that your reflexes may start to decline with age, increasing the amount of time it takes you to react inadvertently making it trickier to catch your balance if you begin to fall.

Blood pressure that drops too much when you get up from lying down or sitting can increase your chance of falling. This condition, referred to as postural hypotension might result from dehydration or certain medications. It might also be connected to diabetes, neurological conditions such as Parkinson's disease, or an infection. Postural hypotension can cause some people to feel dizzy when their blood pressure drops.

Sensory problems can be a source of falls, too. If your senses are not functioning appropriately you might be less aware of your environment.

For example, having numbness in your feet may mean you don't detect where you are stepping. Poor vision can also increase your risk. One reason is that your eyes may need time to adjust and see clearly when you transition between light and darkness. Other vision problems contributing to falls include poor depth perception, cataracts, and glaucoma. Wearing multi-focal glasses while walking or having inadequate lighting around your home can also lead to falls.

RUTH JONES

Certain medications can intensify a person's risk of falling because they may trigger side effects like dizziness or confusion. The health problems for which the person takes the medications may also contribute to the risk of falls. Subsequently, the more medications you take the more likely you are to take a tumble. Your doctor and pharmacist can council you on which drugs, including over-the-counter medicines, might cause complications.

It is important to remember that if you fall, be sure to talk with your health care provider. A fall could be an indication of a new medical condition that should be investigated, such as an infection or a cardiovascular disorder. It could also suggest that a treatment for a chronic ailment, such as Parkinson's disease or dementia, needs to be adjusted.

Statistics show that 6 out of every 10 falls happen at home, where we spend the bulk of our time and tend to move around without contemplating our safety. Falls at home often happen while a person is performing normal daily activities. Some of these falls are caused by factors in the person's living environment including:

- loose rugs
- clutter on the floor or stairs
- carrying heavy or bulky things up or down stairs
- not having stair railings
- not having grab bars in the bathroom

Many falls could be prevented by making modest changes in your living space, as well as personal and lifestyle adjustments. A significant step toward this is to remove anything that could cause you to trip or slip while walking.

Clutter, small furniture, pet bowls, electrical or phone cords, or other items can cause you to fall. Slipping on rugs or slick floors can also be an issue. Arrange furniture to give you ample room to walk freely and remove items from stairs, hallways, and pathways.

Discard throw rugs, use non-slip rugs, or attach rugs to the floor with double-sided tape. Put non-slip strips on floors and steps and a rubber mat on the floor of your bathtub or shower, as well. Use caution when walking outdoors, and avoid going out alone on ice or snow. A minimal slip on a slick sidewalk or icy stairs could result in a serious injury.

Ensure that you have sufficient lighting in each room, at entrances, on outdoor walkways and on stairways. Light switches at both the top and bottom of stairs can be beneficial, as well as a lamp within easy reach of your bed.

Install night lights in the bathroom, hallways, bedroom, and kitchen and always keep a flashlight by your bed in case the power is out and you need to get up.

Have handrails installed on both sides of stairs and walkways. If you must carry items while walking up or down stairs, hold the item in one hand and use the handrail with the other. Correctly placed grab bars in your tub and shower, and next to the toilet, can assist you in avoiding falls, too.

Store food boxes, cans, dishes, clothing, and other everyday items within easy reach. This simple adjustment could prevent an injury that might come from standing on a stool to get to an item.

It is important to remember that if you fall, be sure to talk with your health care provider. A fall could be an indication of a new medical condition that should be investigated, such as an infection or a cardiovascular disorder. It could also suggest that a treatment for a chronic ailment, such as Parkinson's disease or dementia, needs to be adjusted.

If you have fallen, your doctor might suggest that an occupational therapist, physical therapist, or nurse visit you at home. These health care providers can assess your home's safety and advise you about making modifications to prevent falls.

Ruth Jones is the director of Nursing for the City of Quincy Health Department.

EARLY VOTING
Monday, Oct. 24 - Friday, Nov. 4

ELECTION DAY: Tuesday, Nov. 8

The state election ballot in Quincy is bilingual for early voting, absentee voting and Election Day voting Tuesday, Nov. 8.
The English and Chinese ballot has two pages or "cards" this year.
The front side of the first page (card 1) lists candidates on the ballot as well as Question 1 in both English and Chinese (shown on this page.)
The back side of the ballot's first page (card 1) lists Questions 2 and 3.
Questions 2 and 3 appear on Page 11.
The front side of the ballot's second page (card 2) lists Question 4.
Question 4 appears on Page 12.

QUESTION 1 / 議題 1
LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Do you approve of a law summarized below, on which no vote was taken by the Senate or the House of Representatives on or before May 3, 2016?

SUMMARY

This proposed law would allow the state Gaming Commission to issue one additional category 2 license, which would permit operation of a gaming establishment with no table games and not more than 1,250 slot machines.

The proposed law would authorize the Commission to request applications for the additional license to be granted to a gaming establishment located on property that is (i) at least four acres in size; (ii) adjacent to and within 1,500 feet of a race track, including the track's additional facilities, such as the track, grounds, paddocks, barns, auditorium, amphitheatre, and bleachers; (iii) where a horse racing meeting may physically be held; (iv) where a horse racing meeting shall have been hosted; and (v) not separated from the race track by a highway or railway.

A YES VOTE would permit the state Gaming Commission to license one additional slot machine gaming establishment at a location that meets certain conditions specified in the law.

A NO VOTE would make no change in current laws regarding gaming.

QUESTION 2 / 議題 2
LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Do you approve of a law summarized below, on which no vote was taken by the Senate or the House of Representatives on or before May 3, 2016?

SUMMARY

This proposed law would allow the state Board of Elementary and Secondary Education to approve up to 12 new charter schools or enrollment expansions in existing charter schools each year. Approvals under this law could expand statewide charter school enrollment by up to 1% of the total statewide public school enrollment each year. New charters and enrollment expansions approved under this law would be exempt from existing limits on the number of charter schools, the number of students enrolled in them, and the amount of local school districts' spending allocated to them.

If the Board received more than 12 applications in a single year from qualified applicants, then the proposed law would require it to give priority to proposed charter schools or enrollment expansions in districts where student performance on statewide assessments is in the bottom 25% of all districts in the previous two years and where demonstrated parent demand for additional public school options is greatest.

New charter schools and enrollment expansions approved under this proposed law would be subject to the same approval standards as other charter schools, and to recruitment, retention, and multilingual outreach requirements that currently apply to some charter schools. Schools authorized under this law would be subject to annual performance reviews according to standards established by the Board.

The proposed law would take effect on January 1, 2017.

A YES VOTE would allow for up to 12 approvals each year of either new charter schools or expanded enrollments in existing charter schools, but not to exceed 1% of the statewide public school enrollment.

A NO VOTE would make no change in current laws relative to charter schools.

本次法律提案將允許小學及初中教育州委員會核 准開辦多達 12 所新特許學校，或在現有特許學校的規模下每年提升入學率。此法律提案通過後，每年特許學校入學率的提升將令

全州公立學校總 入學率提升 1%。依據此法律提案核准的新特許學校和提升入學率，不受特許學校數量、學生入學數量、劃撥給特許學校的本地學區費用金額的現有限制條件約。

如果委員會在一年內收到符合條件的申請人的超 過 12 份申請書，法律提案將要求委員會在如下學區優先核准擬議的特許學校或提升入學率：全州 學生表現評估在前兩年內處於所有地區倒數 25% 的區間，以及父母對於增加公立學校需求最強烈的區域。

依據此次法律提案所核准的新特許學校和入學率提升，將遵循和其他特許學校相同的審核標準，也將遵循目前適用於一些特許學校的錄取率、留校率及多語言推廣服務需求。將依據委員會制定的標準，每年對根據此法律提案取得授權的學校執行表現審查。

此法律提案將於 2017 年 1 月 1 日開始生效。

贊成票將表示支持每年增批 12 所新特許學校，或提升現有特許學校的入學率，但是不超過全州 公立學校入學率的 1%。

反對票將不會改變與特許學校有關的法律。

QUESTION 3 / 議題 3
LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Do you approve of a law summarized below, on which no vote was taken by the Senate or the House of Representatives on or before May 3, 2016?

SUMMARY

This proposed law would prohibit any farm owner or operator from knowingly confining any breeding pig, calf raised for veal, or egg-laying hen in a way that prevents the animal from lying down, standing up, fully extending its limbs, or turning around freely. The proposed law would also prohibit any business owner or operator in Massachusetts from selling whole eggs intended for human consumption or any uncooked cut of veal or pork if the business owner or operator knows or should know that the hen, breeding pig, or veal calf that produced these products was confined in a manner prohibited by the proposed law. The proposed law would exempt sales of food products that combine veal or pork with other products, including soups, sandwiches, pizzas, hotdogs, or similar processed or prepared food items.

The proposed law's confinement prohibitions would not apply during transportation; state and county fair exhibitions; 4-H programs; slaughter in compliance with applicable laws and regulations; medical research; veterinary exams, testing, treatment and operation if performed under the direct supervision of a licensed veterinarian; five days prior to a pregnant pig's expected date of giving birth; any day that pig is nursing piglets; and for temporary periods for animal husbandry purposes not to exceed six hours in any twenty-four hour period.

The proposed law would create a civil penalty of up to $1,000 for each violation and would give the Attorney General the exclusive authority to enforce the law, and to issue regulations to implement it. As a defense to enforcement proceedings, the proposed law would allow a business owner or operator to rely in good faith upon a written certification or guarantee of compliance by a supplier.

The proposed law would be in addition to any other animal welfare laws and would not prohibit stricter local laws.

The proposed law would take effect on January 1, 2022. The proposed law states that if any of its parts were declared invalid, the other parts would stay in effect.

A YES VOTE would prohibit any confinement of pigs, calves, and hens that prevents them from lying down, standing up, fully extending their limbs, or turning around freely.

A NO VOTE would make no change in current laws relative to the keeping of farm animals.

此法律提案規定每次違法，將執行高達 1,000 美元的民事罰款，並授予司法部長執行此法律的專有權，並核發實施此法律的相關規程。作為對執行程序的辯護，此法律提案允許企業主或經營者以誠信之態度信任供應商提供的書面證書或供應商合規性保證書。

此法律提案將於 2022 年 1 月 1 日開始生效。此法律提案聲明，即使其中任何一部分宣佈無效，其他部分仍有效。

贊成票將禁止對豬、小牛、母雞施加任何限制行為，阻止這些動物躺臥、站立、完全伸展肢體或自由地轉身。

反對票將不會改變養殖農場動物相關的現行法律。

Early Voting Begins Monday

Crispo is also encouraging Quincy voters to become familiar with the four ballot questions by reading the voter guide before heading to the polls.

The City's Election Department is taking steps to help streamline the early voting process and maintain voting integrity by ensuring voters cast only one ballot. In other words, the department will keep track of those voting during early voting to prevent an early voter from trying to cast another ballot again including at the polls Tuesday, Nov. 8th.

A district warden will greet voters upon arrival and will check a master voters' list to help identify the voter's ward and precinct. Next the voter will go to a "checker table." There will be six checker tables – one for each of the city's six wards.

The checkers will then hand the early voter the appropriate ballot for their precinct. Crispo notes that some wards – like Ward 4 - have different ballots because of the precincts represented by a state representative. For example, part of State Rep. Tackey Chan's district includes Precincts 2 and 4 in Ward 4 while Rep. Ron Mariano's district includes Ward 4 Precinct 5.

There will be 16 voting stations available to early voters in the Old City Hall atrium – four voting pods with four voting stations each.

After voting, the ballots will be sealed in an "affirmation envelope" that will be filled out by the voter. These envelopes will remain sealed until Election Day, Nov. 8 when they are counted along with other ballots cast that day.

The Election Department will keep track of the early voters who cast ballots daily.

Those who come out to vote early will have the designation "EV" next to their name on a master voter list that will be generated and distributed to the city's polling locations Nov. 8th. Those who vote by absentee ballot will be designated "AV." The list is to help ensure that no one votes multiple times.

Crispo says she has seen an uptick in interest in this election. As of Monday, more than 1,300 Quincy voters have cast an absentee ballot since absentee balloting began Oct. 6.

Voter turnout in Quincy was a little more than 70 percent the last time there was an open seat for the White House in 2008. Four years ago, in 2012, when incumbent President Barack Obama was re-elected, turnout here was 63.8 percent.

Democrats To Honor Bernice Mader Posthumously Oct. 30

At 28th Annual Quincy Democratic City Committee Breakfast

The Quincy Democratic City Committee will host its 28th Annual Breakfast at the Quincy Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St., on Sunday, Oct. 30th at 10 a.m.

The Committee announces that the late Bernice Mader will be honored posthumously as the recipient of the 2016 Dennis F. Ryan Community Award.

City-Wide Chairperson Alicia Gardner on behalf of the Committee said, "This award, given in the name of a gentleman who was passionate in his support and beliefs of the Democratic Party is being awarded to an individual such as Bernice who exemplified those principles through her words and deeds. Ms. Mader's sister Sandra Mader along with Bernice's family and friends will be in attendance to accept the award on Bernice's behalf.

Bernice Mader was a dedicated member of the Quincy Ward 4 Democratic City Committee, and served for over 25 years as the Democratic State Committeewoman for the Norfolk and Plymouth Senatorial District.

She was either a manager, or was actively involved in many campaigns for Democratic candidates. She loved her city, and she was passionate about being involved.

Bernice served as the executive assistant to Mayor Jim Sheets and she founded the Community Advisory Committee to the Massachusetts Port Authority. She served as a member for 30 years, and as Chairperson for 20 years. She also founded Quincy's Citizens Against Airport Noise to fight noise encroachment from Logan Airport.

Miss Mader passed way in February 2016.

"Ms. Mader's dedication to her city, its resident's, and her strong belief in the principles of the Democratic Party is why this Committee is honored to remember this tremendous woman," Gardner said.

The Committee's guest speaker will be Comedian Jimmy Tingle. Jimmy is a well-known political comic who has appeared on 60 Minutes II, the Tonight Show, Conan O'Brien, Comedy Central, HBO, PBS, NPR, and CNN.

BERNICE MADER

"We are looking forward to a morning of honoring a great lady, and enjoying the funny, smart and, clever humor of Jimmy Tingle, join us!" Gardner said.

Tickets per person are $30 pre-event, or $35 at the door. Sponsorship tables are also available for $300. and $500.

For tickets, make checks payable to the Quincy Democratic City Committee (QDCC) and mailed to, Alicia Gardner, 41 Deerfield St., North Quincy, MA 02171. Tickets will be held at the door.

The Quincy Democratic City Committee is a Committee of 200 plus members and associate members. There are six Committees for each of the six wards in Quincy. Members of the Committee are committed democrats who work hard to support democratic candidates and issues. For more information, contact Alicia Gardner at alicia.gardner6@gmail.com.

MA State Election - COMPOSITE BALLOT (Front Card 2)

QUESTION 4 / 議題 4
LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Do you approve of a law summarized below, on which no vote was taken by the Senate or the House of Representatives on or before May 3, 2016?

SUMMARY

The proposed law would permit the possession, use, distribution, and cultivation of marijuana in limited amounts by persons age 21 and older and would remove criminal penalties for such activities. It would provide for the regulation of commerce in marijuana, marijuana accessories, and marijuana products and for the taxation of proceeds from sales of these items.

The proposed law would authorize persons at least 21 years old to possess up to one ounce of marijuana outside of their residences; possess up to ten ounces of marijuana inside their residences; grow up to six marijuana plants in their residences; give one ounce or less of marijuana to a person at least 21 years old without payment; possess, produce or transfer hemp; or make or transfer items related to marijuana use, storage, cultivation, or processing.

The measure would create a Cannabis Control Commission of three members appointed by the state Treasurer which would generally administer the law governing marijuana use and distribution, promulgate regulations, and be responsible for the licensing of marijuana commercial establishments.

The proposed law would also create a Cannabis Advisory Board of fifteen members appointed by the Governor. The Cannabis Control Commission would adopt regulations governing licensing qualifications; security; record keeping; health and safety standards; packaging and labeling; testing; advertising and displays; required inspections; and such other matters as the Commission considers appropriate. The records of the Commission would be public records.

The proposed law would authorize cities and towns to adopt reasonable restrictions on the time, place, and manner of operating marijuana businesses and to limit the number of marijuana establishments in their communities. A city or town could hold a local vote to determine whether to permit the selling of marijuana and marijuana products for consumption on the premises at commercial establishments.

The proceeds of retail sales of marijuana and marijuana products would be subject to the state sales tax and an additional excise tax of 3.75%. A city or town could impose a separate tax of up to 2%. Revenue received from the additional state excise tax or from license application fees and civil penalties for violations of this law would be deposited in a Marijuana Regulation Fund and would be used subject to appropriation for administration of the proposed law.

Marijuana-related activities authorized under this proposed law could not be a basis for adverse orders in child welfare cases absent clear and convincing evidence that such activities had created an unreasonable danger to the safety of a minor child.

The proposed law would not affect existing law regarding medical marijuana treatment centers or the operation of motor vehicles while under the influence. It would permit property owners to prohibit the use, sale, or production of marijuana on their premises (with an exception that landlords cannot prohibit consumption by tenants of marijuana by means other than by smoking); and would permit employers to prohibit the consumption of marijuana by employees in the workplace. State and local governments could continue to restrict uses in public buildings or at or near schools. Supplying marijuana to persons under age 21 would be unlawful.

The proposed law would take effect on December 15, 2016.

A YES VOTE would allow persons 21 and older to possess, use, and transfer marijuana and products containing marijuana concentrate (including edible products) and to cultivate marijuana, all in limited amounts, and would provide for the regulation and taxation of commercial sale of marijuana and marijuana products.

您是否贊成下方總結的法律（在 2016 年 5 月 3 日當日或之前參議院或眾議院未進行投票）？

總結

此法律提案將允許 21 歲及以上人員限量持有、使用、分銷及種植大麻，並將免除此類活動的刑事處罰。此法律提案將為大麻、大麻配件、大麻產品商業化及銷售這些物品須繳納的稅收做出法規規定。

此法律提案將核准以下以下各項：21 歲及以上人員可在個人住所外最多持有 1 盎司大麻；在個人住所內最多持有 10 盎司大麻；在個人住所內種植 6 株大麻植株；向 21 歲及以上人員提供 1 盎司（或更少）大麻且不牽涉金錢支付；能夠持有、生產或轉讓大麻；或生產或轉讓與使用、儲存、種植或加工大麻相關的物品。

此法律提案將核准城市和城鎮採納合理的限制條件，限制大麻的營運時間、地點和方式，及限制各個社區的大麻種植機構數量。城市或城鎮能夠舉行本地投票以決定是否允許銷售大麻和大麻產品，用於在商業機構的經營場所內吸食。

沒有明顯且令人信服的證據表明依據此法律提案核准的大麻相關活動曾對未成年孩童的安全造成不當危險，因此此類活動不得作為援亂孩童福利訴訟案件秩序的依據。

此法律提案將不會影響有關業用大麻治療中心或吸食大麻後操作車輛的現行法律。此法律提案將允許業主禁止在其個人經營場所內使用、銷售或生產大麻（屋主不得禁止大麻租戶以吸食大麻以外的方式吸食大麻）並允許雇主禁止在工作場所吸食大麻。州政府和當地政府可繼續限制在公共建築物或在學校內或學校附近使用大麻。向不滿 21 歲的人員提供大麻屬於違法行為。

此法律提案將於 2016 年 12 月 15 日開始生效。

贊成票將允許 21 歲及以上人員能夠限量持有、使用及轉讓大麻和包含大麻濃縮物（包括可食用產品）的產品及種植大麻，對大麻和大麻產品的商售做出法規規程並徵收稅款。

反對票將不會改變與大麻有關的現行法律。

Wollaston Theatre Demolition Company Fined $24,000

Owner Of Contracting Company Plans To Appeal OSHA Citations

By SCOTT JACKSON

Federal safety officials have fined the contractor hired to demolish the Wollaston Theatre more than $24,000 after two workers were seriously injured when the final section of the historic building's brick wall collapsed.

The U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration issued five citations against Jamie McGuinness & Sons, the Quincy contractor hired to demolish the 90-year-old building, following its investigation into the July 12 collapse of the brick wall. OSHA fined the company a total of $24,301 for the five citations.

James Lally, a spokesman for OSHA, said the company had until Oct. 11 to file a letter contesting the citations – which were issued Sept. 1 – or schedule a meeting with the federal agency, but did not do so.

"When an employer does not respond within 15 business days of receiving its citations, the citations and proposed fines become final and the company forfeits its right to appeal," Lally said.

Jamie McGuinness, owner of the contracting firm, said Monday he still planned to appeal the fines. McGuinness said he had not seen OSHA's letter notifying him of the citations until after reading a newspaper article about the decision. McGuinness said he reached out to OSHA at that point, and is drafting an appeal letter to the agency.

Stephen Crawford, a spokesman for Miao Kun "Michael" Fang, the owner of the property at 14 Beale Street, said, "We are very pleased that OSHA has completed their investigation as quickly and as thoroughly as they have, and we are particularly pleased the two workers involved were not seriously injured."

The demolition crew on scene was taking down the last section of brick wall the afternoon of July 12, when a 30 feet tall by 40 feet wide section collapsed, Jimmy Wong, an inspector with the Quincy Fire Department, said following the incident.

Two workers were rushed to Boston Medical Center with serious, but non-life threatening injuries following the collapse. One of the workers had been in a bucket truck, Wong said previously, and jumped from it as the wall began to fall and suffered lacerations and a leg injury.

The second worker was on the ground at the time of the collapse and suffered more serious injuries after being trapped under approximately four feet of brick, according to Wong; police officers on detail duty and other workers rushed to the scene to free the worker from the bricks.

OSHA's five citations were for:

Employees were struck by a steel-supported masonry wall while working where the employees did not recognize and avoid the unsafe condition and were allowed to work inside a fall zone by the employer.

Employees were exposed to explosion and fire related hazards while using a torch for cutting where a flashback arrestor was not in use.

Employees were exposed to fall hazards of up to 25 feet while working in a boom lift where body belts and harnesses were not used.

Employees were struck by a steel-supported masonry wall, being dismantled, where the columns were overstressed and were not adequately supported.

Employees were struck by a steel-supported masonry wall, where the competent person allowed employees to continue to work in a fall zone where hazards existed without being corrected by shoring, bracing or other effective means.

OSHA had previously cited Jamie McGuinness & Sons for two violations found at the Wollaston Theatre site during an inspector's visit on June 13 and penalized the firm $5,600 for those violations on June 30, according to Lally. The company was cited for a operating an excavator without a backup alarm and for operating machinery within 10 feet of power lines.

The company met with OSHA during an informal conference on those two citations, and the federal agency agreed to remove the citation and associated $2,800 fine for operating machinery within 10 feet of power lines. OSHA also reduced the penalty for operating an excavator without a backup alarm by 30 percent, from $2,800 to $1,960.

Demolition began in June, and Crawford said all site work related to the demolition was completed by September. Crawford said there are not yet any plans for the future of the site, which is located in a Business C zoning district on an 18,790 square foot parcel of land.

Late last year, Crawford said Fang intended to demolish the historic theater, affectionately known to many area residents as "The Wolly," because of concerns over its structural integrity.

Mayor Thomas Koch attempted to negotiate a deal to purchase and preserve the building, but in May said it would be too expensive to do so – at least $2 million to purchase the building, in addition to millions more in restoration costs, he stated then.

The Wollaston Theatre first opened in 1926 as a vaudeville theater and was repurposed to a movie house in the 1930s. It was last open to the public in 2003.

Fang purchased the property for $600,000 in 2012 from Yvonne Chandler. Chandler and her late husband, Arthur, had owned the Wollaston Theatre since 1979.

Before selling to Fang, Chandler had reached an agreement in 2009 to sell the building to Street-Works, the city's previous master developer for Quincy Center. The New York-based company exercised an option to opt out of that agreement after it was estimated that renovating the building would cost upwards of $7 million.

Halloween Trivia Night Oct. 22

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will host a Halloween Trivia Contest at Black and Orange Night Saturday, Oct. 22.

Those attending are encouraged to wear black, orange, or both to help set the Halloween theme.

The evening will begin with a potluck supper at 6:30 p.m. Bring a salad, main course, appetizer, or dessert to share. Beverages will be provided.

Following the supper, the annual Halloween Trivia Contest will be held. Because the questions are difficult, the game is suggested for late teens and adults.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

New Zoning Rules Proposed At 3 MBTA Stations

less required parking than necessary under current zoning rules, and allows developers to take advantage of shared parking arrangements.

The new transit-oriented zoning districts would be overlay districts, giving a developer the option of following the zoning rules for the new districts or for the underlying zoning district. The North Quincy and Wollaston stations are presently in Business C zoning districts, while the Quincy Adams station is zoned Industrial A.

The new zoning rules were refered to the council's ordinance committee, which is set to review the proposal Nov. 10.

Chris Walker, Koch's director of policy and information, said the city hopes to create a streamlined permitting process for the three MBTA stations similar to the one created for the redevelopment of the downtown area.

"What this ordinance would do will be similar to what we've tried to do in the downtown. It is to create a permitting framework that is predictable, streamlined and promotes the kind of development closest to our development hubs – the kind of development that we want as a community," Walker said at Monday's meeting.

"It makes the Planning Department the lead agency, as it is in the downtown, and it creates a number of provisions we will certainly discuss when it gets to committee."

The MBTA has already announced plans to redevelop the North Quincy station's parking lot. The MBTA Fiscal and Management Control Board in April awarded lease rights to the firms Bozzuto Development and Atlantic Development. The developers are backing a $205 million proposal to bring 579 residential units and 40,000 square feet of retail space to the station.

City officials expect the MBTA to reach similar agreements for development at the Wollaston and Quincy Adams stations in the next three to five years.

"The T in the last several years, in the last several months really, has become quite serious in its determination to essentially get out of the real estate business and start using some of its property to maximize some revenue for the T and also create new economic growth," Walker said.

"We have four of those in Quincy – one of them is already taken care of by the downtown zoning – and it's our thought that the rest of them should have a similar overlay district."

The MBTA owns the property at the three stations, and is responsible for finding would-be developers for that land. Special legislation approved in 1967 mandates that any construction over the air rights at the four stations in Quincy must be approved by both the mayor and City Council, and those developments must conform to city regulations, including zoning, building and fire codes.

Walker said the City Council's role in approving developments over the air rights would not be changed by the proposed new zoning rules.

Buildings in the new district would be allowed to stand 10 stories tall. Under current zoning rules, buildings at the North Quincy and Wollaston stations are limited to six stories, and up to four stories are allowed at the Quincy Adams station.

The new parking requirements in the districts include one space for each residential dwelling unit; one space for every 10 seats in a restaurant or assembly; three spaces for every 1,000 square feet of gross retail floor area; one space per 2,000 square feet of gross institutional floor area; and one space per 600 square feet of gross office floor area, which increases to one space for every 400 square feet if the new construction includes more than 10,000 square feet.

The new zoning rules would allow shared parking arrangements to provide for up to 50 percent of the required spaces in the districts because of the proximity to rapid transit and because different uses have different peak hours.

The current zoning for the North Quincy and Wollaston station requires 1.5 spaces per residential unit, one space for every four seats in an assembly, one space for 400 square feet of retail space, one space for every 2,000 square feet of institutional space, and one per every 600 square feet of office space. At Quincy Adams, one space is needed for every 10 seats in an assembly, 1,000 square feet of institutional space, 500 square feet of retail space and 500 square feet of office space.

The new zoning districts at the three stations would have a minimum lot size of five acres, and a minimum lot area per dwelling unit of 325 square feet. The minimum lot area at the North Quincy and Wollaston station is currently 5,000 square feet, a little more than one-tenth of an acre, and there is no minimum square footage required per dwelling unit. There is presently no minimum lot size or area per dwelling unit at Quincy Adams.

There are no other dimensional requirements included in the proposed transit-oriented districts. There are dimensional requirements at the stations under the current zoning rules, such as minimum lot frontage and width.

Developers hoping to build in the new transit-oriented districts would go before the Planning Board for a certificate of consistency. The board would be required to determine whether or not a proposal conforms to design guidelines for transit-oriented districts, which the city's Planning Department would create.

Koch's ordinance further states that housing shall be a component of any large scale commercial development, where appropriate, and common areas of the development shall be accessible to the public. Additionally, the new developments cannot be a hazard or nuisance to vehicles or pedestrians, or be detrimental to vehicular access and circulation to the site.

Permitted uses in the transit-oriented districts would include retail, restaurants, multi-family dwellings, mixed-use, municipal offices, municipal parking lots, public markets, laboratory or research facilities, public transportation terminals and related parking facilities, swimming pools and tennis courts, and miscellaneous commercial uses.

Prohibited uses in the new district would include boarding houses, municipal waste facilities, adult use establishments, body art establishments, marinas, funeral homes or crematoriums, and warehouses.

Additionally, 2016 marks the centennial of the National Park Service, which was established in 1916, and the 70th anniversary of the legislation that created the Adams National Historical Park.

Mayor Thomas Koch and U.S. Rep. Stephen Lynch are among those scheduled to speak at the Oct. 28 ceremony, along with Douglas Adams, representing the Adams family, and one student from each of the city's high schools – Quincy High, North Quincy High, and the Woodward School.

United First Parish Church historian Bill Westland is also slated to speak at the event, highlighting the history of the visitor program.

John Adams, the second president of the United States, was born Oct. 30, 1735. He is entombed in the crypt below the church along with his wife, Abigail, and their son, sixth U.S. President John Quincy Adams, and his wife, Louisa.

22 O'Brien Towers Tenants Relocated Due To Bed Bugs

By SCOTT JACKSON

Nearly two dozen residents of O'Brien Towers in Germantown were moved into hotels Monday as the Quincy Housing Authority fights a bed bug infestation in the building.

Jim Lydon, the housing's authority executive director, said the 22 residents who were moved out of the building Monday should be able to return in four days. They were removed from the building after specially trained dogs searched the property for bed bugs, and located them in 22 apartments. The bed bugs have been found inside walls of the building.

"We had a huge problem [at O'Brien Towers] over one year ago. We put a lot of money and effort into eradication, but we believe they entered structural members of the building," Lydon said.

"We tried to tackle it for a long time, and we have not been able to beat it down."

Lydon said workers would be going into the walls inside the building to fight the bed bugs this time, and will be using a combination of heat and chemicals to kill the critters. The tenants' furnishings and clothing will be taken outside and fumigated as well.

Lydon said he understands temporarily displacing the 22 tenants is disruptive to them, but said it was necessary to do so in order to eradicate the bed bugs.

"We're doing the best we can by them and treating them with respect," he stated.

The Quincy Housing Authority expects to spend $40,000 to eradicate the bed bugs inside the building and accommodate tenants in the hotels. The housing agency did not receive any federal or state funds to do so.

"This comes out of our bottom line, but it's a problem we have not been able to get our heads around," Lydon said.

Bed bugs – a brown, oval-shaped bug – grow to about the size of an apple seed and live in furniture. While they are not known to transmit diseases, bed bugs do bite. The bite marks appear as small, itchy red spots.

MWNA To Celebrate 25th Anniversary Nov. 3

The Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association will mark its 25th anniversary with a celebration at the View Restaurant at President's Golf Course from 6 to 9 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 3.

The View Restaurant is located at 357 West Squantum St., Quincy.

Light hors d'oeuvres will be served and there will be a cash bar. Admission to the celebration is complimentary, and suggested donations may be presented at the door.

The MWNA was founded in 1991 by a small group of interested neighbors and former Ward 3 City Councillor Larry Chretien, with a mission of creating a forum for discussion of issues unique to the Montclair/Wollaston community, and to build a platform for residents to get involved in the community and stay informed. The MWNA continues to further this mission today.

The MWNA is designed to support residents who live in the geography bordered by the Neponset River to the north, Beale Street to the south, Newport Avenue to the east and the Town of Milton to the west.

To RSVP, visit http://www.montclairwollaston.com/25th-anniversary-.html, and submit the form on the right hand side of the webpage. Each individual who submits the RSVP form prior to Nov. 2 will be entered into a drawing for one $100 gift certificate to Stop & Shop. No purchase necessary, and participants must be present at the celebration to be eligible to receive this award.

For more information, call James Coughlin at 617-777-0327, or Howard and Janet Crowley at 617-479-8883.

All are welcome to attend.

Woodward School Opens New Art Studio, Open House Sunday

The Woodward School, a 122-year-old independent college preparatory school for girls located in Quincy Center, recently celebrated the opening of its new art studio as the latest development in the school's long history of giving a voice to young women.

"This beautiful studio demonstrates our continuing commitment to the arts, and the space will inspire the next generation of young women to find their creative voice," said Headmaster Walter Hubley.

Woodward families, alumnae, elected officials, and members of the public attended the opening celebration in Woodward's Wesner Hall Arts Center. Guests toured the art studio with art educator, Anna Wingfield.

"The studio is a wonderful, visually stimulating space that allows students to become immersed in their artwork," said Wingfield.

Woodward's Visual Arts Program complements the school's strong college preparatory program that educates students in grades 6 through 12 in an inspiring, freshly renovated space at Wesner Hall Art Center. On display were works-in-progress by students representing each grade level and class.

Charcoal and india ink still life artworks by the 6th grade class were on exhibit alongside giant Fauvist-inspired animal paintings in acrylic from the 7th grade. Eighth grade works included detail-oriented stippled drawings of sneakers with expressive watercolor backgrounds. The Upper School Advanced Art students dazzled viewers with their works in progress and digital portraits incorporating embroidery and graphite.

The Woodward School Visual Art Program educates girls to express their ideas and explore their own visual language through a large variety of media, including drawing, painting, digital media, photography, printmaking, sculpture, and fiber arts. The works shown at the opening represented the full gamut of expression that Woodward young women explore every day at school.

ARTWORK by Woodward School students Eunbi Kim (above), Class of 2017; and Mizuki Matsouka (right), Class of 2019 are among those on display in the school's new art studio. The Woodward School will host an open house – including the new studio – on Sunday, Oct. 23 from noon to 2 p.m. The school is located at 1102 Hancock St., Quincy.

At a reception held upstairs in Wesner Hall, Hubley said, "In the early years, Woodward pioneered young women's education through both business and civics classes at a time when young women were greatly underrepresented in all professional fields. The Woodward School was teaching girls about public activism and civics 30 years before women had the right to vote.

"Our investment in the visual art program at Woodward demonstrates our commitment as Woodward writes its next chapter of the schools longstanding history in the community. Woodward's next chapter includes embracing the emerging tread in education from STEM to STEAM - a convergence of the Arts, with Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics. Making cross-curricular connections between the arts and sciences throughout our programs, at Woodward, its full STEAM ahead!"

Advancements in technology and leadership curriculum will be announced throughout this coming school year for Woodward, as well as the continued evolution of Woodward's STEAM initiative.

The Woodward School will hold an open house including its new Art Studio Sunday, Oct. 23 from noon to 2 p.m. The school is located at 1102 Hancock St.

Montclair Elementary School Holiday Shopping Expo Nov. 12

The Montclair Elementary School will hold its fifth annual Holiday Shopping Expo Saturday, Nov. 12 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Quincy High School, 100 Coddington St.

The event hosts over 80 local and regional crafters and vendors and features fun activities for the entire family. Santa will visit between noon and 2 p.m. He may be bringing along Mrs. Claus as well.

The event includes raffle baskets with wonderful goods and services from local Quincy and area businesses. Raffle baskets will feature themes for home chefs, sports, moms, dads, kids and more. Each basket is valuated at more than $100.

Free parking is available at the school. QHS is located a short walk from the Quincy Center MBTA station.

The shopping expo is planned by the Montclair Parent Teacher Organization (PTO) and parents from the school and representatives of the PTO will be onsite to welcome attendees.

Admision is $3 and children under age 12 are free. The admission fee benefits the students of Montclair Elementary School by supporting a variety of enrichment programs and field trips throughout the school year.

The full service Presidents Cafe will also be open all day.

Quincy College Hosting Substance Abuse Forum

Quincy College will host a Substance Abuse Forum Thursday, Oct. 20 at 12:15 p.m. in the Lower Level Conference Room at the Quincy Campus (1250 Hancock St., Quincy).

This event is free and open to the public.

The Oct. 20th Substance Abuse Forum and Panel Discussion is hosted by the Quincy College Addiction Awareness Club. Many issues surrounding drug and alcohol abuse will be discussed.

A diverse panel of speakers touching upon all aspects of addiction will lead the discussion including representatives from the Mayor's Office City of Quincy, Mayor's Office City of Boston, and state Sen. John F. Keenan, representing Norfolk and Plymouth districts.

The panel will be moderated by Mary Jane Knox, Advisor to the Quincy College Addiction Awareness Club and will feature the following panelists:

State Sen. John F. Keenan, Norfolk and Plymouth District; Larry Liuzzo, Office of the Mayor, City of Quincy; Jennifer Tracey, Office of the Mayor, City of Boston; Rev. James Hawker, Board of Governors at Quincy College; Det. Patrick Glynn, Drug Task Force, Quincy Police Department; and Celine Cannon of the Gavin Foundation.

Massachusetts community groups will be on hand to provide information on support services including Learn to Cope, Baystate, The Sun Will Rise, A New Way, Gavin Foundation, New England Addiction Outreach, Danny Cleggett of Sober Houses, Recovery Centers of America, Alcoholics Anonymous, and Narcotics Anonymous.

Two Quincy College students who are in recovery will speak at the event as well.

Kristen McLaughlin, president of the Quincy College Addiction Awareness Club, said:

"The Quincy College Addiction Awareness Club is pleased to maintain a safe space on the Quincy College campus for anyone to get support or information. The South Shore recovery community is engaged in an ongoing discussion about recovery and addiction awareness. The Addiction Awareness Club at Quincy College is pleased to be a part of this ongoing discussion via our annual substance abuse forums and our weekly club meetings."

In addition to the Oct. 20th Substance Abuse Symposium, on Nov. 3rd, Quincy College will host a Human Services and Substance Abuse Job Fair at the Quincy Campus for those interested in working in the health and human services field specializing in addiction support.

Jimmy Cannon Sets New NQ X-C Record

Other Strong Showings For Q-NQ Runners Against PN

By JOE REARDON

Jimmy Cannon was all smiles as he walked slowly out of the finish chute, his singlet pasted to him from sweat on a picture perfect day to race. And for Cannon it was the perfect day to take his running up a notch to the next level. When he looks back on the season, the matchup against Plymouth North will stand as one of the fall's benchmarks.

The Quincy/North Quincy harrier had his best race ever on the Pageant

Field 2.5-mile cross country course in last Tuesday's Patriot League dual meet against a tough Plymouth North squad and Cannon knew he couldn't have done much more to cut into winner Nick McNamee's lead.

Cannon did everything to put McNamee away early as he tore through the opening mile in the Merrymount Woods in a scalding 4:49, the fastest opening mile ever on the course for him. McNamee was still there at 2 miles (10:22) before surging ahead to break the course record with his 13:04. Cannon continued to press over the final 400 meters and surged across the finish line in 13:21. The mark was one second better than Mike Mullaney's former North Quincy High School record and now stands as the fourth fastest ever run on the hilly layout hidden off of Furnace Brook Parkway.

"It was a really good race for me," said Cannon, a NQHS senior captain. "I ran exactly to plan. I had to run a really strong second lap and I did that. I knew I couldn't leave the last 400 meters. I really had to book it there. It was very close (at the mile) but I think I was leading by a foot or so. He pulled away going into the woods with a half mile left. The season has been going really well. I'm very happy with it."

Plymouth North was as dominant as ever in the 19-42 win over Quincy-North Quincy, but Geoff Hennessy's crew had strong performances right down the roster. Aidan Golden cracked the top 10 with his 14:40 for seventh place and Ryan Polsgrove, clinched 10th in 15:08. Kevin White was 14th overall for Quincy/North Quincy and Dakota Pendleton rounded out the leaders with 20th. Q-NQ had several strong showings with Brian O'Connell in 22nd and Alex Ouellete nailed down 27th and Tyler Carey finished hard for 30th overall. Nick Manaos was 32th and Tristan Volglesung placed 35th in front of Erick Manter (39th).

Abby Murphy continued her white-hot season with a solid 16:33 for third place behind Plymouth North's Sam Curtin and Kate Fisher as the South Shore squad captured the win 20-35. Curtin, one of the top runners on the South Shore, ran

Squantum Native John Lavery A Cross-Country Coaching Legend

500 Meet Winner A Former Assistant At North Quincy High School

By JOE REARDON

He'll always consider himself a "Squantum kid" despite putting together a legendary career as the cross country coach at Plymouth North.

John Laverty was back at Pageant Field last Tuesday, busy prepping his Plymouth North team for its meet against Geoff Hennessy's Quincy/North Quincy squad. The season has already been a notable one as the kid from Squantum won his 500th meet against Silver Lake two weeks ago to put him in some impressive company among Massachusetts' all-time greatest cross country coaches.

Laverty has returned to take on Quincy-North Quincy every other year for the past 24 years and it's always one of the highlights of the season each time. Laverty was Hennessy's coach for a short time in the 1970s when he was the assistant at North Quincy under head coach Lou Tozzi

"It's great coming back," said Laverty. "Geoff (Hennessy) is one of mine from centuries ago. It's a homecoming. I look forward to it all the years we've had a chance to compete here. It's as good as it gets."

Laverty called the milestone victory "very nice" and he wasn't prepared for the outpouring of congratulations that followed the win. "It is what it is," he said. "When you coach 300,000 years you're going to get 500 wins. Just the interactions with my people were more important. It was really wonderful and heartfelt. I had people from all over the country and all over the world sending me congratulations. This team (Quincy/North Quincy) handed me a card when I got here. How cool is that?"

Hennessy said Laverty is more than a coach to so many of his athletes. "He's obviously very successful," said Hennessy. "He's been around. He's seen and done everything. His kids have had success wherever he's gone. That doesn't happen by accident. John's good people. He creates a positive role model. He's a father figure to everybody. I've known him since he was a kid driving around in a cool

Quincy Sees Some Progress

Presidents Bow To Duxbury, At Plymouth North

By JOE REARDON

Ultimately, the final score was almost secondary to the Quincy football team in last Friday's tilt against all-everything Duxbury at chilly Veterans' Memorial Stadium. It was unrealistic after all to expect the young Presidents to match a Green Dragon team that is currently undefeated and the top-ranked club in Massachusetts.

That's not to say Quincy didn't have specific benchmarks it wanted to reach in the 44 minutes against the iron of the Bay State. Head coach Bill Reardon put together a game plan and had his team focused to carry it out to the best of its ability.

Reardon was extremely pleased with the progress of several of his young players in what was an expected drubbing - 52-7.

"They had to execute the game plan," said Reardon. "Work hard, execute the game plan and the rest will take care of itself. Nobody picked the Patriots to beat the Rams back in 2001. You put together a game plan, execute it and see what happens."

Trailing 45-0 after Duxbury scored on its first seven possessions, the Presidents began to punch some holes in the the Green Dragons once the No. 2 and 3 players on their depth chart entered the game.

"Obviously we struggled in the first half," said Reardon. "Once he (Duxbury head coach Dave Maimaron) put in some of his backups we started to have some success."

Brenden Ward got the crowd going with 5:16 left in the third quarter when he read Duxbury's pass play perfectly and stepped in front of a John Roberts throw for an interception and a first down at the Green Dragons' 22 yard line.

"Brenden Ward's back on the field and he's a spark for us," said Reardon.

Quincy wasn't able to punch in a score, but finally got on the board on its first possession of the fourth quarter. Running back Shorn Hawthorne, who rushed for 41 tough yards, broke a 17-yard run down the left sideline to give the Presidents a first down at the Duxbury 13. Four plays later, Hawthorne broke the plane for a three-yard score with 8:08 remaining in the contest. Mikhayla Foley continued her consistent kicking with the point-after boot to make it 45-7.

"I liked the burst that Shorn showed out of the backfield," said Reardon.

Left tackle Jamal Williams had a breakthrough game and was quick off the snap all game. "That's the expectations we had for him and he broke out of his shell which I was excited about," said Reardon.

Duxbury's superb quarterback Bobby Maimaron completed 9-of-11 passes for 165 yards and five touchdowns in the first half before giving way to Roberts.

Next up for the Presidents is a Plymouth North team still trying to find its identity. "They're struggling," said Reardon. "They're not the team they used to be. It's been kind of a down year

Red Raiders Fall To PS; Visit Scituate Friday

NQ's Defense Plays Tough

By BILL GRIFFIN

The good news was on a night when the offense was limited by the absence of starting quarterback Tim Layden, North Quincy's defense stepped up and gave the Red Raiders a chance to win with a determined, 44-minute performance.

The bad news was the offense was unable to sustain an attack strong enough to reward the defensive effort with a victory.

Plymouth South's lightning-quick halfback Devin Leahy gained 170 yards good for three touchdowns, and the Panthers pushed across a pair of second half scores for a 20-7 win over North in a Patriot League contest Saturday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

"We couldn't get a push up front, and we weren't able to sustain anything on offense," said coach Mark Nutley "We missed Layden for sure. We couldn't do all the things we wanted on offense, but we have to be able to block and run the ball better than we did."

There was little wrong with the defense. North gave territory (313 yards), but in the scoring zone the Red Raiders battled for every yard to stay tied at the half (7-7) and within a touchdown deep into the fourth period. North stuffed five drives in its territory: at the 44, 40, 13, 3, and the 2. North's defense saw a lot of time on the field, but it did not give in easily.

"I liked our defense. We played four tough quarters, and that's all you can ask. We need to do a better job getting off the field on third down," said Nutley.

The defense also accounted for North's points. With the score tied at 0-0 late in the first period, junior Chris Donaghey played centerfield just right from his free safety spot. He jumped the route, intercepted at his own 32, and used his speed to get to the left sideline

He made a pair of ankle-twisting cuts to elude tacklers along the sideline and flew into the end zone for a 68-yard scoring return. Long returns are a family tradition with the Donagheys. His twin brother Connor has two kickoff returns (83 and 90 yards) for TDs this season. It must make for interesting dinner-time conversation.

"Chris played the deep middle and read the play perfectly," said Nutley. "We've defended the pass well this year. We have 12 interceptions in six games."

Chris Donaghey filled in for Layden at quarterback and did a good job, rushing for 30 yards. He narrowly missed connecting with Connor on a long pass down the middle which likely would have resulted in a touchdown with North trailing, 14-7 in the final quarter.

"Chris is an excellent athlete and he ran the ball well," said Nutley.

Leahy scored from the three before halftime and went in from the four and the six (4:33 left in the game) in the second half for the 20-7 final.

"He is a great back. He's a sprinter in track, and he's one of the fastest kids in the state," said Nutley.

Senior linebacker Tom Koch, the team's leading tackler, had double digits in tackles before the half, and for them. We'll try to keep what momentum we have going."

Reardon believes getting past Duxbury on the schedule could give his club a mental lift, knowing it won't play a better team the rest of the way. Moving forward, Reardon and his staff will continue slamming home what the Presidents need to do on the field to get better.

"We have a lot to improve on," he said. "The tackling always needs to get better. We're a young team and I'm making all the calls from the sideline. I'd like them to be able to make those calls on their own on the field when they recognize stuff. We started to do a little of that in the second half. That's what I'd like us to work on. That's how we transition from a young team to a veteran team that will compete. Football will never be as difficult for some of the younger players as it is right now. They keep working at it and it's only going to become easier and easier."

once gain spearheaded the defense. But this was not a one-man show. Junior Jacob Roos, sophomore Nelson Walinjom and junior Alex Pham all had terrific games, especially close to their own goal line.

It was Koch and Roos who shut down Leahy at the two on the final pay of the first half. Walinjom hit hard all night and made a key stop on Leahy to slow a Plymouth South drive at the North 32 in the second half. Pham penetrated and worked well inside against the Panthers' run ning game.

"Tommy was excellent again, and he's really playing banged-up," said Nutley. "Roos, Walinjom and Pham are all underclassmen. Pham is still learning the game, but he has a motor which never stops. Walinjom needs more time in the weight room, but as he grows into his body, he's going to be good."

Sophomore Win Tran and Chris Donaghey (twice) each made open-field, touchdown-saving tackles on Leahy in the secondary. Ty Finn, Liam O'Connor, Ryan Manning, and Nathan Sleiman also had solid games on defense for North.

Sophomore kicker Kieran O'Driscoll supported the defense with five punts for a 32.0 yard average. O'Driscoll also converted the extra point after Donaghey's touchdown.

"He's just been killing punts in practice, and it was good to see him have a good game tonight. He's kicked well for us and has a couple of field goals this year" said Nutley.

Nutley hopes to have Layden back when North (1-5) travels to Scituate (6 p.m.) Friday night.

Woodward School Soccer Wins 2, Moves Into 1st Place

The Woodward School Wildcats Soccer team had a great week, winning their two games played, to take possession of first place in the Girls Independent League.

On Oct. 11, the Wildcats played the Cardinals from The Newman School, on the banks of the Charles in Boston. Woodward dominated the game from start to finish, both offensively and defensively. The score ended in a 4-0 Woodward victory, with two goals coming from Co-Captain Marissa Albanese '17 (Milton), and one goal each from Co-Captain Destiny Joseph '17 (Randolph) and Dana Galloway '20 (Weymouth).

Every team member played quality time, and contributed to the win. This was Goalkeeper Jasmine Bean's '18 (Quincy) second consecutive shutout. The defense was led by junior Kelly Lynch '18 (Quincy), Flori Bouma '20 (Quincy), and Cecilia Hardiman '21 (Weymouth). With this win, Woodward's record stood at 6-0-1.

On Oct. 13, the Wildcats traveled to Lexington for a League match against the Waldorf School. As in the previous game, Woodward was a force from start to finish, at both ends of the pitch. Co-Captain Seniors, Marisa Albanese (Milton), with three goals, and Destiny Joseph (Randolph) with two goals, led the way. Albanese's goals give her a total of 16 goals in eight games.

Again, the defense was special, allowing only two shots on goal, leading way to Goalkeeper Jasmine Bean '18 (Quincy) and her Wildcats achieving their third consecutive shutout, bringing the team to a 7-0-1 record. This was a game where every player had a huge role. Boston Trinity Academy lost to Covenant Christian Academy on Wednesday, which now gives the Woodward Wildcats sole possession of first place in the Girls Independent League.

Woodward has two home games next week on Wednesday and Thursday, facing rivals Covenant Christian Academy and Boston Trinity Academy. Woodward's home games are at Quarry Hills Field, 127 Ricciuti Dr., Quincy.

Quincy Youth Baseball Cal Ripken Majors Holds Annual Banquet

Burke Club Crowned Champs, Jack Nelson Named MVP

The Quincy Youth Baseball Cal Ripken Major League held its annual end of the year banquet Oct. 4th at the Quincy Sons of Italy. It was an evening of celebration as champions were crowned, and individuals were recognized for their great seasons.

Billy Farrell, a Quincy Youth Baseball board member and long-time coach, served as the emcee for the evening. He did a great job honoring all of the winners, and keeping the crowd entertained.

After a Chinese food dinner, the award presentations began with the coaches award winners. These awards are presented to the 12-year old player on each team who is not only a good player, but demonstrates sportsmanship and leadership on and off of the field. Each coach spoke about their selection and presented them with a plaque.

The team winners were:

Following the Coaches Awards, winners from the summer's All-Star game festivities were recognized. Burke Club's Drew Peterson and Zach Donahue from the Quincy Police were awarded All-Star Game MVP Awards for their performance in the 9-inning game held at the end of June. Also, Elks Club's Jack Nelson was presented with an engraved bat for winning the Homerun Derby which preceded the All-Star game.

The two major individual awards were presented next.

First up was the George Richards Award for Sportsmanship, presented each year to a player who is not only a standout on the field, but one who demonstrates what it means to play the game the right way, and serve as a leader not just on his team, but league wide. This year's recipient was Quin Perry from the Quincy Police.

The final individual award for the night was the crowning of the league's MVP. The 2016 winner was Elks Club pitcher/shortstop Jack Nelson.

The team awards were next as league runner-up and championship trophies were presented. In a great championship series, Burke Club won their second straight title by defeating Rotary Club.

The team members of runner-up Rotary Club were presented their trophies by coaches Jim Ross and Paul Kopp. Rotary's squad included: Zach Taylor, Andrew Novak, Nate Hall, Chase Morales, Tommy Gates, Barry Page, Coleman Ross, Liam Hines, Brendan Hines, Kellen Kopp, Timmy Kelly, and Luke Lamonica.

Finally, Championship trophies were presented to Burke Club by Head Coach Dave Murphy and his assistant coaches Chris Pritchard and Roy Peterson. Members of the 2016 Champs were: Leo Lombardi, Will Conley, Neil McCole, Grant Murphy, Dylan Green, Kevin Pritchard, Patrick McDonald, Jackson Murphy, Michael Pollastretti, Adrien Orlando, Drew Peterson, and Danny Freeman.

As the banquet closed the books on the 2016 season, registration will be underway for the 2017 season shortly. Check the QYBSL website (quincyyouthbaseball.com) for important registration dates and info.

the second-fastest time on the course behind Quincy/North Quincy's Emily Bryson with her 15:34.

Murphy was steady once again, but somewhat fatigued after competing in a road race on Saturday. "I felt alright," said Murphy. "He (Hennessy) told me I was the fourth girl and once it started I was with the second girl. I've kept getting better on the hills all season. We do them so much."

Quincy-North Quincy has been gathering momentum with its athletes rounding into prime shape and Tuesday only reinforced that all is well moving forward to the final month of the season. "They all ran PRs. How can I complain," said Hennessy. "Plymouth North is the best team in the league and they keep proving it. We keep getting better and every week we keep getting closer to what I want as far as time goals. When we get into bigger meets, things may even out."

Hennessy wasn't surprised by the continued improvement of the Quincy/North Quincy's top two harriers.

"The kid (Cannon) runs the best time ever at North," he said. "I'm looking at things like average time, gap and total time for five kids. Abby's only a sophomore and she's quite savvy enough. She's not a pace runner. She races. So when we tell her to back off and follow people that's kind of unnatural for her. But that will come with time.

"All we can do is keep improving every week and we are. We have a system of workouts and the system works. We have forty more days of cross country. Some of these kids didn't go to summer camp, some didn't do summer camp and if they did, they didn't do a lot. I think we're doing fine. The last time we ran against these guys we got buried."

Quincy/North Quincy captured the sixth and seventh positions in the girls' race with Devin Hiltunen and Kara Polsgrove running their best races of the fall. Mairead Kelly was 12th for the team and Eve Anderson finished in the top 20 at 17th.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

EXERCISE OFFSETS THE EFFECTS OF SITTING

If you spend a large part of your day sitting, you may be concerned about the ill health effects associated with a sedentary lifestyle. Research has linked sitting for long periods of time with an increased risk of obesity, cardiovascular disease, increased blood pressure, high blood sugar, certain cancers, and early death. However, an international study recently published by The Lancet shows that one hour of daily exercise can offset these health risks. This research provides hope for those who feel that their sedentary lifestyles have consigned them to ill health and early death. If physical limitations prevent you from exercising as much as you would like, chiropractic treatment can help to get you on your feet.

Do you spend a lot of time sitting? Are you exercising enough? Regular chiropractic care makes good sense to counteract a sedentary lifestyle. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we believe that regular checkups should be included in a person's personal healthcare program. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we are currently accepting new patients. We always address a problem's cause, not just its symptoms. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. People who sit for long periods and are mostly inactive are 28% to 59% more likely to die early than active individuals who also sit for prolonged periods.

car. We go way back. He was always a fan with what we were trying to do at North Quincy. I'd come back from college and he was the assistant coach. That's where it all started."

Laverty is especially thrilled with his former athletes who have gone on to have success at the collegiate level. Seven former harriers are currently competing, the best being Stonehill College All-American Nicole Borofski, who recently captured the New England title.

So how are things different since Laverty ran at North Quincy before graduating in 1965? "The kids are faster," he said with a laugh. "Back in my day both cross country courses were on the roads. There wasn't a tree to be found. We were cavemen back then. We didn't know any better. I'd get up every day and run as hard as I could out to the high school and back in Squantum. That's the only training I knew. It wasn't proper, it wasn't right. It was the only thing I knew."

He's also happy for the career Hennessy has had in Quincy. "Geoff's done a great job on his own," said Laverty. "He didn't need me to help him along. They've had a lot of great athletes here, at Quincy and North and he's a huge reason for that."

The John Adams Statue Campaign

ally came out against us. Local TV stations covered it. It became an interesting fight.

"We even got a letter of support from John F. Kennedy as well as the governor, senators and congressmen."

But there was also strong opposition that eventually scuttled the campaign. "A lot of people thought it was kind of nice but some people didn't."

Critics of the statue idea at the time said Adams and his son were worthy of such a monument but argued they were unnecessary.

One group opposed was the Board of Curators at the Quincy Historical Society. They were quoted in the local press as saying:

"There are few if any communities that can offer a visitor as true an impression of famous persons as Quincy does of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams. Their birthplaces, their home of later years, their church and tombs, and many other places and mementoes of them and their family, together present the Presidents as living people in a uniquely complete manner."

The Board also said the state had better things to spend its money on than two statues for the Adams presidents. One estimate put the cost at $100,000.

And there were others who said statues had gone out of style and were strictly 'for the birds.'

We know that isn't true today. They continue to be erected for leaders of all walks of life including the political and sports arenas.

In retrospect, Dunleavy credits Henry Bosworth with keeping the campaign's momentum going until the very end.

"We would have been dead a lot sooner if Henry hadn't really supported it and written about it and given us a lot of coverage," he says. "As a columnist he was free to point out some of the reasons these people were opposing us and they took it out on him, too, that he was supporting us. It became a controversy about something that you wouldn't think would be a controversy."

Henry's columns chronicled the students' drive for the statue campaign. Originally, the students wanted to erect statues for both John Adams and his son, sixth President John Quincy Adams.

In one of his columns, Henry wrote about a former Bay State resident who was living in Kansas. She was more than furious that the students' drive was being met with some serious opposition.

"As a Massachusetts native I am ashamed of Quincy and its small people who belittle the statues of its one-time BIG people. The Adamses should be memorialized even though the family today hesitates to sanction such an honor," wrote Muriel Standley in a letter to then Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa and reprinted partially in Henry's column.

"It's not up to them to say anything about it. People have a right to honor great people. Mr. Mayor, read this and do something to get the statues erected. Those young people in Quincy High are the future Americans. Encourage them to look upward as they'll be statesmen, too."

Looking back, Dunleavy says the students and Henry Bosworth thought the statue idea was a 'no brainer.'

"But we ran into first the hidden opposition and then they were out in public. When you read some of the things that they said like statues were for the birds – this was a group of adults attacking a bunch of high school kids. We were surprised.

"I think the kids that got involved in this thought it was a lot of fun and the right thing to do. We didn't think of it as a political thing but it turned into that.

"It was a learning experience; certainly I learned a lot."

Dunleavy credits Henry with setting him on his career path. He became interested in newspapers because of Henry's support and while attending college worked for him as a correspondent helping him cover the South Shore. Later Dunleavy became a reporter and news editor of the Boston Herald before moving to the Boston Police as assistant to the commissioner then head of Boston's Public Safety Office for Mayor Kevin White.

Dunleavy later served as senior vice president of Boston's World Trade Center and then Boston Garden before becoming general manager of Regan Communications. He is now retired and lives in Marina Bay with his wife, Hilary.

Quincy eventually got its first John Adams statue - some 16 years after the first effort ceased.

In September of 1977, a granite statue of the Second President was dedicated by the Freedom Park Association and today stands at Freedom Park on the Burgin Parkway near the Dimmock Street intersection.

This statue is carved of fine-grain Westerly granite from Rhode Island and stands on a Quincy-granite base. It was sculpted by Franco M. Marchini who modeled the statue from a painting done in 1798 by Gilbert Stuart. It was paid for in part by a $8,000 grant from the American Revolution Commission.

SOME SIXTEEN YEARS after a group of Quincy High School students unsuccessfully campaigned for a public monument to Second President John Adams, this granite statue was dedicated to Adams in September, 1977 by the Freedom Park Association. Today, this statue - made of fine-grain Westerly granite from Rhode Island – stands on a Quincy-granite base overlooking Burgin Parkway in Freedom Park near Dimmock Street. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

IN 2001, a second statue to President John Adams was unveiled and placed at McIntyre Mall near City Hall. Commissioned by the Quincy Partnership, the life-size bronze statue is a companion statue to a similar bronze statue of Abigail Adams and a young John Quincy. That statue, also commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and sculpted by Lloyd Lillie, will be relocated along with the John Adams Statue in the new Hancock-Adams Green park next year. The park will include a new statue of John Adams as well as one for John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Quincy Sun File Photo/Robert Noble

The second Adams statue – a life-size portrayal made of bronze – was commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and created by noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie. It was unveiled Oct. 30, 2001 – the 266th anniversary of John Adams' birth. Four years earlier, the Partnership dedicated the Abigail Adams and young John Quincy statue also created by Lillie.

It's not a stretch to say the statue effort – to some degree – can be traced back to those ambitiously civic-minded students like Dunleavy more than a half century ago.

He agrees the city is a lot different today and does a much better job at promoting the many historic sites Quincy has to offer.

"Whether you look at the park being built out in front of City Hall and the Church of the Presidents – tying those things together and promoting the city's history – those sort of things didn't happen back then. There was no real interest in promoting the history of the city."

Today, thousands flock to the Adams National Historical Park annually. The site consists of the Adams Birthplaces on Franklin Street as well as the Old House on Adams Street.

The city's tourism effort got a bump after JFK was elected President. First Lady Jackie Kennedy requested that some of the Adams artifacts from the "Old House" be brought to Washington, D.C. for display at the White House.

McCullough's book on Adams further ignited the Adams legacy both here and nationwide. One could reason more people probably know about John Adams, his contributions as one of this country's Founding Fathers, and the Adams family today than any other time in history.

The statue controversy – while long over in Quincy – still conjures up memories for a special group of local high school students.

"We recently had our 55th reunion and it was interesting how many classmates – some of whom came from California and Florida and were out of town – how many asked, 'hey, did they ever get the statue? Is it up?'

"Kids in the class remember the fight about a John Adams statue," Dunleavy says. "Even after all these years they still remember."

Quincy Point Congregational Collecting Coats for CoatBoston

The Quincy Point Congregational Church Missions Committee has a lot of information to share this October.

For the month of October the church will be collecting coats for the City Mission Society's CoatBoston. CMS's goal this year is to distribute over 3,000 coats to school children this year.

To donate bring in a new coat any Sunday this October to add to this operation to help keep children warm.

The church also collects non-perishable food items every month for Interfaith Social Services in Quincy. The donations are due to the church the third Sunday of every month for delivery to ISS.

The Missions Committee announces the "Just Peace Players" will perform at the church on Sunday, Oct. 23rd starting at 10 a.m. worship. Their performance is, "Women of the Greatest Generation: Stories of Faith, Hope, Love and Courage." Everyone from the community is invited to this event where you can hear the amazing stories of women who lived through World War II.

On Saturday, Oct. 22nd from 6 to 8:30 p.m. in the upstairs fellowship lounge the Christian Education Committee is hosting a Halloween Party. All are invited.

Wear a costume, enjoy fun and games and watch a special Halloween movie. The Halloween party is a free event but if you are inclined, preceding the party, the St. Joseph's Holy Name Society is also hosting a pasta supper in the QPCC Social Hall after the 4 p.m. Mass at St. Joe's.

Tickets for supper: $6 per person (Maximum $20 per family).

Registry Of Deeds Internet Research Available

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds consumers that they don't have to spend time and money to drive to the Registry to view land records since they are available online via the Registry's internet-based document research system at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

"Consumers can see up to 6,000,000 scanned land document images dating back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793. These documents are available via our internet-based document research system.

"Providing secure, accurate and accessible land record information, coupled with our on-site customer service center, is critical to our success at the Norfolk County Registry of Deed," O'Donnell said.

Elaborating on the Registry's research capabilities, O'Donnell said, land record information can be researched by multiple options, including the name of the property owner and property address. Consumers can access our internet-based document research system for many endeavors such as, to determine property ownership, to research land titles, to review land plans (only plans which are recorded at the Registry) and finally to confirm that documents affecting a person's property – such as a mortgage discharges – have been duly recorded.

The Registry's website also provides information on how to obtain copies of land documents. The Registry copy charges are $1 per page, plus an additional $1 per document for postage.

"Providing first-class customer service is a core objective of the Registry," O'Donnell said. "Norfolk County residents and businesses deserve a Registry of Deeds that provides them with access to land record information in an easily accessible and consumer friendly manner. The Registry website www.norfolkdeeds.org does that by bringing the Registry records into your homes and businesses."

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. Offering First-Time Homebuyer Workshops

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. will offer two-part workshops for first-time homebuyers in November.

The first part of the course will be taken online; following completion of the online component, participants will attend an in-person class to be held at the Winter Gardens apartment complex (lower level community room), located at 45 Winter St. in Quincy.

In-person workshops will be held on the following dates:

• Saturday, Nov.5: 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

• Saturday, Nov. 19: 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The in-person workshop will give participants an opportunity to meet and hear from real estate brokers, attorneys and loan originators. Attendees also will have an opportunity to learn about NeighborWorks' down payment assistance programs and speak to a lender about different mortgage options.

The registration fee for the workshop is $20 per person. To register and pay online, visit www.nwsoma.org or call (508) 587-0950 x34 for more information.

Ask Barbara Graceffa: 'Secretary Of The Interior'

While watching a recent home show, they were discussing the role of line in interior decorating. Can you share more on this subject, please? Debbie

BARBARA GRACEFFA

Along with color, scale, texture, and a few others, line is one of the basic elements of design.

Vertical lines imply strength and stability. When used in décor – like vertically striped wallpaper, a column, or art hung in a straight vertical line – they can make a room seem taller. Tall furniture can have the same effect – anything that drives your eyes up.

Horizontal lines are soothing and restful. They can make a room seem wider. To achieve this, try a few horizontal paint stripes (not necessarily short or the same height), a striped area rug, or a few long ledges on the wall holding family photos.

Diagonal lines suggest movement. Try putting your sofa on an angle in the room. In terms of trompe l'oeil, these lines can also make the room seem larger by "stretching" the walls out. You'll get the same effect with wood flooring or tiles placed on the diagonal.

Then there are curved lines. Because much of the interior of our homes is rectilinear – walls meet the ceiling and flooring at 90 degree angles, your kitchen cabinets are rectangular, etc., anytime you can introduce curves into your décor, it offers softness. So add a curved countertop to your kitchen island, an oval coffee table or mirror, or even choose fabric with dots, circles, and curved lines to counter all the right angles in your home.

How do you know when your furniture is the right scale? Mrs. R

If the term "scale" intimidates you, think of proportion. Look at the proportion of a chair in relation to your own body size and in relation to other objects in the room. For example, a dainty women's desk chair would be out of scale if used in a home where the majority of occupants are over six feet tall. That same chair would also be out of scale in a library full of floor-to-ceiling bookcases or perched next to an extra-large armoire.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Public Notice
2016 – 249

Presently pending in the Ordinance Committee and Downtown and Economic Committee of the Quincy City Council to be passes at a later date:

BE IT ORDAINED by the City Council that the Quincy Municipal Code is hereby amended as follows:

In Title 17 ZONING, Section 8.0 SPECIAL DISTRICTS is hereby amended by adding the following section:

8.5 TRANSIT ORIENTED DISTRICTS

8.5.1 Purpose. The purpose of this Section is:

1. to provide greater opportunity for the construction of quality developments on and adjacent to land used for transit facilities by providing flexible guidelines which allow the integration of a variety of land uses consistent with and taking advantage of such transit uses in one development;
2. to encourage mixed-use development in areas accessible to public transit;
3. to provide a predictable, clear and understandable process for the review of new development within the Transit Oriented Districts;
4. to promote and create jobs, housing inventory and affordable housing in conformance with Section 7.1 of this Ordinance;
5. to enhance the architectural character of the Transit Oriented Districts;
6. to improve traffic access and circulation; and
7. to promote uses within the Transit Oriented Districts which are complimentary with the nearby transit uses.

Transit Oriented Districts shall be overlay districts on the zoning map and, for any land within a Transit Oriented District, a developer may choose to conform either to all the controls which govern the underlying zoning district or to the Transit Oriented District, and if electing the Transit Oriented District, such development shall be subject to the development controls and processes set forth in this Section 8.5.

The following Transit Oriented District overly districts provided for by this Section 8.5 and shown on the maps attached to and adopted with this Article 8.5 are hereby established at the:

- North Quincy Station of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority ("MBTA");
- Wollaston Station of the MBTA; and
- Quincy Adams Station of the MBTA.

This Section 8.5 does NOT establish a Transit Oriented District at the Quincy Center Station of the MBTA.

8.5.2 Uses. Within Transit Oriented Districts, buildings and premises may be used for TOD Permitted Uses subject to compliance with the requirements of Sections 8.5.3

8.5.5. TOD Prohibited Uses shall be prohibited in Transit Oriented Districts. Any other use may be permitted in a Transit Oriented District with a special permit from the Planning Board pursuant to Section 8.5.6.

8.5.3 Dimensional Requirements. Within Transit Oriented Districts, the following dimensional requirements shall apply:

1. Minimum Lot Size (acres): 5 acres.
2. Minimum Lot Area per Dwelling Unit (sf): 325.
3. Maximum Number of Stories: 10.
4. A development parcel may consist of multiple legal parcels which may be owned by different parties and which are not required to be contiguous.
5. There shall be no minimum or maximum dimensional requirements in Transit Oriented Districts other than as set forth in this Section 8.5.3. Upon the issuance of a Certification of Consistency for a proposed development in a Transit Oriented District, the dimensions reflected on the reviewed site plan shall be deemed to be in compliance with the Ordinance.
6. The dimensional requirements in a Transit Oriented District may be reduced or modified as permitted by the Quincy Planning Board in accordance with its consistency review, if the Quincy Planning Board determines that such a reduction or modification is consistent with the purpose of Transit Oriented Districts and this Section 8.5.

8.5.4 Off-Street Parking. For purposes of these requirements, a residential studio unit shall be considered to be a one bedroom dwelling unit. Off-street parking facilities in Transit Oriented Districts shall be provided at the following minimum amounts:

1. Residential: 1 per dwelling unit
2. Retail: 3 per 1,000 square feet of gross floor area.
3. Restaurant: 1 per 10 seats.
4. Assembly: 1 per 10 seats.
5. Institutional: 1 per 2,000 square feet of gross floor area.
6. Office: 1 per 600 square feet of gross floor area; provided, however, that for new construction with a net increase in gross floor area of 10,000 square feet, parking shall be provided at a ratio of one space for every 400 square feet.
7. Shared Parking: Because of the proximity of an MBTA transit station in a Transit Oriented District, where a mix of uses is proposed within a development parcel and, where the uses in question have peak user demands at different times, up to 50% of the required amount of minimum parking set forth in this section 8.5.4 may be provided via a shared parking arrangement.

8.5.5 Consistency Review. All development and redevelopment of all uses and all structures within Transit Oriented Districts (if the owner or developer of the proposed development or redevelopment has elected to permit such development or redevelopment in a Transit Oriented District and Sections 8.5.1 through 8.5.4 rather than the underlying zoning district) shall require a determination by the Quincy

Planning Board of consistency with this Section 8.5. Development or redevelopment in a Transit Oriented District is exempt from the requirements of Section 8.1 of this Ordinance regarding development in the Flood Plain Overlay District, including any requirement for a special permit; the treatment of impacts on the flood plain shall instead be taken into consideration by the Planning Board during its consistency review of the applicable Transit Oriented District development.

8.5.6 Special Permit Granting Authority. Where the following is otherwise required for a development in a Transit Oriented District (which development or redevelopment is being permitted pursuant to the Transit Oriented Overlay District and Sections 8.5.1 through 8.5.4) the Quincy Planning Board is hereby designated as the special permit granting authority for such matters within Transit Oriented Districts:

1. All applications seeking a finding pursuant to G. L. c. 40A, § 6; and
2. All applications for special permits for use pursuant to Section 8.5.2 above.

8.5.7 Special Permit and Consistency Review Criteria. The Planning Board shall not approve a special permit or make a determination of consistency for a project in a Transit Oriented District proceeding under a Transit Oriented District and this Article 8.5, unless it finds that all of the following criteria have been met:

1. The project conforms with the TOD Design Guidelines.
2. For mixed-use projects, the applicant must establish that the proposed uses are to be located within structure(s) in a manner that promotes ease of use and access.
3. Where appropriate, housing shall be a component of any large scale commercial development.
4. Where appropriate, the common areas of the development, both internal and external shall, shall be accessible to the public. Reasonable restrictions on public access as appropriate can be established by the applicant or its successor in interest. This concept shall not apply to common areas exclusively serving the residents of residential developments.
5. The location of buildings and features, dimensions of the site and the development, traffic impacts and aesthetic features of the proposed development shall not be detrimental to vehicular access and circulation within the site and the area leading to and surrounding the development parcel.
6. There will be no nuisance or serious hazard to vehicles or pedestrians.
7. Adequate and appropriate facilities (including, but not limited to trash, snow storage or removal, parking and loading) will be provided for the proper operation of the proposed use.

Added definitions:

"TOD Design Guidelines" means the guidelines developed by the city of Quincy Planning Department intended to enhance the connectivity between street networks and adjoining uses located at or near transit stations in the city. These guidelines address landscape design, sidewalks and pathways, signage, building façade treatments, parking strategies, and a variety of land uses.

"TOD Permitted Uses" means any of the following: Retail Uses (all); Restaurant Uses (all); Multifamily Dwellings; Mixed Use; Essential Public Services; Municipal Office or Administrative Facilities; Municipal Parking Lot; Public Market; Miscellaneous Commercial Uses (all except for those uses included in TOD Prohibited Uses); Drive In Uses (all); Laboratory or Research Facility; Public Transportation Terminal and parking facilities related thereto; Swimming pool or tennis court; Nonresidential Accessory Uses (all except for those uses included in TOD Prohibited Uses); and Parking area or garage or structure for the parking of passenger cars of employees, customers or guests of establishments or of residents of a multi-family dwelling.

"TOD Prohibited Uses" means any of the following: Boarding House; municipal waste disposal area operated by the City or under contract to the City; Adult Use Establishments; Body Art Establishment; Marina; Funeral Home or Crematorium; Motor Vehicle Uses; Warehouse, Wholesale and Storage Uses (all); Industrial Uses (all except for those uses included in TOD Permitted Uses); Transportation Related Uses (all except for those uses included in TOD Permitted Uses); Residential Accessory Uses; and Storage or Display or Abandonment of more than one cubic yard of the materials described in Section L of the Table of Use Regulations.

Modified definition—

"Certification of Consistency" means a determination made by the Planning Board with respect to the consistency of the design, parking elements and other components of (i) an Urban Renewal Use with the Urban Renewal Plan in accordance with the procedures set forth in the Urban Renewal Plan, or (ii) a proposed project in a Transit Oriented District with the provisions Section 8.5.

Additional Code Modification—

Section 8.1.9 of the Code is hereby modified by replacing the introductory sentence thereof with the following:

"8.9 Special Permit. In the FOPD, the Board of Appeals (or, in the case of the QCD-10 or QCD-15 Districts, the Planning Board) may grant a special permit for any use or structure allowed in the underlying district, subject to the following; provided, however, that Urban Renewal Uses and TOD Permitted Uses are exempt from this requirement:"

Pending in the Ordinance and Downtown Committee of the Quincy City Council to be passed at a later date.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, Oct. 9, at approximately 11:10 a.m., Officer Dan Clark was dispatched to the lobby of the Quincy Police Station to speak with a victim of a past family incident on West Squantum Street.

Upon arrival, the officer noted that the female victim had slight bruising under her left eye/cheek area. As Officer Clark looked at the bruise, the victim said she had additional bruising on her left hip and on her left arm. The officer requested an ambulance respond to the Police lobby for an evaluation of her injuries.

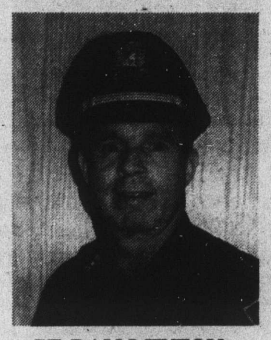
As they waited, the victim told the officer that she has been married since 2013 and they both work for the same company in Boston, however, in 2014 her husband was transferred to the Philadelphia office. She said that her family is still in China, so they agreed that her mother in law could come here to take care of their one year-old child.

The victim said that her husband was angry about money issues, claiming that she was spending too much money. The husband returned to Philadelphia but was still angry and said, "I will drive to Boston to kill you."

On Oct. 7, her husband surprised her by coming home around midnight. The victim believed that her mother in-law knew he was coming home. The victim was in bed at the time her husband came home and he immediately grabbed her by the ankles and slightly pulled her down the bed. She did not think anything of it until it was followed by anger, threats and vulgar statements made in Chinese. She was unable to translate the content of the threats in English to the officer.

They both went to sleep but the next day while doing housework, the hostility grew again and her husband went to attack her but the mother in law restrained him. They ended up back in the bedroom where the husband pushed her three times. He then hit her in the left hip area. The husband then went to sleep and the victim took their daughter to the playground.

She didn't want to return to the house so she took the bus to the JFK/UMASS MBTA station, then turned back to go home. While on the bus, her husband kept calling her but she didn't answer. When she returned home, her husband said he wanted to talk, so they went into the bedroom.



LT. DAN MINTON

Her husband immediately became angry so she tried to get out of the room, but he slammed the door shut and kept her there. She started screaming for help but no one came to her assistance, including her mother in law. She was then thrown to the floor and onto her back, where her husband "sat on my belly and punched me." The victim was able to stand back up and said she thought about escaping and pulling a fire alarm, or knocking on a neighbor's door, but was worried that he would overpower her back into the apartment. She tried to exit the apartment several times, but her husband grabbed her and pulled her back into the house. She added that her mother in-law even helped in preventing her escape by blocking the door and physically restricted her from leaving.

The mother in-law told the victim that it was permissible for a husband to hit his wife if he wants. At this point, the victim grabbed the mother in law and told her husband that if he pulled her down, then his mother would fall too. The husband then grabbed her and both women fell.

Just after the incident, the husband grabbed their one-year-old and left with his mother and minutes later, he returned alone. The victim was on the phone with her parents in China and hung up. The husband then pushed her to the floor, sat on her and began strangling her. He angrily said to her, "I came up here to take your life, you will see."

She was still able to talk and said to him, "I beg you. Think about your daughter." She then yelled in English and Chinese for help. The husband then placed a pillow over her face briefly and then lifted it off. He ordered her to slap herself across the face, which she did. He then grabbed her cellphone, looked around the room for a little bit, and then went outside to find his mother.

The victim went to her iPad which she hid, and sent a distress message to her father. The husband then came back in and found her on the iPad. He angrily told her, "Do not do any more sneaky stuff." The incident calmed down and it was time to go to sleep. Her husband said to her, "You better kill me while I sleep because I will kill you when I am awake." He added that he would die with her.

Even though her husband tried to get her to sleep in the bedroom, the victim opted to sleep in the living room. The next day is when the victim came to the Police station. Brewster X-ray 5 medics examined the victim accompanied by Officer Cheryl Potter, who took photos of the victim's injuries. An emergency Restraining order was granted by the on call judge from Brighton District Court.

Based on the above information, officers were dispatched to the residence to check on the well being of the one-year-old and to place the husband and mother in-law under arrest. The victim was concerned that they were planning to leave the state because they had packed the car with clothing, including their daughter's.

Sergeant Daniel Flaherty arrived on scene and directed officers to place the two under arrest. At the station, the husband and mother in-law were served restraining orders.

The husband, a 32 year-old Quincy resident, was charged with: strangulation or suffocation, kidnapping, intimidation of a witness, threatening to commit a crime (to kill) and assault and battery on a household member.

The mother in-law, a 57 year-old Quincy resident, was charged with: assault and battery on a household member and Intimidation of a witness.

Nice Work!

'Just Peace Players' Program At Quincy Point

The "Just Peace Players" will perform Sunday, Oct. 23rd starting at 10 a.m. worship at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St.

Their performance is, "Women of the Greatest Generation: Stories of Faith, Hope, Love and Courage." Everyone is invited to this event where you can hear the amazing stories of women who lived through World War II. Refreshments will be served after worship in the fellowship Hall

For the month of October we will be collecting coats for the City Mission Society's CoatBoston. CMS's goal this year is to distribute over 3,000 coats to school children this year. So bring in a new coat this October any Sunday to add to this operation to help keep children warm.

On Saturday, Oct. 22, St. Joseph's annual Pasta Supper will be held after the 4 p.m. Mass at St. Joseph's Church. The supper will take place in the QPCC Social Hall, 444 Washington St. and is sponsored by the St. Joe's Holy Name Society. Tickets are $6 per person with a maximum of $20 per family.

Also on Saturday is a Halloween Party from 6 to 8:30 p.m. in the upstairs Fellowship Lounge at QPCC. The party is sponsored by the Christian Ed Committee at QPCC. Wear a costume, enjoy some games, watch a special movie and have some Halloween fun.

Houghs Neck Congregational

The Sunday morning service of worship at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave. starts at 10 a.m.

Liturgist Laurel Wainwright will call to worship and read the scripture lesson. Pastor Felix Carrion will lead the service and preach the sermon "First Comes Love."

Steve Reed, Minister of Music will play the organ and piano and lead the choir. Michelle Paul will play the flute. Following the service a coffee hour is hosted by Nancy Jacobs.

Amy Ross leads a yoga class on Thursdays at 7 p.m. and this Saturday, Oct. 22 at 10 a.m. Bring a mat, water and $5.

This Thursday at 4 p.m. the Transition committee meets in the Gordon Room.

The Trustees will meet on Tuesday, Oct. 25th at 7 p.m. in the Gordon Room.

Choir rehearses every Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the choir room.

Thanksgiving Food Drive

Each November, Quincy Community United Methodist Church conducts an annual Thanksgivings In-Gathering of Food. This year's in-gathering will be held Sunday, Nov. 20.

"Every year the goal is to fill a parishioner's van full of food," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of the church. "So far, we've succeeded every year."

The in-gathering is in addition to the church's monthly food drives for Interfaith Social Services Food Pantry. Those who would like to contribute to the food drive but cannot bring donations on Sundays can call the church office at 617-773-3319 and arrangements will be made.

Beth Shalom-Blue Hills To Screen "The Soloist"

Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills is about to launch its "Third Thursday Community Service Mitzvah Night" program, with its first event a screening of the acclaimed 2009 film "The Soloist," starring Jamie Foxx and Robert Downey Jr., on Thursday, Oct. 27, at 7 p.m.

Since the "Third Thursday..." initiative is about doing Mitzvot (good deeds) for others, this film was chosen because it is based on the inspiring true story of a Los Angeles newspaper reporter who discovers a brilliant and distracted street musician, and attempts to help both him and the rest of the underclass of LA have a better life.

There is no admission charge for the movie, and the public is welcome.

The synagogue's "Third Thursday..." program will be kicked off with a 10 a.m. brunch on Oct. 23rd, bringing to fruition an idea that has been on the synagogue's agenda for many years, and is now being implemented within and outside our new home. It is hoped the program will provide service to the community by both congregants and community members, and will include and involve others, including schools, houses of worship and community organizations.

The screening of "The Soloist" will be at 7 p.m. in the new synagogue at 18 Shoolman Way (off Lodge St.) in Milton. There is parking available, and overflow parking may be available on Pleasant St. or Edge Hill Rd. There is no parking on Maitland or Lodge Streets.

For more information about the film screening, the 'kickoff' brunch, or the synagogue's "Third Thursday Community Service Mitzvah Night" program, please call 617-698-3394, email office@BethShalomBlueHills.org, or visit www.BethShalomBlueHills.org.

Bethany Congregational

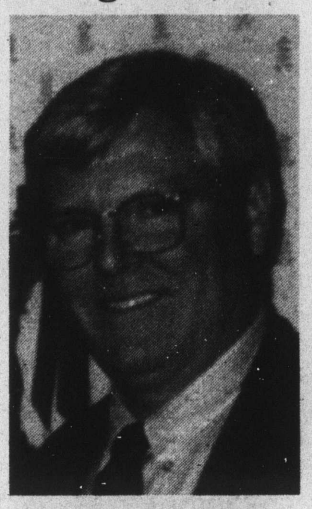
Dr. Richard D. Houghton, 70

Dr. Richard D. Houghton, 70, died Oct. 12 at his home in Quincy.

"Dick" was a devoted son, brother, husband and father throughout his prime years. After graduation from Boston State College, he was a teacher at Abington Junior High in Massachusetts and teacher at Walpole and Concord State Prisons before being graduated from New England College of Optometry in 1975.

He joined the practice of Dr. Robert Moody in Waterville, Maine, beginning a long and distinguished career serving his patients and establishing Kennebec Eye Care. Nicknamed "The Captain," he loved leading outdoor activities including boating on China Lake, campfires, and surrounding himself with friends and family. Dick was a quiet, confident and introspective man who spoke most lovingly through his actions.

Richard is survived by his mother, Mary M. Houghton of Quincy; son Richard and daughter-in-law Yulia Houghton, son Charles Houghton; wife Rosemary



DR. RICHARD D. HOUGHTON

G. Houghton; granddaughters Sarianna and Miroslava Houghton; brother Donald and sister-in-law Lynne Houghton.

The Mass of Christian Burial was Tuesday at St. Ann's Church, Quincy. Visiting hour prior to Mass was at the Lydon Chapel for Funerals, 644 Hancock St., Quincy. Interment in Milton Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to Hospice Memorial Healing Garden of HVWA, 304 Maine St., Waterville, ME 04901.

Francis Edward Coughlin

Francis Edward Coughlin died Friday, Oct. 14, of an extended illness.

Born June 2, 1942, his friends called him Frank and his family called him Eddie. Raised in St. Gregory's parish in Dorchester, he moved to West Quincy in 1970 with his loving wife, the late Elizabeth (Reeves) Coughlin, where they raised their two daughters as active members of St. Mary's parish.

Eddie had a quick wit and loved to tease, he lit up the room at family parties and never missed an opportunity to be a prankster or pull a practical joke. He spent his free time in his garden, fishing, and boating with his late father as a member of the Milton Yacht Club. Above all, he enjoyed his family, especially his granddaughters.

He retired as a senior designer for the Polaroid Corporation in Cambridge where he helped pioneer the processing of instant photography and secure patterns revolutionizing that industry. Previously his work included collecting results data of the United States Nuclear Program in the South Pacific at Christmas Island.

Eddie is survived by his loving family: his daughters, Kathleen Galvin and her husband Sean of Quincy, and Patti McIntyre and her husband Dan of Abington, his sister Ann Fay of Canton, and his cherished granddaughters Shannon Galvin of Quincy and Victoria McIntyre of Abington.

He will also be lovingly remembered by his extended family: Mary and the late Bob DeMole of Burlington, Bob and Carol Reeves of South Dennis, William Reeves and Millie Dateo of West Roxbury, the late James Reeves, and many nieces and nephews.

Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend the visiting hours on Wednesday 4-8 p.m. in the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. A Celebration of Life Service will be held in the funeral home at 9:15 a.m. on Thursday prior to the Funeral Mass in St. Mary's Church, Quincy at 10 a.m. Burial in Milton Cemetery.

Donations in memory of Francis may be made to St. Mary's Parish, 95 Crescent St., Quincy, MA 02169.

See www.Keohane.com or call 1-800-Keohane for directions and online condolences.

Marjorie Irene O'Leary

Marjorie Irene (Smollett) O'Leary, a lifelong West Quincy resident, passed away on Friday, Sept. 30, at 100 years of age.

A 1934 graduate of Quincy High, she is believed to have been the last surviving member. In her younger years, she worked as a telephone operator for New England Telephone and Sheridan's Dept. Store in Quincy and was a member of the Telephone Pioneers of America and St. Mary's Senior Citizens. A founding member of the Emerald Nuts, a social club for West Quincy mothers, Marjorie also enjoyed knitting and crocheting and worked the St. Mary's Bazaar for 35 years.

The beloved wife of the late James O'Leary, Marjorie was the loving mother of James O'Leary and his wife Sharon of Quincy, Robert O'Leary and his wife Debra of CO, Gerard O'Leary and his wife Dianna of Whitman, Mary Kati Shea and her husband Kevin of Tewksbury, Barbara Ashey and her husband Travis of Searsport, ME and the late Edward O'Leary, and is also survived by 11 grandchildren, eight great-grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

On Tuesday, Oct. 4, a Funeral Mass was held at St. Mary's Church in W. Quincy. Burial was at St. Mary's Cemetery.

Donations in Marjorie's memory may be made to St. Mary's Church, 115 Crescent St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Honor Flags To Fly At Mount Wollaston Cemetery

During the next several months, Quincy Veterans Services office in conjunction with the Quincy Cemetery Department will be working together to honor deceased veterans who have served this country.

"Starting this month we will be flying a donated flag over the veterans lot at the World War II Memorial Flag Pole at Mount Wollaston Cemetery," said George Bouchard of Quincy Veterans Services. "We are asking anyone who is interested in donating a flag of a loved one to fly in their honor over our beloved city. When the loved one's flag is displayed we will contact the family to let them know that their loved one is being honored during that time.

"If you're interested in donating a flag contact Quincy Veterans Services at 617-376-1192 or drop it by our office at 24 High School Ave."

This month's flag is in honor of John H. Evans, a U.S. Army veteran of WWII and Korea, Bouchard noted.

The housing production plan says 9.6 percent of housing units in the city are currently designated as affordable – less than the 10 percent threshold in Chapter 40B of Massachusetts law – and includes as a goal an increase in affordable housing to meet that threshold. With the 225 units in place, the 10 percent mark would be met in 2018, Muollo said Monday.

Muollo in September said Quincy is already in compliance with Chapter 40B, because affordable housing is located on 1.5 percent of all developable land in the city. In communities not in compliance with Chapter 40B, developers can propose projects that would be exempt from certain local zoning regulations.

Affordable housing is for residents who make less than 80 percent of the median income for the Greater Boston area, and is meant to ensure they do not spend more than 30 percent of income on housing. The median income for a family of four in Greater Boston is $98,100.

Residents who spend more than 30 percent of their income are considered cost burdened, and those spending more than 50 percent severely cost burdened. Muollo said 43 percent of city residents are considered cost burdened, and 20 percent severely cost burdened. Those numbers are for all income brackets – Muollo said a household making $1 million a year could be considered cost burdened.

The housing production plan predicts Quincy's population will grow by 11 to 16 percent by 2030, putting the total population between 102,000 and 106,000. Muollo said that increase would be seen across all age groups, with the most growth in the 65 and older age bracket.

To accommodate the burgeoning population, the housing production plan estimates 6,200 to 8,100 new units of housing – both affordable and market rate – are needed by 2030. Over the five years of the plan, through 2020, 4,000 units are needed, including 2,500 either recently built, under construction, or going through the permitting process.

"That demand is really across the spectrum," Muollo said. "They're both price-restricted affordable housing [and] market rate. There is demand for both single-family and multi-family formats."

The housing production plan includes several goals to boost the creation of new housing units, including affordable housing, over the next five years.

One goal would be to revisit the city's zoning ordinance, including the affordable housing ordinance. The plan suggests considering the creation of a Chapter 40R smart growth overlay district, which would allow denser development with a high percentage of affordable units. Additionally, the plan suggests that accessory dwelling units be allowed by-right in Residential C zoning districts and by a special permit in Residential A and B.

In regards to the affordable housing ordinance, the plan suggests the city should look to increase the number of required units a developer must set aside as affordable – currently, 10 percent of units must be designated as such. Developers also have the option of making a payment to the Affordable Housing Trust Fund instead of creating the new affordable units, and the housing production plan suggests reviewing how that contribution is determined.

Muollo said the Affordable Housing Trust Fund has $2.5 million in it presently, and up to $14 million in payments are anticipated for projects now in the pipeline.

The housing plan further suggests the city create and maintain a list of parcels, including city-owned land, with redevelopment potential that would be appropriate for housing. It also suggests the city assess vacant and blighted structures, and identify areas where in-fill development would be appropriate.

"Quincy is approximately 99 percent built-out, it is a coastal community and the opportunities for new growth are few," Muollo said. "What the plan suggests is to identify certain properties in the community that are underutilized."

Councillor Joseph Finn said the housing production plan is not a static document, but one that identifies further action the city needs to take.

"Although this is called a housing production plan, in reality it really lists a lot of outputs" he said. "This plan is not a static document that's going to be put on a shelf…this is calling for certain things we want to develop as we move forward."

"This is not just about the affordable housing," Finn added. "This is about housing generally within the city of Quincy and what we want for our community to reflect the various diverse people that make it up."

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall suggested the city encourage the creation of new housing dedicated to senior citizens in light of the anticipated growth of in that age group.

"In the years forthcoming, we are anticipating an explosive – and I mean explosive – growth rate in the ages of 55 to 74," he said. "There is a tremendous need for senior housing."

City Honoring Vietnam Veterans

In keeping with nationwide events commemorating the 50th Anniversary of the Vietnam War, Quincy would like to honor the men and women of our City, living and deceased, who served in that war and their families.

Over more than a decade of war, through one of the most challenging missions we have ever faced, these men and women served with honor, valor and distinction and defined an entire generation of Americans. This recognition for these men and women and their families, the City, through the Quincy Veterans Services Office will consist of the presentation of a Certificate of Honor and Appreciation, along with a special "Challenge Coin."

To accomplish this, the Quincy Veterans Services Office is asking that Vietnam veterans and/or their families call the office at 617-376-1192 and leave their names and branch of service and then be present for the Veterans Day Observance. Thank you for your service and if you have any questions, please do not hesitate to call us.

Director

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The pitter-patter of all those Sheep feet means that you're out and about, rushing to get more done. That's fine, but slow down by the weekend so you can heed some important advice.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're in charge of your own destiny these days, and, no doubt, you'll have that Bull's-eye of yours right on target. But don't forget to make time for family events.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be prepared for a power struggle that you don't want. Look to the helpful folks around you for advice on how to avoid it without losing the important gains you've made.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Congratulations! You're about to claim your hard-earned reward for your patience and persistence. Now, go out and enjoy some fun and games with friends and family.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat might find it difficult to shake off that listless feeling. But be patient. By week's end, your spirits will perk up and you'll be your perfectly purring self again.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A problem with a co-worker could prove to be a blessing in disguise when a superior steps in to investigate and discovers a situation that could prove helpful to you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) This is a favorable time to move ahead with your plans. Some setbacks are expected, but they're only temporary. Pick up the pace again and stay with it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your creativity is recognized and rewarded. So go ahead and claim what you've earned. Meanwhile, that irksome and mysterious situation soon will be resolved.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A new associate brings ideas that the wise Sagittarian quickly will realize can benefit both of you. Meanwhile, someone from the workplace makes an emotional request.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It might be a good idea to ease up on that hectic pace and spend more time studying things you'll need to know when more opportunities come later in November.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A relatively quiet time is now giving way to a period of high activity. Face it with the anticipation that it will bring you some well-deserved boons and benefits.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Go with the flow, or make waves? It's up to you. Either way, you'll get noticed. However, make up your own mind. Don't let anyone tell you what choices to make.

BORN THIS WEEK: You like to examine everything before you agree to accept what you're told. Your need for truth keeps all those around you honest.

A NEW HOME – The 20,000-pound Quincy granite gazing ball was moved Monday to its new location in the center of the "Walk of Names" that is under construction in front of City Hall. Riggers from Shaughnessy & Ahern Company in South Boston used a 100-ton capacity grove hydraulic crane to lift the ball and its 12,000-pound pedestal from a corner of McIntyre Mall to the new location about 25 yards away. Both the ball and the pedestal are made of Quincy granite. More on Page 4. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

John Adams Birthday Ceremony Friday

By SCOTT JACKSON

A wreath-laying ceremony to mark the 281st birthday anniversary of John Adams at noon Friday at the United First Parish Church will cap off a weeklong celebration of the second U.S. president in his hometown.

This year's celebration includes a presidential wreath tour. The wreath being used in Friday's ceremony will make its way through key sites in Quincy this week: The Thomas Crane Public Library on Monday, the Adams National Historical Park's visitor center on Tuesday; the McIntyre Government Center Wednesday, and the Quincy Historical Society Thursday.

On Friday morning, the wreath will be at the Old House at Peace field, part of the Adams National Historical Park at 135 Adams St. A procession of the wreath from the Old House to the church at 1306 Hancock St. will commence at 11:30 a.m.

Students, Driver Injured In Bus Crash

By SCOTT JACKSON

Five elementary school students were taken to South Shore Hospital Tuesday with minor injuries after the bus they were in crashed into a Quarry Street building.

The drivers of the bus and a second vehicle involved in the crash were also taken to local hospitals with minor injuries.

The crash took place around noon Tuesday, an early release day for the city's elementary schools. Students from the Charles A. Bernazzani Elementary School were on board the bus when it was involved in the crash, according to Quincy police Sgt. Karyn Barkas.

The bus, Barkas stated, struck telephone poles, a fire hydrant and a stone wall before hitting the house. The police department's accident reconstruction team was on scene Tuesday afternoon to investigate the crash. The investigation remained underway as The Sun went to press Tuesday evening.

Barkas said the five students were taken to the hospital with minor injuries.

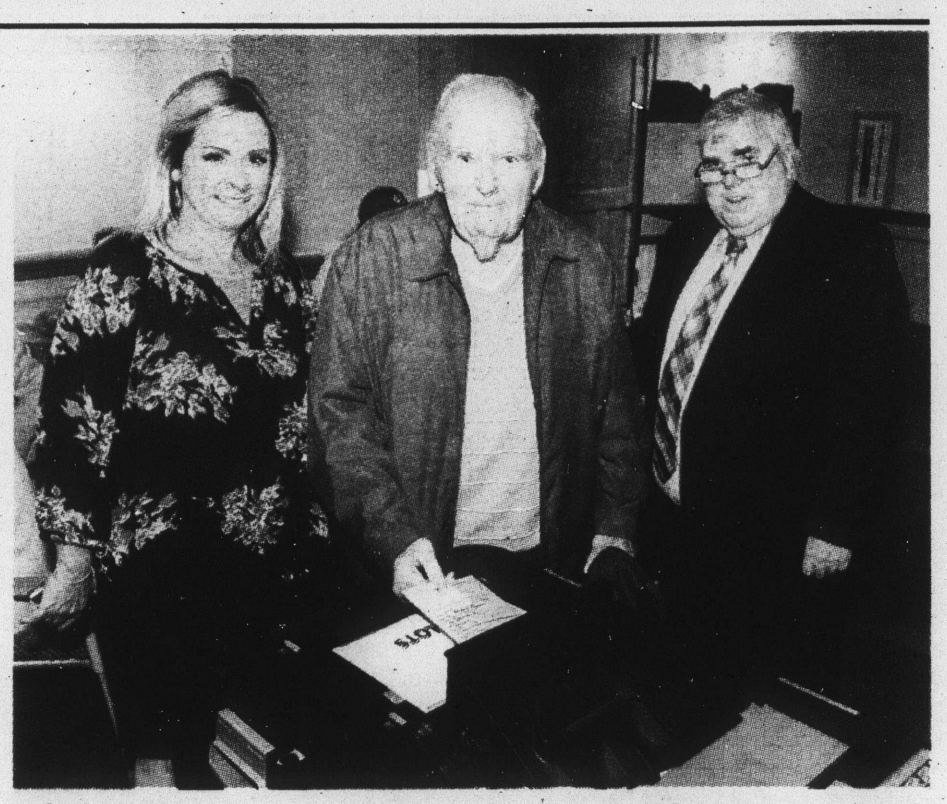
EARLY VOTING began Monday in the lower level of the McIntyre Government Center (Old City Hall) and will continue there on weekdays through Nov. 4. Voting will take place there from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays, and 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays. North Quincy High will be open for early voting Saturday, Oct. 29, from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Voting there will take place in the school's main lobby.



EARLY VOTERS who cast ballots Monday included 87-year-old Arthur Morrissey and his son, Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey. With them is Quincy City Clerk Nicole Crispo. ing the early voting period. On Monday, the first day of early voting, 538 residents cast ballots. An additional 168 did so by 11:30 a.m. on Tuesday.

"We've had a great, great outcome so far," Crispo said. "If we keep going at this pace we're going to exceed expectations."

Early voting in Quincy was originally set for the atrium of the McIntyre Government Center, but was moved to the lower level, which is accessible from the atrium by both an elevator and staircase. The lower level provides more space and better flow than the atrium, Crispo said.

"It's going wonderful. There is plenty of room down there, the setup is great and there is plenty of parking," Crispo said. "It's going smashingly well."

Parking for early voters at City Hall is available behind the Munroe Building. Crispo said city employees who normally park there have been asked to find alternative parking over the next two weeks so voters have more spaces to use. Two handicap spaces are available in the lot, and Crispo has requested a third be designated.

Early voting hours at the McIntyre Government Center are 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays, and 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays.

North Quincy High School will be open for early voting on Saturday, Oct. 29, from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Voting there will take place in the school's main lobby.

Registered voters also have the option to request an early voting ballot through the mail. Simply fill out an application and mail it to Quincy City Hall, Election Department, 1305 Hancock St. Applications are available on the secretary of the commonwealth's website: sec.state.ma.us/ele.

"Please note, however, once a voter has cast an early voting ballot, the voter may no longer vote at the polls on Election Day," Crispo said.

"For the first time in Massachusetts, the first choice all voters will make is which day to vote. Early voting will make the most fundamental right of our citizens more convenient than ever to exercise. We encourage all of our citizens to exercise that right and take advantage of the opportunity to vote on their schedules."

O'Brien Towers Residents Return To Building

By SCOTT JACKSON

The residents of O'Brien Towers who were displaced last week as crews worked to fight beg bugs in the building have all been allowed back in.

Twenty-two tenants of the Quincy Housing Authority property in Germantown were moved out of the building Oct. 17 after bed bugs were found in their apartments, including in the walls. The residents were placed in hotels while exterminators attacked the pests with a combination of high heat and chemicals.

At first, it was expected that the residents would be out of the building for four days, but the process took slightly longer than expected, QHA Executive Director Jim Lydon said. All 22 residents were allowed to return by Saturday, when the last 12 moved back in.

Lydon said last week's extermination went well, and said he was optimistic about its results. Specially trained dogs will be used to inspect O'Brien Towers again in about 30 days; the dogs are used quarterly in all housing authority properties, and it was they that detected bed bugs in the 22 units at O'Brien Towers.

While he is optimistic about the work done last week, Lydon said it would be unlikely to rid O'Brien Towers of bed bugs. Part of the problem, he stated, is that residents living there take in used clothing and furniture infested with the critters.

"I don't think there is a 100 percent solution to this problem," Lydon said. "People are bringing these things into the buildings."

The issue isn't unique to O'Brien Towers. Lydon said a woman at Tobin Towers on Clay Street recently reported finding bed bugs in her apartment. Maintenance workers determined she brought the bugs into the apartment when she took in two bags of used clothing.

Lydon said the same methods – dogs to find beg bugs and high heat and chemicals to kill them – will be used going forward at all properties. The Quincy Housing Authority has retained the services of A-1 Exterminators of Lynn to fight the persistent pests, and three other companies were consulted prior to last week's effort at O'Brien Towers to determine ensure the best methods were being used.

The housing authority initially expected its eradication effort last week, including the tab for placing residents in hotels, would cost $40,000. Lydon said it would likely cost more than that because it took longer than expected. The agency did not receive any special federal or state funds for the work.

The driver of the second vehicle was taken to South Shore Hospital, and the bus driver to Quincy Medical Center.

Other students on the bus were taken to the Sons of Italy at 120 Quarry Street to be reunited with their parents.

Quarry Street was closed to traffic between Garfield Street and Smith Street because power lines were knocked down in the crash, and the street was expected to remain closed for at least several hours.

Communicating With Alzheimer's At Kennedy Center

Communication is more than just talking and listening - it's also about sending and receiving messages through attitude, tone of voice, facial expressions and body language.

As people with Alzheimer's disease and other dementias progress in their journey and the ability to use words is lost, families need new ways to connect.

Join Jennifer Hoadley of the Alzheimer's Association at the Kennedy Center on Tuesday, Nov. 15th at 10:30 a.m. Explore how communication takes place when someone has Alzheimer's, learn to decode the verbal and behavioral messages delivered by someone with dementia and identify strategies to help you connect and communicate at each stage of the disease. This is another workshop offered as part of Mayor Koch's initiative to make Quincy a Dementia Friendly Community.

Registration is required for this presentation as space is limited. To register call the Kennedy Center at (617) 376-1506.

Homeowners with equity:

Roll all your debt into one new loan

You have a mortgage. And a decent amount of equity. You also have high-rate credit card debt, maybe an equity loan payment, auto loan, student loans or other debts you'd love to combine into one loan at today's still low rates. That's what you get with a 15-Year Mortgage from Colonial Federal Savings Bank. Some people like this idea because it makes life simple and streamlined. For others, it's a fresh start and a real weight off their back. Is it right for you? Come see us or call Angela Blanchard, Vice President/Retail Lending, at 617-471-0750. Or apply online at colonialfed.com. Have another loan or term in mind? Call us. We may be able to help.

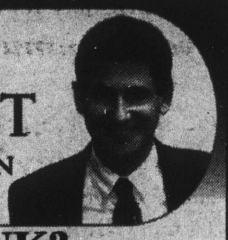
Ask the GEMOLOGIST
BY JEFFREY M. BERTMAN
GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST



LOVE PINK?

There is something delicate, feminine, and seductive about the gemstone that is named after the legendary gem scholar George Kunz. Kunzite is the youngest member of the spodumene family of gemstones, having been discovered in 1902 in California. This sexy, translucent stone falls squarely into the pink-is-hot category, with its fine, delicate pink nuances and hints of violet. Strongly colored examples of this pink gemstone are quite rare and, thus, correspondingly valuable. Curiously, Kunzite is often found in association with morganite and pink tourmaline, which are other popular pink gemstones. It seems that beauty likes company. In fact, Kunzite gemstones can hold their own with pink sapphires as accent stones. If you love pink, you will love Kunzite.

Kunzite is one of the gems that are available in relatively large sizes at affordable prices. When making a purchase, however, you should remember that it is first the color and then the clarity which determines its value. The more intense the kunzite's color, the more valuable it is. For the latest trends in jewelry, stop by our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center, or call us at 617-773-3636.

Granite Ball The Centerpiece - Again

The centerpiece has taken center stage.

Again.

The historic Granite Ball was moved Monday – albeit just 35 yards or so from its previous spot outside City Hall. Using a 100-ton capacity grove hydraulic crane, four riggers from Shaugnessy & Ahern Co. in South Boston lifted the 11-ton Quincy granite "gazing ball" from a corner of McIntyre Mall and relocated the impressive sphere to the center of what will become the new "Walk of Names" entrance in front of City Hall.

The riggers and crane also lifted the original pedestal that the ball has sat on for 91 years. The pedestal itself weights 12,000 pounds.

Monday marked the fourth time in 11 years that the sphere has been moved. And it's probably safe to say it will remain at its new home for a very long time.

The current location – in fact – is not too far from where it was originally located.

The ball was a gift from the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association to commemorate Quincy's 300th anniversary as a settlement on June 12, 1925. Known as the "gazing ball" because of its high polish finish, it was originally located next to the old City Hall (now the James R. McIntyre Government Center) – only a few dozen yards away from where it is today.

"The Granite Manufacturers wanted to express their external gratitude for the stone that came from Quincy's native hills and brought prosperity to their families and the city," says City Historian Thomas Galvin. "Its chief purpose was to keep alive the sentiments and feelings of our forefathers and to foster at all times a high regard for the principles of liberty."

But 12 years after it was dedicated, on June 10, 1937, the ball was moved to the Fore River Bridge traffic rotary. It remained there until March of 2005 when then Mayor William Phelan ordered it back to City Hall. It was first transported to Barre, VT for repairs and re-polishing until it was brought home to Quincy and placed outside City Hall again on June 13, 2006. Many probably remember it as the centerpiece of Constitution Common for many years. That's virtually in the same spot that it was moved to on Monday and just a few dozen yards from where it originally stood.

The ball was temporarily relocated about 35 yards away from the Constitution Common site a few years ago in preparation of the new "Walk of Names" project that is currently under construction. With that project well underway and new bricks being put down, it was ready to be moved again to its new spot as the new walk's centerpiece just outside the front steps leading to the glass annex building of City Hall.

When the ball was first dedicated in 1925, it was unveiled by Maxine Louise Swingle, daughter of quarry owner Jonathan Swingle, who donated a 25-ton block of granite from which the 11-ton ball was carved from. When it was re-dedicated June 13, 2006, Swingle's granddaughter, Joanne Swingle Hennigan, did the unveiling honors.

The City Hall location was not the only site considered for the ball back in 1925.

One suggested site was the Thomas Crane Public Library. After some careful consideration, the Granite Manufacturers Association opted for City Hall and placed in the ball in the custody of the mayor in office.

Perley Barbour, who was the mayor of Quincy in 1925, accepted the ball and said:

"Here, by our City Hall, where are conducted the affairs of the people, it has been placed on firm foundation and here it will stay as long as you have so generously given it so desire."

But on June 10, 1937, Mayor Thomas Burgin had it moved to the Fore River rotary which was named Wigglesworth Circle in honor of Cong. Richard Wigglesworth. He served in Congress for 30 years from Nov. 6, 1928 until Nov. 13, 1958.

The ball and pedestal were lifted from a location about 35 yards from where they had been placed about three years ago to make way for the new walk and adjacent "Hancock Adams Green" project. From left: Foreman Patrick Morrissey, Alie Shaughnessy, Mayor Thomas Koch and Paul Crook. Shaughnessy is holding a sign that was used on the site when the ball was first moved to City Hall in 1925. The ball was later relocated to Fore River traffic rotary but returned to City Hall in 2006.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1925 real photo postcard reproduction of the Quincy Rotary Club's float in the Quincy Tercentennial Parade. The parade was a celebration of the 300th anniversary of Quincy's first settlement at Mount Wollaston. It drew 140,000 spectators when the city's population was only about 50,000. This prize-winning entry was one of 182 floats in the parade. The large gear rotated as the self-powered float moved forward. Standing in front of the gear with the straw hat was John 'Joe' Quinn, president of the Quincy Rotary Club in 1925. The Rotary motto on the side of the float: "He Profits Most, Who Serves Best," has been replaced by a newer and more commonly used motto: "Service Above Self." Organized in 1922, the Quincy Rotary Club is one of over 31,000 Rotary service clubs in 170 countries around the world. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Council, Superintendent To Meet On NQHS West Wing Construction

Anticipating a record attendance next fall that will overtax the present structure at North Quincy High School, Superintendent James N. Muir will meet with the City Council in a plea for action on the construction of the west wing of the North Quincy High School.

The City Council has already received a transfer order for $4,000 from Mayor Thomas J. McGrath to meet the cost of the plans for the new wing, but this order is in the finance committee.

In his plea for action, Supt. Muir is expected to present similar figures to the City Council that he has already given to the school committee, showing that the annual growth of the school's attendance makes the addition necessary for the fall of 1933.

PARKING LAWS DRIVE OPENED BY POLICE

Police tags, those disturbing little slips of pasteboard the motorist finds attached to their motor vehicles, acquired a new set of teeth when Police Chief Ernest N. Bishop instructed members of the police department to enforce all traffic regulations throughout the city. The new order is the result of a recent conference between Mayor Thomas J. McGrath and Quincy merchants who requested that parking regulations be strictly enforced in the retail district of the city.

Chief Bishop warned, "One tag means warning; Two tags means court!"

Handicapped Spaces Are For The Handicapped Only

OP ED

October is Disability Month in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. A great time to remind people about parking in handicap parking spaces.

The only people that can utilize these spots are people who have a handicap license plate or a handicap placard. In order to obtain a handicap plate or placard, you have to file paperwork with the Registry of Motor Vehicles and your doctor has to authorize it.

Some disabilities are not easy to see.

A person with a serious heart condition could have a disabled plate or placard. Additionally, the space with the white lines between or next to handicap parking spaces should not be parked in either. These areas are for those in wheelchairs that need to get out of their vehicles and need ramps to get from the vehicle to the ground. If you block that space, the ramp cannot be used and you are keeping people who really need it from getting out of their vehicles restricting their movement and independence.

Lately, I have seen a great number of people abusing handicap parking spaces in Quincy. A lot of my friends who are disabled, those who have disabled children or family members have also.

People that have handicap placards and license plates need handicap parking. It doesn't matter if you are exchanging papers after an auto accident, that you have three little kids, or that you are just going to be a minute to run in the store or pick up a pizza. These are just a few of the excuses I have heard and the responses from people when I speak to them are astonishing and inconsiderate.

When you park in a handicap parking space and you are able bodied, you are taking the space from a person who truly needs it and breaking the law. The fine for parking in handicap spaces is high.

Depending on the city or town you park in, the fines can range from $100 to $300 per incident. In the City of Quincy the fine is $150 per incident. Maybe Quincy should consider increasing the fine to deter people who are parking in handicap parking spaces. There certainly needs to be more enforcement in order to educate the public.

If you see someone parking in handicap parking that does not belong there, get their license plate number and call the Quincy police non-emergency line at 617-479-1212 to turn them in.

There are automatic vehicles that are being tested right now that will bring a great deal of independence to those who are blind or visually impaired. Be thankful that you don't need a handicap parking space and please be considerate of those who do.

5th Annual Best Chef Raises Over $170,000 For QCAP

Paul Wahlberg Takes Best Chef Title

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) raised more than $170,000 in its fifth annual Best Chef competition held recently at the Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy.

Paul Wahlberg, chef and owner of Alma Nove and Wahlburgers, took home this year's Best Chef title. Chef David Todisco of the Tavern at Quarry Hills and Granite Links Golf Club was the People's Choice winner.

"Quincy has a great history of coming together to help and lift up other families who may be struggling in our community," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP's chief executive officer. "The Best Chef event is a great example of that. We could not be more grateful to the chefs, restaurants, judges, and our guests, supporters, and donors for helping us to raise more than $170,000 to benefit low-income families in Quincy and the South Shore."

Chef Wahlberg and Chef Todisco were joined by 2014 winner Chef Tony DeRienzo of Abby Park and Novara, and new to the Best Chef competition, Chef Greg Jordan of the Quarry Restaurant in Hingham, and Chef Jose Munoz of The Fours Quincy.

The challenge was to use typical ingredients distributed at QCAP's Southwest Community Food Center, the organization's food pantry, to create a gourmet dish. This year's menu – which was kept secret from the chefs until they were unveiled at the event - included canned peaches, kale, fresh tomatoes, oatmeal, catfish, and butternut squash. The chefs were further handicapped by their cooking equipment, which included only a convection oven and a handful of portable burners, and the clock, ticking away 30 minutes to cook.

The dishes were rated on taste, plating, and how well they used the secret ingredients. The panel of judges included Chazy Dowaliby of Chazy Dowaliby & Associates; Barbara Isola, Quincy School Committee member and host of "Into the Frying Pan"; Kerry Byrne; and guests Sandi Siami and Mike Burns, who bid and won the last two seats at the judges' table. Quincy native Marc Bertrand of 98.5 The Sports Hub served as the night's emcee.

The chefs were paired with a celebrity chef, who helped to rush ingredients for their chefs from the Mobile Pantry. Donning the celebrity chef aprons were QCAP friends and supporters from the Rotary Club of Quincy: President, Andrew Oatway, Esq.; Steve DesRoche; and Frank Trainor. Representing the Quincy Lions Club were President Amy Huber and Michelle Lydon.

Event proceeds will benefit QCAP programs, which serve more than 22,000 unduplicated individuals every year. In addition to the Southwest Community Food Center, services include adult education and workforce development, QCAP's Financial REACH Center, financial education, including money management and credit repair counseling, job coaching and placement, Head Start/Early Head Start, quality and affordable early education and care, family engagement activities, heating assistance and weatherization, homebuyer education, mortgage foreclosure counseling, affordable housing, homelessness prevention, and housing services.

Major sponsors include: Rockland Trust, Bank of Canton, State Street, Mutual of America, Stop & Shop, Wells Fargo, Woodard & Curran, Anodyne Medical Services, Eastern Bank, Granite Links Golf Club, Granite Telecommunications, The Law Office of George Burke, Loomis, Sayles & Company, MountainOne Bank, Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lehane, Marshall Wealth Management, Quincy Mutual, South Shore Savings Bank.

'Bottle-Flipping' Contest At Pageant Field Saturday

Quincy's first "bottle-flipping" contest will take place Saturday, Oct. 29th at Pageant Field from 4 to 6 p.m.

Contestants in three age categories (elementary school, middle school, and 14+) will vie for the first title of this new craze.

The event is being sponsored by the Quincy Red Stockings AAU baseball team as a fundraiser to help send their players to Cooperstown next summer.

Contestants will donate $10 per entry and can enter the contest up to three times. Contestants will be given 10 "flips" with extra points given for "caps." The top scores in each division will advance to a winner-take-all final round. Champions will receive a trophy and a t-shirt designating them as the 2016 "bottle flipping" champion of Quincy.

There will be three categories; elementary school, middle school, and 14 years of age and older. A winner from each division will be selected. You do not have to be from Quincy to enter.

"This will be a fun way for children of all ages and abilities to participate in this fun activity that admittedly drives parents a little nuts," said Red Stockings Manager Dave Murphy. "We are trying to be creative and have fun as we raise much-needed funds to help send these boys on a once-in-a-lifetime baseball experience. I encourage entire families to come down, have fun, and support the cause. We guarantee that once you try it, even as an adult, you will have fun."

'Punkin Chunkin' Fundraiser Nov. 5 To Benefit Boy Scouts

Boy Scout Troop 6 in Quincy is holding a "Punkin Chunkin" fundraiser Saturday, Nov. 5 at Pageant Field from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Organizers said last year's event was a "smashing success" so the boy scouts will be doing it again this fall.

To participate, bring left-over Halloween pumpkins and Jack-o'-Lanterns to Pageant Field from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 5 and launch them with Troop 6's trebuchet and giant sling shot.

Each launch is a donation of $5. No pumpkins bigger than 10 lbs.

Also, bring any unwanted extra candy and the Boy Scouts will send it to soldiers overseas.

All proceeds go to support Boy Scout Troop 6 Quincy.

Holiday Floral Designs

Richard O'Meara of Cedar Grove Gardens will be at the Kennedy Center on Wednesday, Nov. 2 at 10:30 a.m. to demonstrate how to create holiday decorative arrangements using flowers, ribbon, twigs and other items.

All arrangements will be raffled off at the end of the demonstration.

Admission is $10 and payment must be made at time of registration. For more information call the Kennedy Center at (617) 376-1506.

Church Craft Fair Dec. 3

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold a holiday craft fair Saturday, Dec. 3 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Vendors will offer a variety of items, and a homemade luncheon featuring hot dogs will be available.

Tables are $30 each. Call 617-773-3319 to reserve a table.

The church building is handicapped accessible at the front doors nearest the flag pole.

For more information, call 617-773-3319.

Seaside Gardeners Fair Oct. 29

The Seaside Gardeners of Squantum will hold its annual Faire for All Seasons Saturday, Oct. 29 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., North Quincy.

Pat's Cafe will be open from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. offering clam chowder, corn chowder, soup, hot dogs, and desserts. Tea, coffee and water will also be available.

Crafts, books, "seaside treasures," and baked goods will be for sale.

THOMAS SANIUK and DULCY BLOMBERG

Dulcy Blomberg Wed To Thomas Saniuk

Thomas Saniuk married Dulcy Blomberg Oct. 11 in Quincy.

Thomas is a 30-year resident of Squantum where he graduated from Quincy Vo-Tech in 1998. He also received his Eagle Scout Rank with Boy Scouts of America Troop 1 at Quincy Point Congregational Church and his Eagle Scout Project has been on display at the Quincy Elderly Service Community located near the Old Squantum Naval Yard at Marina Bay.

Thomas also was a volunteer with Quincy Community Television for over 10 years. He is also a devoted father of two wonderful children Stanly, and Randy.

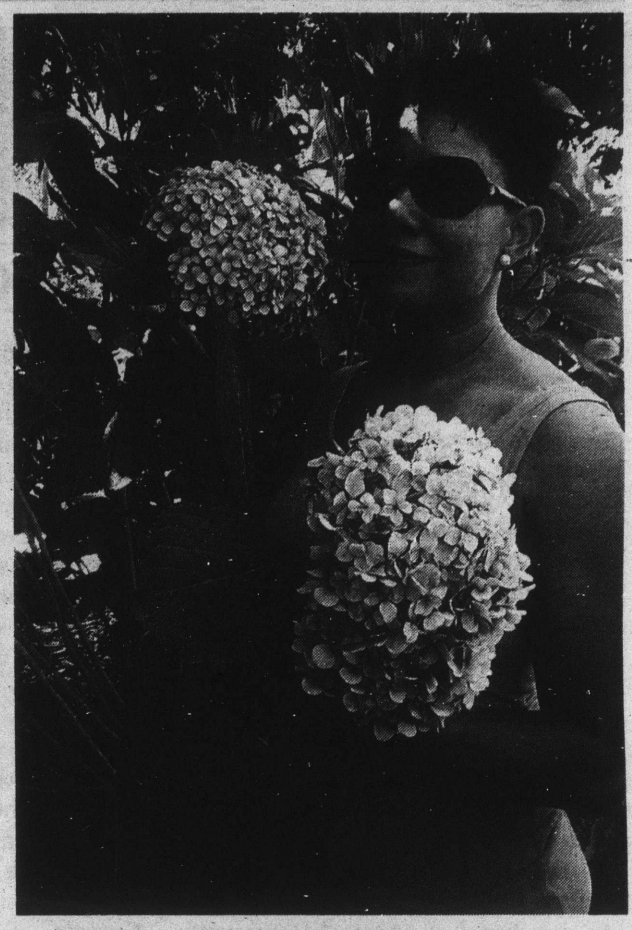
His wife Dulcy is an avid equestrian rider and boating enthusiast and looking forward to becoming a stepmother. The newlyweds are planning to purchase a new home in Quincy to begin their new lives together with their two children.

Granite Raises $5,215 For Youth Wellness Program

Granite Telecommunications, LLC, a provider of communications solutions to businesses, raised $5,215 for TRUE Fit, a nonprofit dedicated to creating an accessible form of health and fitness in communities around the United States, especially in low to moderate income communities where a barrier to access has formed as a result of the high costs associated with the health and fitness industry. In pursuit of its mission TRUE Fit offers clinics and programs that educate youth and empower them to live a healthy lifestyle with whatever resources are available to them.

Tom Schneider, President and founder of TRUE Fit, said, "We are grateful for Granite in giving us the ability to provide many more TRUE Fit clinics."

At TRUE Fit clinics participants are introduced to athletic movements that are easy to learn and can be done without a high-cost gym membership, expensive equipment or guidance from a costly personal trainer. Insight on nutrition fundamentals and time management are also a focal point of the clinics.



ANGELA DIAS

Angela Dias Walks 'Catwalk For The Cure'

Angela Dias of Quincy, an eight-year breast cancer survivor, took part in the "Catwalk for the Cure," a fashion show fundraiser to benefit Susan G. Komen Southern New England.

The Catwalk, held at The Innovation and Design Building in Boston, featured a cocktail party and fashion show featuring breast cancer survivors wearing the latest fashion trends from Boston-based designers.

Dias was among the models who walked the runway. She said the event is a "great opportunity to raise awareness in the community, meet survivors, and promote young, local designers."

When she found out that she had breast cancer, Dias said she remembers feeling devastated and alone.

"I didn't know if I was strong enough to fight cancer," she explained. Although, as time went on, Dias says that breast cancer actually helped her build inner strength, gave her a purpose to live, and made her want to make a difference in other people's lives.

Making a difference is one of the reasons why she became involved with Komen Southern New England, and participates in its events, such as the "Race for the Cure" and Catwalk for the Cure.

Dias remembers the organization, its staff and volunteers fondly for helping her while going through cancer treatments. She appreciates all the work it does to provide opportunities to educate others on breast cancer and organize events to raise funds for a cure.

Chewy Banana Nut Cookies

By MARIE

I sometimes tell you that a recipe is so easy – but today's cookie recipe is the easiest one I have ever done – ever. You won't believe that only 3 ingredients can make such a chewy cookie!!

RECIPE

1 Cup of quick cooking oats
2 Ripe bananas (Mashed)
¼ Cup chopped Walnuts

Pre-heat oven to 350 degrees

In a bowl place the oats, add mashed bananas and fold in chopped walnuts. Mix until well blended.

Line a cookie sheet with parchment paper. Drop one dozen mounds on the cookie sheet and then flatten each one. Bake in 350-degree oven for 12 to 15 minutes. Let cool for a few minutes before removing from cookie sheet and then place on wire rack to cool (makes 12 cookies.)

White Chili

By SUSIE

Here is another chili recipe that is a bit different than most.

First of all, it is made with white beans. I want to share as many chili recipes with you over the fall and winter because pretty much everyone loves some type of chili.

It is easy to make, and also freezes well. It is also great to make for a crowd, served with a salad and hot bread, you have a complete and healthy meal.

WHITE CHILI
(for these cold winter days)
2 tablespoon olive oil
1 medium onion, diced
2 stalks celery, diced
1 zucchini, chopped
1 red pepper, chopped
3 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1/2 teaspoon ground coriander
1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley
1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper, more to taste
1 pound ground organic white meat turkey or chicken
2 (15.5-ounce) cans white beans such as cannelini, drained and rinsed
5 cups organic chicken broth
3/4 teaspoon dried oregano
1 cup quinoa
Sea salt
1/2 cup full fat plain Greek-style yogurt
Chopped fresh cilantro leaves

Heat the oil in large pot or Dutch oven over moderate heat. Add the onion, celery, pepper, and zucchini, and cook, stirring occasionally, until the vegetables are soft, about 6 minutes. Add the garlic, cumin, coriander, parsley and cayenne and cook, stirring, until fragrant, about a minute.

Add the ground meat and cook, breaking up the meat with a spoon, until the meat is no longer pink about 2 minutes. Add the white beans, broth and oregano. Cook, partially covered, stirring occasionally, for 25 minutes.

Add the quinoa and salt to taste, and continue cooking, partially covered, 12 minutes longer. Ladle into individual bowls and top each serving with 1 tablespoon of yogurt and cilantro.

Christmas Show Day Trip Dec. 4

On Sunday, Dec. 4th members of the Kennedy Center will travel to Waltham for the annual Reagle Players Christmas Show.

Luxury coach will depart from the Kennedy Center just in time for the noon show. With a wonderful cast of dances and musicians, "It's Christmas Time" show is a spectacle of sight and sound. The Nativity scene is especially wonderful and the show itself has been called, "A Christmas card celebrating the joys of the season."

After the show, attendees will eat dinner at the nearby Chateau Restaurant before returning to the Kennedy Center at 6:30 p.m.

Cost of trip is $119. Those interested should call the Kennedy Center at (617) 376-1506.

Trailside Museum Director To Speak At HN Garden Club Meeting Nov. 2

Beautiful fall days are here and "mums" planted by the Houghs Neck Garden Club are brightening up the Houghs Neck Welcome Rock, Leo Kelly Park, and two Houghs Neck war memorials.

At its Nov. 2nd meeting, the club welcomes Norman Smith, who will speak about birds of prey. Smith, who is the director of the Blue Hills Trailside Museum and the Norman Smith Environmental Education Center in Milton, has worked for the Massachusetts Audubon Society since 1974. During this time, Smith has rehabilitated injured birds and triumphantly fostered over 1,000 orphaned owl and hawk chicks into adoptive nests.

Smith may bring a surprise guest with him.

The meeting will be held in the MWRA Community Room at Nut Island, second floor, 149 Sea St., starting at 7 p.m. with refreshments and a brief business meeting followed by the program at 7:30 p.m. New members are welcome.

Crane Library Bookstore Celebrating 5th Anniversary Nov. 5

The Crane Library Bookstore is celebrating its fifth anniversary with giveaways to express appreciation to its loyal patrons who have supported the store and contributed to its success since its opening in November, 2011.

On Saturday, Nov. 5th one free book with a value of up to $2 will be given away with a purchase of equal or greater value. Gently-used books, DVD's, CD's, audiobooks, foreign language media, reference books and a large selection of children's and young-adult books and media are available.

With the exception of some distinctive items, like the shop's wide assortment of coffee table books, most merchandise sells for a dollar or two. Children's paperbacks and mass-media paperbacks sell for even less and there's a special corner of the store where some best-selling authors' books sell four for a dollar.

A time-generous group of volunteers from The Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library staff the store, which is overseen by committee members who have been together since its planning days.

All proceeds, which frequently amount to more than $20,000 annually are used to support the library's many community programs which include lectures, winter and summer lawn-concerts, current film screenings, museum passes, programs for children, teens, adults, and a variety of special events listed on the library's website and in its newsletter.

The shop is open on Thursday evenings from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. and on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 pm., and has its own separate entrance on Spear Street in the rear of the Crane Public Library, which nearly 30 years ago was designated a National Historic Landmark.

During the Christmas season the store will be open on Thursday, Dec. 22 and then remain closed until Thursday, Jan. 5.

Quincy Lions Club Pancake Breakfast Sunday

The Quincy Lions Club will host its annual Pancake Breakfast Sunday, Oct. 30 from 8 a.m. to noon in the dining room of 1000 Southern Artery to raise funds as part of the club's continued efforts to help support the community of Quincy.

"Funds raised on Oct. 30th will allow Lions to meet needs in our community, especially the KidSight and Scholarship programs," said Club President Amy Huber. "Lions members thank everyone who contributes to this important work, you are truly helping Lions make a difference in our community.

A highlight of this year's breakfast will be a performance by Lil Miss Sofia Hurley. Lil Miss Sofia is a 10-year-old Quincy resident who delights in performing her talented renditions of the music of Loretta Lynne, Connie Francis, Etta James and Dolly Parton and more.

Attendees are also encouraged to wear Halloween costumes.

Tickets for the pancake breakfast are $5 and can be purchased at the door on the day of the event, or online at www.quincylionsclub.com.

Veterans Day Cut-A-Thon Benefit Nov. 12

Mass School of Barbering in Quincy, 58 Ross Way, will be participating in the second annual Veterans Day Cut-A-Thon on Saturday, Nov. 12th.

The event will raise funds and awareness for Home Base, a Red Sox Foundation and Massachusetts General Hospital program dedicated to healing the invisible wounds for post-9/11 veterans, service members and their families through world-class clinical care, wellness, education and research.

For more information, call 617-770-4444.

Quincy Dentist Offering Free Exams, Cleanings To Veterans

In honor of Veterans Day, Quincy dentist Dr. Steven A. Brustin, is offering free dental exams and cleanings to Quincy veterans during the month of November.

In order to take advantage of this offer, veterans must call Dr. Brustin's office, 44 Greenleaf St., Quincy at 617-479-6220 and make an individual appointment.

Dr. Brustin is a Quincy native and alumni of the Morrisette American Legion Baseball program.

Halloween Safety Is No Trick: Tips From The Health Dept.

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Even though it's not a certified holiday, Halloween is much treasured by children and adults alike.

Whether you're a ghoul or a goblin, vampire or witch, what could be more thrilling than trick-or-treating, apple bobbing, or costume parties? To stay safe on Halloween remember these simple steps.

• Children shouldn't snack on treats from their goody bags while they're out trick-or-treating. Give them a light meal or snack before they venture out and don't send them out on an empty stomach. Advise them to wait until they get home and let you inspect their loot before they consume any of it.

• Tell children not to accept and especially not to eat anything that isn't commercially wrapped. Examine commercially wrapped treats for signs of tampering, such as an unusual appearance or discoloration, tiny pinholes, or tears in wrappers. Throw away anything that appears suspicious.

• If your child has a food allergy, check the label to confirm that the allergen isn't present. Do not allow the child to eat any home-baked goods he or she may have received.

• If you have very young children, be sure to remove any choking hazards such as gum, peanuts, hard candies, or small toys.

• Bobbing for apples is an all-time favorite Halloween game. Reduce the number of bacteria that might be present on apples and other raw fruits and vegetables by thoroughly rinsing them under cool running water. As an added safeguard, use a produce brush to remove surface dirt.

• Be wary of spooky cider! Unpasteurized juice or cider can contain harmful bacteria such as Salmonella. To stay safe, always serve pasteurized products at your functions.

• No matter how tempting, don't taste raw cookie dough or cake batter that contain uncooked eggs.

• Frighten bacteria away by keeping all perishable foods chilled until serving time. These include sandwiches, cheese platters, fruit or tossed salads, cold pasta dishes with meat, poultry, or seafood, and cream pies or cakes with whipped-cream and cream-cheese frostings.

• Bacteria will creep up on you if you let foods stay out too long. Don't leave perishable treats out of the refrigerator for more than two hours (1 hour in temperatures above 90°F).

• Plan costumes that are bright and reflective. Assure that shoes fit well and that costumes are short enough to prevent tripping, entanglement or contact with flame.

• Contemplate adding reflective tape or striping to costumes and trick-or-treat bags for better visibility.

• Because masks can reduce or block eyesight, consider non-toxic makeup and decorative hats as safer alternatives. Hats should fit properly to prevent them from slipping over eyes.

• When shopping for costumes, wigs and accessories look for and purchase those with a label distinctly indicating they are flame resistant.

• If a sword, cane, or stick is a part of your child's costume, make sure it is not sharp or too lengthy. A child may be easily injured by these accessories if they stumble or trip.

• Obtain flashlights with fresh batteries for all children and their chaperons.

• Do not use decorative contact lenses without an eye examination and a prescription from an eye care professional. While the packaging on decorative lenses will often make statements such as "one size fits all," or "no need to see an eye specialist," obtaining decorative contact lenses without a prescription is both dangerous and illegal. This can cause pain, inflammation, and serious eye disorders and infections, which may result in permanent loss of vision.

• Small children should never carve pumpkins. Children can draw a face with markers. Then parents should do the cutting.

• Consider using a flashlight or glow stick instead of a candle to light your pumpkin. If you do use a candle, a votive candle is safest.

• Candlelit pumpkins should be arranged on a sturdy table, away from curtains and other flammable objects, and should never be left unattended.

• To keep homes safe for visiting trick-or-treaters, remove from the porch and front yard anything that could be deemed a tripping hazard, such as garden hoses, toys, bikes and lawn decorations.

• Be sure to check outdoor lights and replace burned-out bulbs.

• Wet leaves or snow should be swept from sidewalks and steps.

• Restrain pets so they do not inadvertently jump on or bite a trick-or-treater.

• A parent or responsible adult should always accompany young children on their neighborhood rounds.

• If you're older children are going unaccompanied, plan and review an acceptable route and agree on a specific time when they should return home.

• Instruct your children to only go to homes with a porch light on and never enter a home or car for a treat.

Because pedestrian injuries are the most common injuries to children on Halloween, remind kids to:

• Stay in a group and communicate where they will be going.

• Carry a cellphone for quick communication.

• Remain on well-lit streets and always use the sidewalk.

• If no sidewalk is available, walk at the far edge of the roadway facing traffic.

• Never cut across yards or use alleys.

• Only cross the street as a group in established crosswalks, never cross between parked cars or out driveways.

Have a Safe and Spooktacular Halloween!

Explorers Ages 6-8: Wednesdays at 3:00 p.m. at the Wollaston Branch 11/16, 11/30, 12/7, 12/14

Space: Blast off for outer space, visit the planets of our solar system, welcome aliens to Earth and more with some stellar stories and crafts.

Cast Your Vote!

Beginning on Nov. 1st cast your vote for your favorite story book character. Each time you visit the library from Nov. 1st through Dec. 15th pick up a ticket at the Children's circulation desk and cast your vote for either your picture book or chapter book favorite. After all the votes are tallied we'll have a celebration for the chapter book winner on Friday, Jan. 20th and the picture book winner on Saturday, Jan. 21st.

Music and Movement with Rubi

On Saturday, Nov. 5th at 10 and 10:30 a.m. sing and dance with Rubi Lichauco! Rubi brings her popular preschool program to Quincy so put on your favorite dancing shoes and join us for this lively mix of music and movement for children ages 0-4 accompanied by an adult.

This program has become so popular there isn't room to move and dance as we would like so we have decided to split the group in two. No registration is required; when the 10 a.m. session fills we will close the doors. Please spend some time in the children's room choosing books or playing with our early literacy activities while you wait for the 10:30 a.m. session. Thank you for your cooperation we really think two smaller groups will make this program more fun for everyone.

Homework Help

Students in grades 1-6 are invited to stop by the main Library children's room on Mondays and Wednesdays from 3 – 5 p.m. to get assistance with their homework from high school tutors. Students must be able to communicate with tutors in English.

Preschool Discovery @ Wollaston

Drop by the Wollaston Library with your preschooler any time between 10 and 11 a.m. on Thursday, Nov. 3rd to do some fun simple science together. Activities, experiments and instructions will be provided for science you can do with your child.

This month we'll be exploring space. Learn about constellations, meteors and our solar system.

This program does not require registration.

Sciencetellers: Race Against Time!

Join us for Science Saturday a monthly series of science programs where we will explore science from caterpillars to computers circuit. This month join us on Saturday, Nov. 12th at 10 a.m. for Sciencetellers: Race Against Time.

The Sciencetellers join stories and science together in a laugh out loud audience participation exploration of power and energy.

Join us on a fast-paced adventure about two kids who find themselves racing against the clock! Before time runs outs, throw on your labcoat and buckle in — you are about to experience the science of power and energy through several explosive, hands-on experiments that will have you laughing, learning and having fun! We will make things float, bounce, soar and transform right before your eyes, all while exploring the concepts of surface tension, air pressure, chemical reactions, the law of inertia, scientific variables and more!

This program is intended for children ages 5 and older accompanied by an adult. Younger children may find the program a little too long and possibly too loud.

This program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Book Clubs for Kids

Do you like to read? Would you like to talk to others about books? Then you will like our book discussion groups. Join us each month to discuss all kinds of books.

The Night Owls Book Club for children in grades 3 and 4 meets on the 2nd Thursday of each month. This month the club will meet on Nov. 10th at 7 p.m.

This month we will be discussing The Mouse and the Motorcycle by Beverly Cleary. A young mouse named Ralph has the adventure of his life when a young boy with a toy motorcycle moves into the hotel where he lives.

Pick up your copy of the book in the Children's Room to read before the meeting. Any questions, call 617-376-2411 and ask to speak with Ms. Cronin.

The Phoenix Book Club for children in grades 5-8 meets on the second Tuesday of each month to discuss a variety of books. The library is a polling place so we will be meeting on the third Tuesday, Nov. 15th at 7 p.m., to avoid the election crowds.

This month we will be discussing "Ghost Stories." Stop by the children's room to select one of the titles we have set aside or search the shelves for a different ghostly tale to share.

Lighthouse Keeper a story concert

Featuring Quincy composer Delvyn Case's Lighthouse Keeper and Benjamin Britten's Simple Symphony, Palaver Strings brings the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy a concert for families with young children on Saturday, Nov. 19th at 10 a.m.

Lighthouse Keeper tells through music and narration the story of Abbie Burgess Grant, the 19th century teenager who tended a lighthouse off the coast of Maine during a great Nor'easter, saving the lives of countless sailors. Britten's Simple Symphony is a piece of dynamic and contrasting movements, built on themes Britten composed when he was himself a young child.

This program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Dungeons and Dragons Encounters

New and experienced players ages 10 and older are invited to join us on Tuesday, Nov. 22nd at 7 p.m. in the Main Library Children's Room for this introduction to D&D 5th edition game play. Take on the role of a fantasy hero in this monthly Dungeons and Dragons game. We will help you customize an Adventurer's League D&D character you can use both in our monthly adventures and at other D&D Organized Play.

Your group of adventurers will start out at level one and take on the module from the 5th Edition D&D Starter Set. Unravel the mysteries of the Lost Mine of Phandelver and what monsters and treasures lie within!

Saturday Storytime @ North Quincy

Join children's librarian Cathy deVeer and Quinn Z. Bear at the North Quincy Branch, on Saturday, Nov. 26th at 10 a.m. for Superhero stories and songs.

This program is for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult No registration required.

A Caregivers Message Nov. 7 At Kennedy Center

On Monday, Nov. 7th at 1 p.m., Linda Bowes of the Quincy Council on Aging will share her journey of caring for her husband with Alzheimer's.

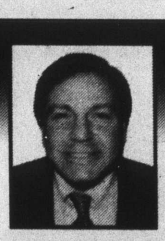
The event will take place at the Kennedy Center in Quincy. Linda's hope is that those who attend will come away with more compassion and understanding of not only those with Alzheimer's but more importantly those who care for their loved ones with Alzheimer's.

If you are caring for someone with Alzheimer's or are a friend or family member of someone with Alzheimer's this session may be helpful.

This event is part of the initiative formed by the Quincy Health Department and the Quincy Council on Aging to make Quincy a Dementia Friendly Community,

Those interested in attending this event should call the Kennedy Center at (617) 376-1506 to register as space is limited.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century



by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

TREATING GUM RECESSION

The term "gum recession" refers to the process in which the margin of gingival (gum) tissue surrounding each tooth pulls back or wears away. As a result, "pockets" (gaps) develop around teeth that can trap the bacteria that threaten tooth and bone health. At the very least, anything more than mild recession of the gingiva results in greater tooth-root sensitivity to hot and cold, as well as an unsightly appearance. To remedy these functional and cosmetic problems, a gingival graft may be sutured in place around the tooth to replenish any deficiency. The graft consists of a thin piece of tissue taken from the roof of the mouth or from adjacent gums. The results are both permanent and highly effective.

The best time to see your dentist is before you have a problem. The most valuable service we can provide is a thorough and complete examination. Virtually all dental problems - decay, gum disease, jaw joint difficulties, and loose teeth - are easily detected in their early stages and can be treated economically and comfortably at that time. We are located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. Could you benefit from implants? Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment.

P.S. Aside from gum disease, gum recession can be caused by overly aggressive brushing, hormonal changes, smoking, grinding teeth, or a misaligned bite.

QSO Concert Nov. 6 At North Quincy High School

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra, (QSO) under the direction of Music Director Yoichi Udagawa, continues its season with a concert on Sunday, Nov. 6th at 2:30 p.m. at North Quincy High School Auditorium (this concert only.)

The concert will feature Schumann: Symphony No.3 and other works.

Founded in 1955, the QSO consists of more than 50 volunteer musicians, including both amateurs and professionals from the Boston Metro-South region. The QSO offers three free concerts every season, in addition to an annual "Pops" fundraiser and holiday concert in partnership with the Quincy Public Schools.

East Boston Savings Bank®

Open letter to East Boston Savings Bank Customers and Communities:

The end of 2016 marks the 168 year milestone for East Boston Savings Bank. When we opened our doors in 1848 our mission was much the same as it is today, to deliver valued banking services to satisfy lifetime needs by building long term relationships based on trust, safety and friendly service.

Through the years, having seen it all from economic depressions to banking crises to the real estate bubble, EBSB remains a pillar of strength due to the honesty, integrity and banking values of our board of directors, senior management team and our employees. It is with great resolve that EBSB embraces its responsibility to be a trustworthy resource for banking services and a good neighbor in communities throughout greater Boston.

East Boston Savings Bank will always have your best interests at heart. We are committed to all of our customers, big and small, individuals and businesses in providing you with the quality product, excellent service and sound advice. We also believe that it is our responsibility to foster economic growth in our communities when possible. We will continue to research new branch opportunities stimulating economic growth by providing local jobs and banking services to help businesses and individuals thrive.

Our values lie beyond banking interests. Being a good neighbor and giving back to the community is important to us. Each year the bank makes contributions and/or donates a variety of items supporting community and civic groups and our employees volunteer their time for meaningful causes. In addition, since its inception in 1998, the East Boston Savings Bank Charitable Foundation has distributed over $5 million in grants to well-deserving not-for-profit organizations serving our market area.

As president, chairman and chief executive officer of East Boston Savings Bank it is my responsibility to see that the bank continues to be a trusted provider of personal and commercial banking services, provide exceptional customer experiences, solid banking performances, workforce development and community leadership. We will never take for granted our customers' trust or shirk our civic obligations.

I very much appreciate the continued confidence and support you have shown. Our future looks brighter every day and we are truly thankful to you for being an integral part of our success. If you have any questions or concerns regarding EBSB or our mission, please do not hesitate to contact me directly at rgavegnano@ebsb.com or 978-977-2211.

Sincerely

Richard J. Gavegnano

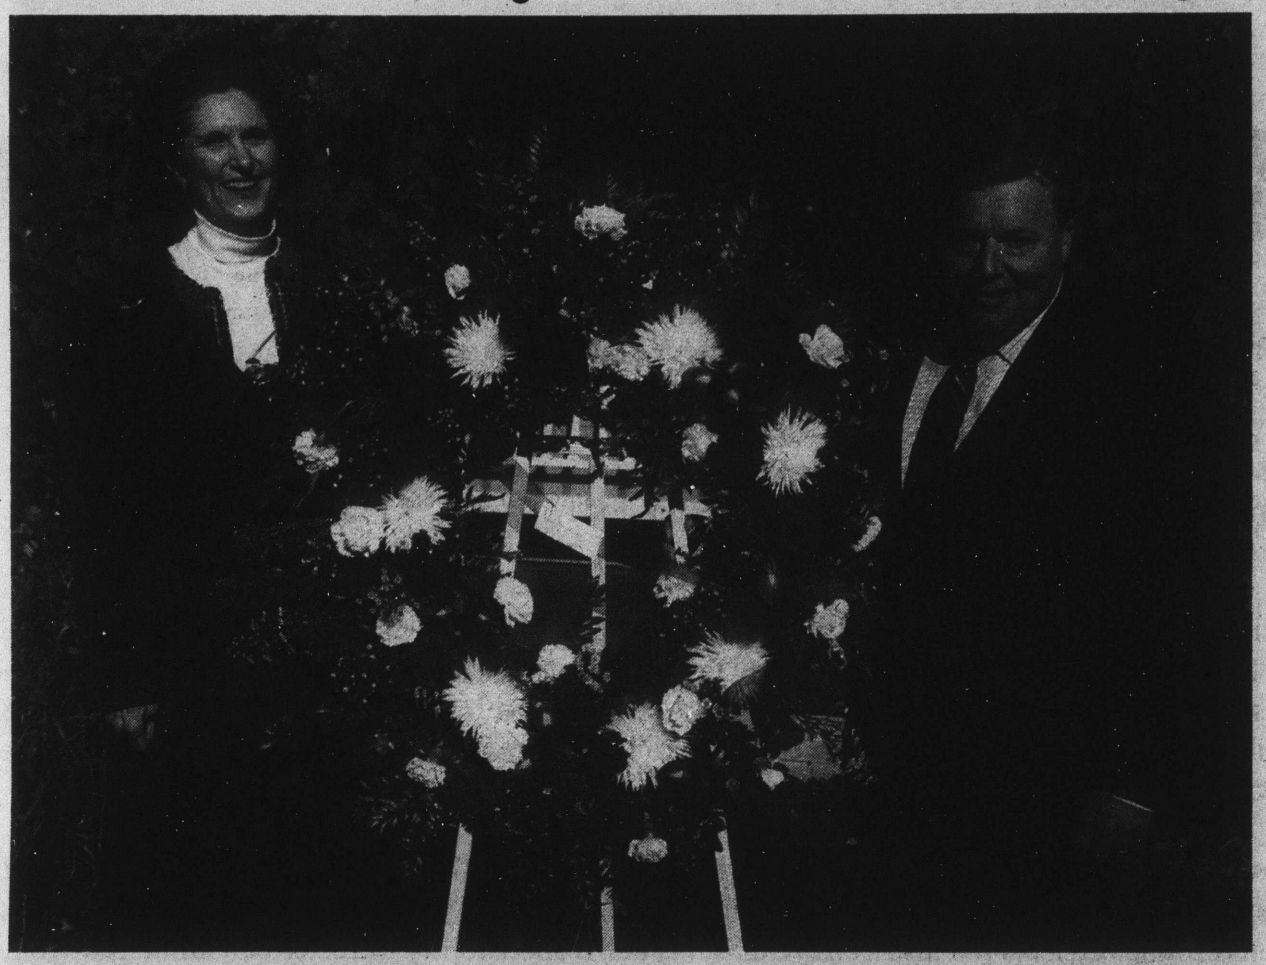
David McCullough will be in attendance for Friday's wreath laying, though it is unknown whether he will speak during the ceremony. McCullough's 2001 biography of the second president, entitled "John Adams," won the author his second Pulitzer Prize. It was later adapted into an Emmy- and Golden Globe-winning HBO miniseries starring Paul Giamatti as Adams and directed by Tom Hooper.

The book and the miniseries have been credited with sparking a resurgence of interest in all things Adams, including visits to Quincy's historic sites with a connection to the famed family.

Bob Damon, the director of the history and visitor program at the United First Parish Church, said McCullough would be one of the honored guests during the ceremony, and will be given the chance to address the crowd if he wishes to do so.

Mayor Thomas Koch and U.S. Rep. Stephen Lynch are among those scheduled to speak at the ceremony, along with Douglas Adams, representing the Adams family, and Rose Fennell, the National Park Service's deputy director for the Northeast region.



LYNDA BIRD JOHNSON ROBB, daughter of President Lyndon B. Johnson and First Lady Lady Bird Johnson, receives the greetings of the City of Quincy from Mayor Thomas P. Koch as they stand beside the Presidential Wreath at Peace field Tuesday. The wreath – created by Clifford's Flowers – will be placed on the tomb of President John Adams at a ceremony Friday at United First Parish Church.

United First Parish Church historian Bill Westland is also slated to speak at the event, highlighting the history of the visitor program.

Students from the city's three high schools will also speak at the ceremony. They are Dashiell Chin (Quincy High), Curtis De Bisschop (North Quincy High) and Destiny Joseph (Woodward School).

Damon said speakers at Friday's ceremony will focus on commemorations and why we chose to commemorate events.

The theme was chosen because 2016 includes several key anniversaries. President Lyndon B. Johnson began the tradition of laying wreaths at the graves of late presidents 50 years ago in 1966 (though Damon noted the first such ceremony at the church was in 1967), and the church started offering tours of the Adams crypt 40 years ago in 1976 as the U.S. celebrated its bicentennial.

Additionally, 2016 marks the centennial of the National Park Service, which was established in 1916, and the 70th anniversary of the legislation that created the Adams National Historical Park.

John Adams, the second president of the United States, was born Oct. 30, 1735. He is entombed in the crypt below the church along with his wife, Abigail, and their son, sixth U.S. President John Quincy Adams, and his wife, Louisa.

Steady Stream Of Early Voters Here

registered voter was allowed to vote prior to Election Day was by casting an absentee ballot. Although absentee voting will still be available for registered voters who qualify, only those who will be absent from their city or town on Election Day or have a disability or religious belief that prevents them from going to the polls that day are legally allowed to vote by absentee ballot,

As of Tuesday morning, 1,609 absentee ballots had been mailed out to Quincy residents, Crispo said.

Unlike absentee balloting, early voting is for every registered voter and no excuse or reason is needed to vote early.

Regardless of whether a voter wants to take advantage of early voting, vote absentee or vote on Election Day, the first step is making sure you are registered. To check to see if you are registered to vote, you may visit the secretary of the commonwealth's website.

Crispo is anticipating a turnout of 72 percent – about 41,760 voters – for the Nov. 8 election.

Topping the ticket in the election is the presidential race between former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, the Democratic nominee, and Republican businessman Donald Trump. Also on the ballot in Massachusetts are Libertarian nominee Gary Johnson and Jill Stein of the Green-Rainbow Party.

Voters in Quincy will cast ballots in two other contested races.

Incumbent U.S. Rep. Stephen Lynch, a South Boston Democrat, is facing a challenge from Republican William Burke of Quincy.

State Sen. John Keenan is facing a challenge from independent candidate Alexander Mendez. Both are Quincy residents.

Other incumbents on the ballot are unopposed. They include state Reps. Bruce Ayers, Tackey Chan, Daniel Hunt and Ronald Mariano; Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti and Commissioners Francis O'Brien and Joseph Shea; and Governor's Councillor Christopher Ianella Jr.

Bay Staters will also decide four different ballot questions.

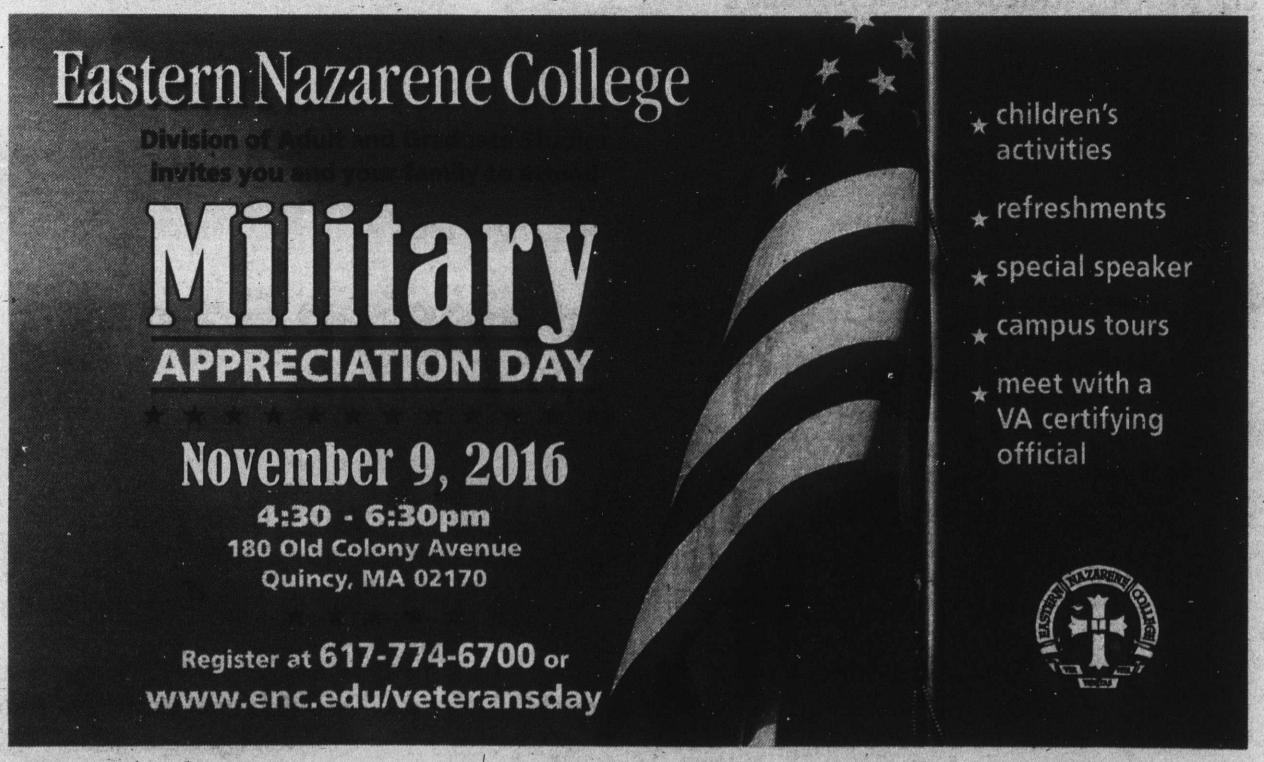
Question 1, if approved, would give the state's gaming commission one more slots parlor license to award. The slots parlor could only be located on a parcel of land at least four acres in size and within 1,500 feet of a horseracing track. The proponent of the question – Eugene McCain – is seeking to build a slots parlor near Suffolk Downs in Revere.

Question 2 asks voters to lift the cap on charter schools in the state. If approved, up to 12 new charter schools would be allowed each year.

Question 3 would, if approved, prohibit Massachusetts farmers from confining breeding pigs, calves raised for veal and egg-laying hens in a way that prevents them from lying down, standing up, extending their limbs or turning around freely – and would ban the sale of meat or eggs in the state from animals who do not meet those standards.

Question 4 would legalize recreational use of marijuana in the state if passed, and create a new cannabis control commission. It would also set a 12 percent tax on marijuana sales.

Polls will open at 7 a.m. on Election Day, Nov. 8, and close at 8 p.m. Quincy Public Schools will be closed that day.



Students Show Improvement In Latest MCAS Exam

More School News On Page 15

By TOM GORMAN

Although there were a few dips and stagnant scores, there was an overall improvement by Quincy students in the latest Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System (MCAS) exam.

The district's curriculum and assessment team reviewed the 2016 MCAS results during the Oct. 19 school committee meeting. The exam was administered last spring in grades 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 10 in core subject areas.

"The results are very positive," said School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, adding that there is room for improvement in some grades and subgroups.

The MCAS measures students' year-to-year performance in math, science and reading/English Language Arts (ELA) in select grades. The state requires districts to show yearly gains in the number of students scoring in the top, advanced/proficient level and closing the proficiency gap.

According to the curriculum team's Erin Perkins, there was "some really nice growth" in math scores, particularly in grade 4 that saw a 9 percent increase in advanced/proficient compared to 2015. Grades 6, 8 and 10 had a slight increase.

ELA advanced/proficient scores in grade 4 and 6 were up while grade 7 had a standout 5 percent jump.

Only grades 5 and 8 were tested in science and technology while grade 10 was tested in biology. Grades 5 and 8 dipped a bit while grade 10 went up by 4 percent in the top scoring category.

Perkins noted that the grade 10 biology scores are "going up each year" into the advanced/proficient level.

The MCAS scores are broken down into subgroups that includes students with disabilities, high needs students and English Language Learners (ELL).

The reading/ELA scores for high needs students saw gains in grades 6 and 7 in advanced/proficient while grades 4 and 5 had sustained scores.

Grade 4 high needs math scores spiked nine percentage points this year and grades 6 and 8 scores went up by 5 percent.

In science, grades 5 and 10 high needs students' score went up slightly and grade 8 dropped a bit.

Students with disabilities' math scores went up, particularly grade 5 that had a 13 percent jump and grade 10 with a 9 percent increase this year in the advanced/proficient level. Grades 3, 7 and 8 had little or no growth.

ELL students with passing math scores were up in grades 4, 5 and 8. Science passing scores for these students grew in grades 5 and 10 while grade 8 dipped.

The curriculum team's Sarah Anderson told the committee that the they will be reviewing all the results.

"We will be looking at all the data to identify and address gaps," she said.

Perkins said that struggling students will be given additional help and additional training will be provided for teachers in priority areas.

She also noted that the district is in the process of transitioning to new state science/technology standards that may have resulted in a dip in some MCAS science scores this year. Anderson added that grade 8 students are being taught new math skills.

Curriculum Director Madeline Roy said her team will be working with teachers to address students' needs.

"We will be working to make sure students reach achievement goals by the end of the year," she said.

Roy noted the district is preparing for the state's next generation MCAS exam, dubbed MCAS 2.0. This exam will be taken on computers unlike the current MCAS that is pencil and paper and is designed to better assess the critical thinking skills of students to meet the 21st century workforce. The new exam will be phased in over the next two years and fully implemented in 2019.

"This will be the next big focus," she said. "We have a clear direction...in aligning our curriculum."

Roy said computer skills are being prioritized in the curriculum.

"We are embedding digital learning in the curriculum that is really helping our students be comprehensive learners," she said.

Based on improving MCAS scores, three city schools' accountability levels increased this year. Atherton Hough and Snug Harbor went from level three to two and North Quincy High increased from level two to one.

The state Department of Elementary and Secondary Education sets levels from five, the lowest, to one, the highest. The levels are based on three years' MCAS results.

Level five is deemed a non-performing school meaning MCAS scores are not improving overall year-to-year and a level three or two means proficiency narrowing gaps are not being met. A level one school is meeting narrowing gap targets.

DeCristofaro said seven schools are still not meeting proficiency narrowing gaps and noted that none of the district's school levels dropped this year.

"No school went down," he said.

Some school committee members expressed frustration with the state changing the MCAS test and curriculum standards, and how it will affect teaching and the district's accountability levels.

"We don't know if (the new test) will include the last three years (of MCAS results) or start new," said Emily Lebo.

Barbara Isola noted students are assessed by different tests other than the MCAS.

"It's important to remember this (MCAS) is just one assessment and students are assessed in many ways," she said. "The focus should not be on just one snapshot of a standardized test."

Lebo agreed, adding that student growth "should be more telling" than what the MCAS offers.

DeCristofaro said each student is different but "the test is the same."

Anne Mahoney voiced frustration with the national Common Core standards adopted a couple years ago by the state that requires local districts to constantly change curriculums to meet the new standards.

"We don't know where we're going," she said.

Mahoney also said she would like to see more information related to individual student MCAS results be available for parents to analyze.

"There should be more information available for parents to take that information and empower students to do better," she said.

Vice Chairman Paul Bregoli opined a lateral measurement would be "a more valid analysis" of student achievement.

"We spend too much time on a test," he said. "Sometimes it's not time well spent."

Free Vision Screening For Young Children

The Quincy Lions Club and the Rural Masonic Lodge A.F & A.M will sponsor free vision screenings for children next month.

The screenings will take place from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday, Nov. 12 at the Fore River Clubhouse, located at 16 Nevada Rd., Quincy.

Attendees may register at the door the day of the screening or online at www.quincylionsclub.com

"We encourage families to bring their children in for a free vision screening," said David Smith, Quincy Lions Club KidSight coordinator. "The actual screening takes less than a minute, but the benefits can last a lifetime."

More than 12 million school-age children in the United States have some form of vision problem, yet only one in three have received eye care services before age six. Many vision problems run the risk of becoming permanent if not corrected by age seven, when the eye reaches full maturity. Vision also plays an important role in education. According to educational experts, 80 percent of learning is visual.

"Early screening leads to early detection, which helps ensure that children get the follow-up care they need," said Smith. "We want to make sure that correctible vision problems don't stand in the way of our children learning and seeing the world clearly."

The partnership between the Quincy Lions and Rural Masonic Lodge A.F & A.M will allow hundreds of children in Quincy to receive a free vision screening.

For more information on the screening event or to learn more about the Quincy Lions Club and its service projects, email quincylionsclub@gmail.com or view the website www.quincylionsclub.com

The screening event is part of a nationwide initiative called Lions KidSight USA, a national coalition that brings together Lions programs that screen children from 6 months to 6 years of age. KidSight USA was developed by Lions in the U.S. to protect the eye health of America's children in their early years. Lions in the U.S. currently screen more than 500,000 children per year. Candidate Profiles - Race For Norfolk-Plymouth Senate Seat

Democrat Incumbent John F. Keenan

By SCOTT JACKSON

John Keenan, a Democrat running for re-election in November's race to represent the Norfolk-Plymouth District in the state Senate, said his outreach to local officials and constituents, as well as his work on several pieces of legislation meant to rein in the state's opioid crisis are among his biggest accomplishments since being elected to Beacon Hill.

Keenan, a 52-year-old former Quincy city councillor, is running for his fourth term in the Senate. A longtime Quincy resident who has worked in both city and county government, he identified four different areas he says are his biggest accomplishments on Beacon Hill: Constituent services, outreach, working with local officials, and the opioid legislation.

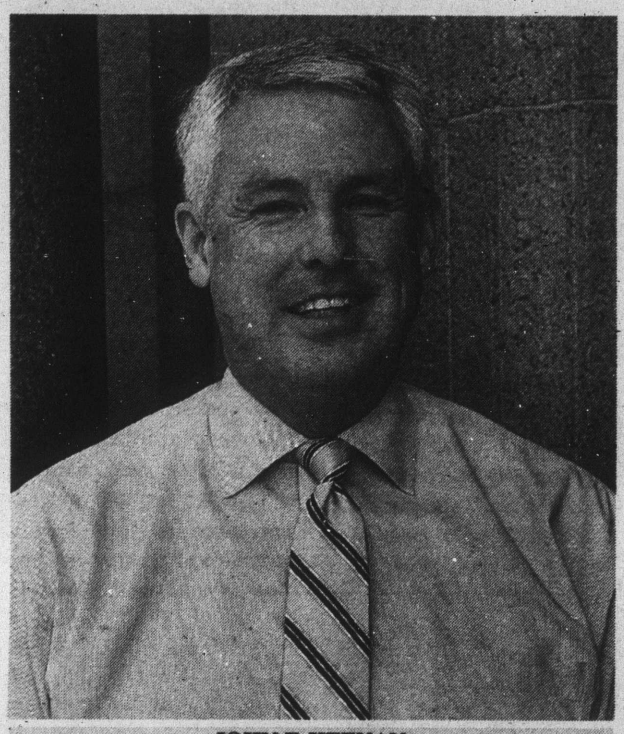
"One would be we deliver, I believe, very good constituent service, and that is helping people navigate and deal with state government," Keenan responded when asked what his top accomplishments are. "We've been very proactive as far as our outreach. I go to neighborhood meetings, town meetings, all kind of governmental meeting, association meetings, regularly."

"Third would be working with local officials on local priorities for Quincy and each one of the towns in my district, and that includes working on the school projects and also local aid. The fourth would be the work I've done relative to the opioid epidemic. Many of the things we've worked on have been included in the three landmark bills and have been viewed as national models."

If elected to a new term, Keenan said those four issues would be among his top priorities. He would also like to focus on the transportation infrastructure in the Senate district, which includes Quincy, Abington, Holbrook, Rockland and portions of Braintree.

"Making sure that the Red Line and our network of roads and bridges in the district I represent are maintained and modernized as much as possible," Keenan replied when asked what his priorities for a new term would be. "There is some real progress on that.

"The Wollaston train station will undergo about a $32 or $34 million – it depends on the final price – basically reconstruction starting relatively soon. There will be some major work at the North Quincy train station in a public/private partnership. We are still working with the city, the MBTA and the Department of Transportation on a Quincy Center station. There are ongoing repairs at the Quincy Adams train station to the garage. We're working with Mayor Sullivan in Braintree to improve the Braintree train station.



JOHN F. KEENAN

AGE: 52
ADDRESS: 37 Hobomack Rd., Quincy
EDUCATION: North Quincy High School (1982); Harvard University, bachelor's degree in government (1986); Suffolk University Law School (1989).
FAMILY: Wife Jeanne and sons Christopher (22), Timothy (21) and Kevin (16).

"A lot of that is happening really all at the same time, and coordinating those is something we're going to be focused on in the next couple of years."

Another issue he would like to address specific to Quincy is funding for school projects, as well as bringing ferry service to Squantum Point Park on a more permanent basis and ongoing redevelopment efforts in several key business areas.

"Working with the school committee, school department and the mayor on the ongoing school renovations, repairs and new construction in the case of Sterling Middle School," Keenan answered when asked what his priorities would be for Quincy and the rest of the district.

"Squantum School is starting to make its way through the process, so we'll be working with the city officials on that. Trying to secure funding for the continued redevelopment of Quincy Center will be a priority, as will be helping the city focusing redevelopment efforts on Wollaston Center and North Quincy.

"We will continue our work on bringing ferry service to Squantum Point Park. That has started to really move and we're going to continue to focus on that. That will help with the traffic situation, the parking situation, particularly as parking comes offline at some of our Red Line stations at those renovations and reconstruction occur."

Statewide, Keenan hopes to focus on behavioral health parity, education spending and the state's finances in a new term.

"We continue to work on ensuring behavioral health parity, meaning that those who have mental health or substance use issues receive or have the same access to treatment as those that have medical issues," Keenan said.

"I'm going to continue to work on funding our public schools, and higher education remains a concern. Students are graduating with a great amount of debt. We've had some success in a few of the last several years in keeping tuition and fees level, but that's becoming a struggle.

"And then looking at the overall financial situation of the commonwealth, and whether we've got to reprioritize in our budget overall, reallocate revenues or seek additional revenues. Those are all things we're going to be focusing on in the next couple years."

Bay Staters will vote on four different questions on the November ballot, including one that would legalize marijuana for recreational use and one that would al-

Independent Challenger Alexander N. Mendez

By SCOTT JACKSON

Alex Mendez, an independent candidate running in November's race to represent the Norfolk-Plymouth District in the Senate on Beacon Hill, identified boosting public engagement as one of his top priorities.

Mendez, a 28-year-old attorney, is making his first run for public office this year. A lifelong Quincy resident, he said growing up in the city gave him a natural inclination to seeking elected office. He also hopes to bring the people closer to the government.

"I had an eye on it the whole time, because it's a natural inclination being in Quincy – to be inspired by the history, to be involved in government," Mendez responded when asked why he was running during a recent interview. "So that's always in the back of your mind.

"But primarily right now it's being aware of what's going on in the world and happening in the city, the developments on all the levels, even global levels. We need to revitalize public engagement and bring [the public] closer to government. That's the big idea, but more simply to help my community, hometown and state."

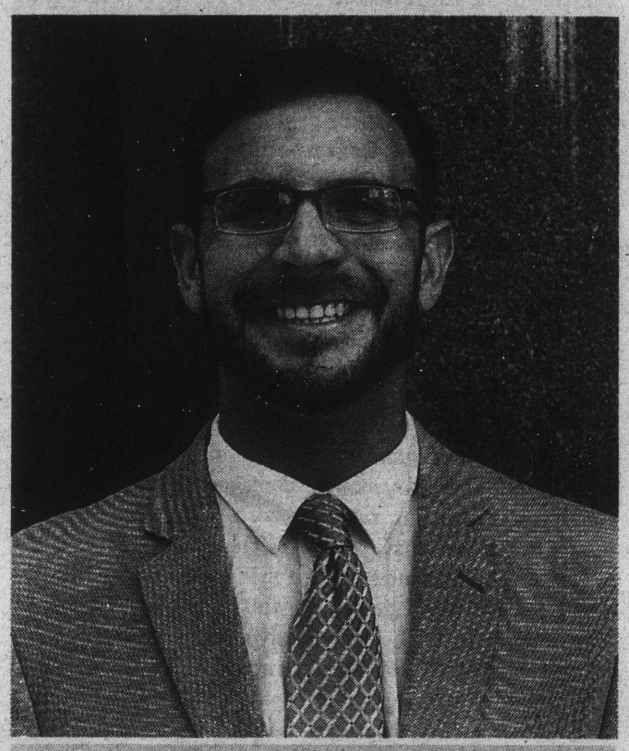
Mendez also identified bridging the disconnect between the public and government as one of his top priorities if elected, along with reining in health care costs.

"Obviously as a public servant you have to address the needs of constituents," he said. "Right now, I see there is a disconnect between the public and the government. Whether it's true or not, that's the way they feel, so a priority would be connecting people to the government so they at least feel they're being heard, contact made.

"Then generally one of the bigger ones concerning the budget would be lowering the cost of health care. That's a major state issue, it's a major issue for any small business, it's a major issue for cities because they have to pay large majorities of their budget."

Improving public education was another priority Mendez identified, saying he would like to see a greater focus on vocational education.

"We have an obligation as educators and the government to spawn economic development by teaching the kids that this is the pathway so they can not only have jobs in the future for their own personal gain but also help the economy as a whole – a big holistic approach," he said.



ALEXANDER N. MENDEZ

AGE: 28
ADDRESS: 99 Shore Ave., Quincy
EDUCATION: Quincy High School (2006); Suffolk University bachelor's degree in sociology (2010); Suffolk University, master's in criminal justice and master of public administration (2012); Suffolk University Law School (2015).
FAMILY: Single.

Additionally, Mendez would like to see costs for higher education reduced, and suggested cutting administration and using technology would allow that.

"We can cut costs by cutting administration. Yeah, it means people losing their jobs, but if it means going on the backs of kids' educations on loans for the rest of their lives, our priorities shouldn't be the selling of a degree, it should be passing on education," Mendez said.

"We have to make is accessible for everyone, whether they're in Brockton or whether they're in Amherst. Technology has advanced so far that we can push the bounds of education beyond anything and we can lower the cost of it, just because technology allows us to."

Education ties into health care costs, Mendez said.

"Right now I want to lower health care costs. How would I lower health care costs? That deals with things such as lowering the cost of education, because think about it, doctors have to go through so much education they have a quarter of a million dollars in debt," Mendez said.

"That means they have to have higher prices as doctors and they ask for more and there is not so many doctors. If we increase the supply of educated people it will lower the cost of doctors without interfering with the quality, because everything starts adding up."

Other priorities Mendez identified were reducing energy costs, attracting biomedical and high tech industries, enhancing cyber security, addressing the opioid epidemic and improving the state's mental health infrastructure.

Mendez said it is important to keep an eye towards the future.

"You've got to look down the road 20 or 50 years. That's why my policy objectives are kind of revolving around the future, because that's where the vision needs to be right now," Mendez said. "I think that's one obligation we have right now, to connect what we have going on right now – the systems of employment and energy – and move it into the future."

When asked about priorities for the Senate district – which includes Quincy, Abington, Holbrook, Rockland and portions of Braintree – Mendez identified infrastructure as one need. The communities outside of Quincy, he noted, had to institute water restrictions this year during a statewide drought.

"I think big, global things. When I talk I think globally. My ideas sound obscure sometimes – like agriculture and energy and stuff, but right now, there wasn't a lot of rain…Here in Quincy we don't think about it, but if you go to towns like Rockland where they have

Creedon Family Field Dedication At NQHS Nov. 19

By TOM GORMAN

Teel Field in North Quincy will be dedicated on Saturday, Nov. 19 at noon in the name of two Quincy brothers who served as superintendent of schools.

The soccer/football field on Hunt Street behind North Quincy High School will be named Creedon Field in honor of the Creedon family that grew up near the field site. Family members include two former Quincy school superintendents: the late Lawrence and Eugene Creedon.

"Teel Field will be dedicated to the Creedon family," Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro told the School Committee at its Oct. 19th meeting.

Lawrence Creedon died in Sept. 2012 while teaching in Mexico as part of the Cedrone Institute for International Education. Eugene passed away on Christmas Eve, 2015. Both were 80 years-old.

Eugene Creedon started his teaching career at the Iona Prep School in New York City and his brother's first teaching assignment was as an officer with the Naval Security Agency in Washington, D.C. during the Korean War. Both returned to their native Quincy where each had long careers in the city's public school system, culminating with serving as superintendent.

Lawrence Creedon co-founded Quincy Youth Football in 1972, Survival, Inc. and the Quincy Teen Mother Program. Eugene Creedon served as the first lay principal at St. Anne's School in Wollaston and was principal at both Broad Meadows and Parker schools.

Teel Field underwent a $14 million renovation this summer where major improvements were made including the installation of synthetic turf and additional parking. The project is part of an overall plan to expand parking and athletic facilities at the North Quincy High campus.

In other business, DeCristofaro informed the committee that water testing in the schools is nearing completion and results will be posted on the district's website the first week of November. Testing for lead and copper in drinking water in all 20 schools began a few weeks ago.

Samples are being taken by public buildings staff and custodians from all water sources including fountains and food preparation areas in the schools. The samples are being analyzed by the University of Massachusetts at Amherst Technical Assistance Team.

In another matter, DeCristofaro outlined his superintendent's plan for the school year that includes evaluating administrators using a new educator evaluation method and meeting goals to improve student achievement.

The administrator evaluation involves DeCristofaro observing and assessing principals, directors and coordinators and setting goals based on program improvement plans. The student achievement goal calls for all grade levels to show a 1 percent increase in MCAS performance in math, English Language Arts and science.

"We must make sure we are meeting all our program improvement plans (and) see if our goals are being met or making progress" said DeCristofaro.

He noted that over the past two school years the district's MCAS scores have been going up and that annual yearly progress, as measured by the state based on MCAS performance, has increased.

The superintendent also reviewed several successful programs that have been implemented including the Alliance for a Healthier Generation, substance abuse awareness and Beyond the Bell that provides enrichment and community activities.

The committee also honored Rep. Bruce Ayers for his partnership with the school system and helping forge the Read to Ride program where a student who reads the most books during the summer wins a bicycle. Ayers said the program offers students an incentive "to read during the summer."

In another matter, school committee member Anne Mahoney recommended that the policy subcommittee consider having an "open discussion" on whether to retire the North Quincy High School Yakoo mascot after some parents said it was offensive to Native Americans.

Ed Grogan said that since the district was implementing a new diversity and respect program this year through the non-profit Visions organization that teaches inclusion, it provides a "good opportunity" to take a look at what the mascot symbolizes.

Scott Alessandro concurred, saying that the Quincy schools "should be a symbol of pride and excellence" and that officials should look at "the symbols we use to address our schools."

Sherrie Noble of Weymouth said the Yakoo "has had its time" and suggested the two school districts could work together to "address indigenous issues" and have a dialogue on the matter.

The parents addressed the committee during the open forum portion of the meeting.

AAA Tips For A Safe Halloween

To help make the roadways safer this Halloween, AAA Northeast offers motorists a few easy tips:

• Avoid Neighborhood Shortcuts. If possible, avoid cutting through residential streets where trick-or-treaters are likely to be present.

• Watch for children in the street. Watch for children walking on streets, medians and curbs. Excited trick-or-treaters, often in dark costumes, may not pay attention to traffic and cross mid-block or between parked cars.

• Slow down. According to the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety, a pedestrian is more than twice as likely to be killed if hit by a car traveling 35 mph compared to 25 mph. What seems like a small difference – just 10 mph - can be the difference between life and death.

• Drive sober. Alcohol-impaired drivers make up about one-third of all motor vehicle deaths resulting in an average of one death every 45 minutes. Always designate a sober driver.

AAA also has tips for parents and children:

• Trick-or-treat together. AAA recommends that parents accompany youngsters at least until the age of 12.

• Make a plan. Review trick-or-treating safety precautions and plan the route ahead of time. Remind children never to cross the street mid-block or between parked cars.

• Check costumes. Choose disguises that don't obstruct vision and where possible use face paint instead of masks. Check and adjust the length of costumes to avoid tripping and add reflective material or tape to keep kids visible. Carry a flashlight.

• Buckle up. If driving trick-or-treaters between neighborhoods, always use appropriate car seats and have children exit and enter on the passenger side of the vehicle.

Register O'Donnell Stresses Need To File Mortgage Discharges

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell is reminding homeowners about the importance of filing a mortgage discharge in a timely manner after their mortgage has been paid off.

"One of the most commonly asked questions I receive on a daily basis from homeowners is whether they have clear title to their property. One way to check on your title is by accessing the Registry's online records and verifying if all mortgages associated with the property have been discharged," O'Donnell said.

When a mortgage is paid off, O'Donnell said a mortgage discharge document needs to be recorded with the Registry of Deeds to clear a homeowner's property title relative to that loan. A discharge is a document (typically one page) issued by the lender, usually with a title such as "Discharge of Mortgage" or "Satisfaction of Mortgage."

In many instances, O'Donnell said, "Discharges are sometimes filed directly by banks or settlement closing attorneys with the Registry as part of a property sale or as a result of a refinancing transaction. In other cases, the mortgage discharge is sent to the property owner who becomes responsible for making sure the document is recorded at the Registry. Whether or not a discharge is recorded by the lending institution or the individual property owner, it is prudent that the property owner make sure that all necessary documents have been recorded at the Registry of Deeds."

O'Donnell further mentioned that there have been cases where no discharge has been recorded against a long paid off mortgage. Unfortunately, some of the lending institutions that provided funds for these mortgages are no longer in existence.

In other cases, financial entities have merged with another lending entity. "You cannot sell your property without having your mortgage discharged," O'Donnell said.

If a property owner needs to retrieve an original discharge of a mortgage and is unclear which lending institution is now responsible for providing the document, an option is to contact the Massachusetts Division of Banks at 1-800-495-2265. This government agency can assist the consumer in tracking down contact information for the lending institution that is responsible for the mortgage.

When recording a discharge, the original document is required. The Registry of Deeds does not accept photo copies or faxed copies of documents. The filing fee, set by state statute, is $76.

In conclusion O'Donnell said, "After paying off all the mortgages on their property, homeowners want to be assured that they have clear title to their property, especially if they are contemplating selling. Being diligent and aware of what is required will go a long way in giving the homeowner peace of mind. Therefore, I once again urge homeowners to make sure their mortgage discharge has been filed with the Registry of Deeds once their mortgage has been paid off. There is no reason to wait."

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds is staffed with a team of customer service representatives who can be reached Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at 781-461-6101.

"These representatives have been trained in researching documents and are well versed on the subject of mortgage discharges and what, if necessary, needs to be done to clear title to a property," O'Donnell said.

Time Again To Check Medicare Health, Drug Plans

By RAYMOND HURD
Regional Administrator
Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services

Now's the time for people in Massachusetts with Medicare to check their health and drug coverage for 2017.

Medicare's open enrollment period began on Oct. 15 and runs until Dec. 7.

Open enrollment is the best time to make sure your health and drug plans still meet your individual needs, especially if you've had any changes in your health.

By now insurers should have notified you of any adjustments in your health or drug coverage or any changes in your out-of-pocket costs for next year.

The average monthly premium for a Medicare Advantage plan will drop by $1.19 to $31.40, while the average monthly premium for a basic drug plan will inch up $1.50 to $34.00.

People in Massachusetts in Medicare's original fee-for-service program can choose from 21 drug plans with monthly premiums ranging from $14.60 to $127.70.

Look beyond premiums, though. The only way to determine the true cost of your drug coverage is to consider other factors like deductibles, co-payments and coinsurance.

Medicare Advantage remains a strong alternative for people who prefer to receive care through a private insurer rather than through Medicare's original fee-for-service program. Enrollment in the private Medicare Advantage plans is expected to grow by 1.2 million to 18.5 million people in 2017 – about 32 percent of Medicare beneficiaries.

Even if you've been satisfied with your health and drug coverage, you may benefit from reviewing all your options. Shopping around may save you money or improve your coverage.

Medicare's website – www.medicare.gov – has the best tool for helping you narrow your search for a new health or drug plan. Just click on "Find Health and Drug Plans." After entering your ZIP code and the list of your prescriptions, you can use the "Medicare Plan Finder" tool to compare your coverage and out-of-pocket costs under different plans.

The quality of a health or drug plan's customer service should be considered, too. To help you identify the best and worst, the Plan Finder provides star ratings for each plan. A gold star will show plans with the highest, five-star rating, while a warning icon will alert you to plans that have performed poorly for at least the past three years.

Besides using Medicare.gov, you can call Medicare's toll-free help line at 1-800-Medicare (1-800-633-4227) or consult your "Medicare & You 2017 Handbook," which was mailed to you in late September.

One-on-one benefits counseling is also available through your State Health Insurance Assistance Program. In Massachusetts, you should call the SHINE program at 1-800-243-4636.

Thanks to the health care law, you'll enjoy more savings on your prescriptions in 2017 once you land in the coverage gap, known as the "doughnut hole." You'll receive a 60 percent discount on your brand-name drugs and a 49 percent discount on your generic drugs while in the gap. The doughnut hole begins once you and your drug plan have spent $3,700 for your drugs.

If you're having difficulty affording your medications, you may qualify for extra help with your drug coverage premiums, deductibles and co-payments. The amount of help depends on your income and resources. But, generally, you'll pay no more than $3.30 for generic drugs and $8.25 for brand-name drugs.

Thirty-nine percent of people in Massachusetts with Medicare's drug coverage now get such a break. To learn more about whether you qualify for extra help, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/prescriptionhelp or call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213.

There's no better time to check your Medicare coverage. Again, the Medicare open enrollment period runs until Dec. 7. Any changes you make will take effect on Jan. 1, 2017.

QCAP, Bank Of Canton Host First Of Four Homebuyer Workshops

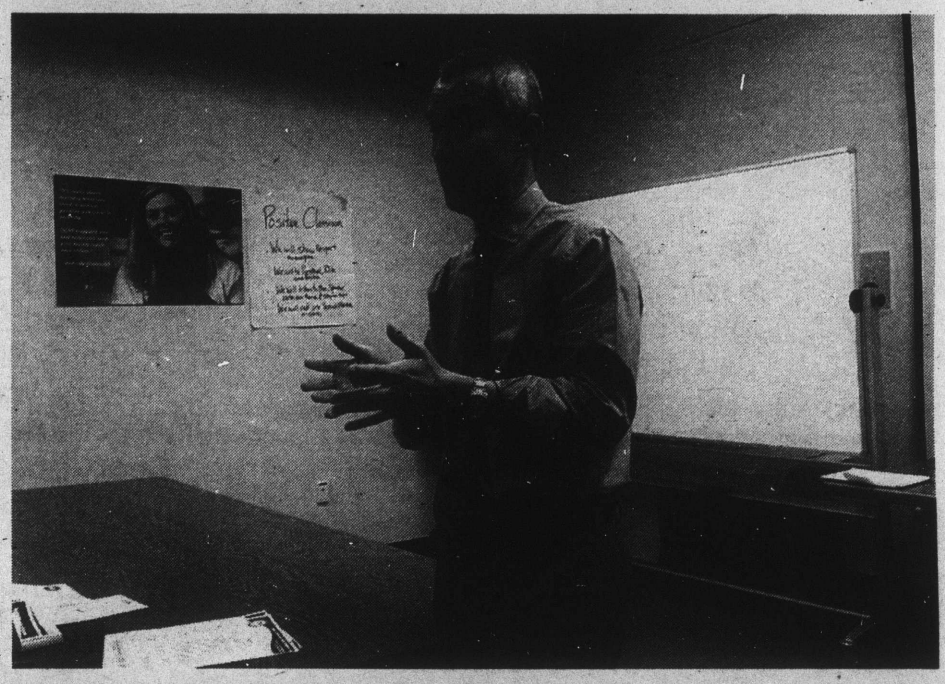
Education Series Provides Advice, Guidance For New Homebuyers

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) and Bank of Canton conducted a two-part workshop last week to educate and counsel first-time homebuyers. Held at QCAP's office on Hancock Street in downtown Quincy last Thursday evening and Saturday afternoon, the intimate gathering received an overview of the home buying process, with guidance from real estate professionals and lenders.

"I wanted to learn more about becoming a homeowner," said attendee Amina Owens of Fall River. "My supervisor at work took this class previously, and had great things to say about it. So I thought I'd enroll too."

Attendees of both sessions received a Certificate of Completion, which fulfills the educational requirement needed to obtain a low-cost MassHousing loan.

"QCAP has educated first-time homebuyers for nearly 25 years," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP's chief executive officer. "Our mission has always been to ensure that first-time homebuyers are well informed and prepared to make sound financial decisions that help them realize their dreams within their means. We are pleased and honored to again partner with Bank of Canton, who shares this vision, and we are grateful for their commitment to quality and service integrity."



BANK OF CANTON'S Regional Lending Manager Steve Chu explains the importance of good credit to workshop attendees. Other speakers from the real estate industry included a broker, insurance agent, attorney, and home inspector. Photo Courtesy Bank of Canton

"We're proud to sponsor and participate in this educational series," said Stephen P. Costello, president and CEO of Bank of Canton. "Without question, the homebuying process can be intimidating to those who are unfamiliar with it. But our friends at QCAP have done an outstanding job assembling materials and speakers to make that process more manageable. We're excited to contribute our lending expertise and financial support to benefit Greater Quincy's future homeowners."

The next first-time homebuyer workshop will be held in early 2017.

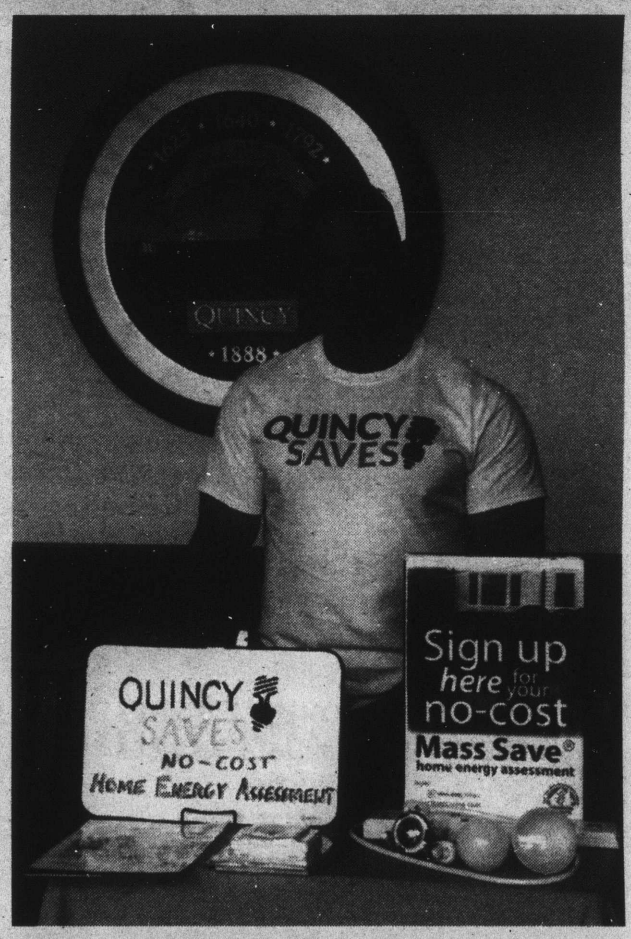
Oct. 30 is National Weatherization Day

Sunday, Oct. 30th is National Weatherization Day.

Weatherization can save residents energy and money, while making homes more comfortable. Weatherproofing can protect your home from snow, wind, rain, and sun. It is a great time of year to think about your home's energy consumption and comfort, as winter is just around the corner. Measures including installing door sweeps and caulking gaps and holes and aligning and securing window locks can make a big difference in comfort and fuel use.

The Quincy Saves campaign is in its final few months. The program urges Quincy residents to get no-cost home energy assessments, and educates residents about recommended weatherization projects. Over 700 Quincy residents have already received their home energy assessments this year, with more than 370 residents having weatherization projects completed. Participants have made their homes and apartments warmer and more comfortable for this coming winter while using less energy. They are projected to collectively save almost $200,000 on their annual energy bills. Since most weatherization measures last many years, this saving will be repeated in future years too.

During the home energy assessment, residents will receive free energy-saving LED and CFL lightbulbs, water-saving devices and have set-back thermostats installed, if appropriate. Residents will learn what other measures will save energy in their particular homes. The energy assessors will provide information about discounts available on energy-saving measures including insulation, air sealing, efficient heating and air conditioning systems, etc.



QUINCY SAVES representative Steve Foley with energy-saving devices including LED and CFL lightbulbs, lower-flow showerhead, set-back thermostat, and plug-in power strip.

To schedule your no-cost home energy assessment, or to ask about weatherization services, call 617-855-9889 or visit www.homeworksenergy.com/quincy-saves.

Quincy Saves representatives will also be available at the following upcoming events:

- Friday, Oct 28 from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Quincy Farmers' Market
- Wednesday, Nov 2 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Quincy City Hall
- Wednesday, Nov 2 from 3 -7 p.m. at New York Mart
- Friday, Nov 4 from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Quincy Farmers' Market
- Wednesday, Nov 9 from 2:30 – 6:30 p.m. at Stop and Shop, Southern Artery.

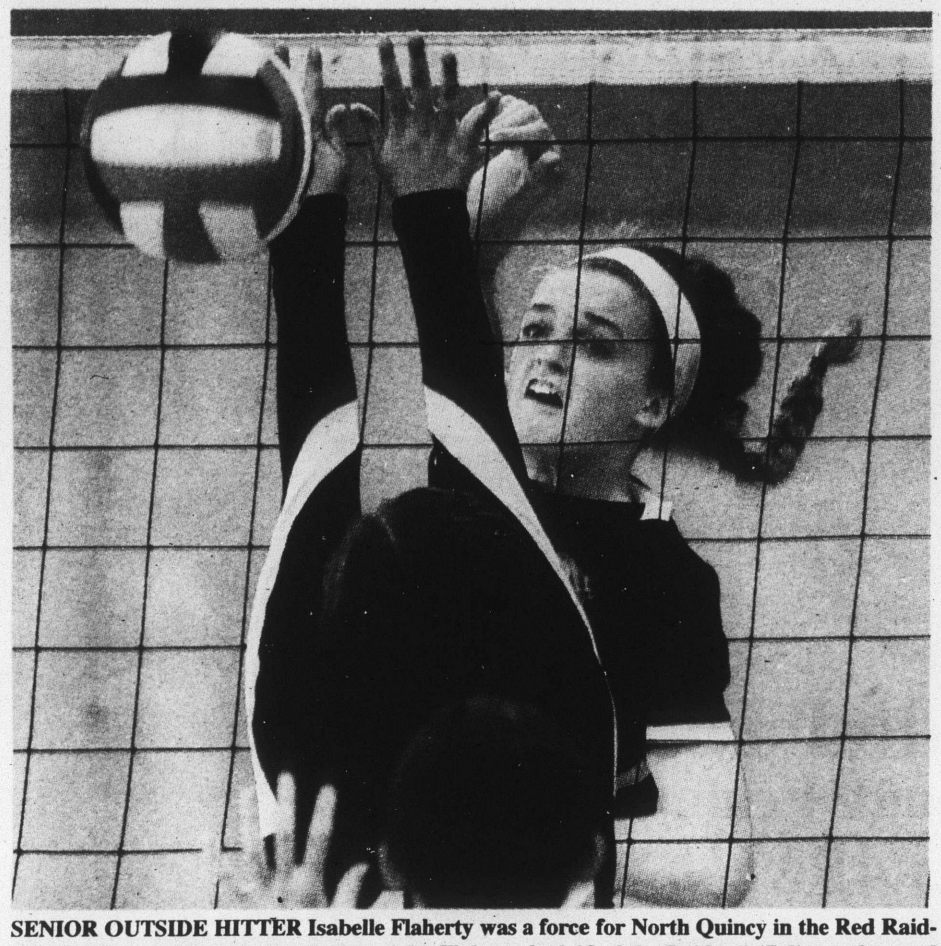
NQ Volleyball Sweeps Hanover, Improves To 12-3



SENIOR OUTSIDE HITTER Isabelle Flaherty was a force for North Quincy in the Red Raiders 3-0 win over Hanover last Friday night. Flaherty had 18 of the Raiders' 47 digs and posted a team-high eight kills and an ace. Quincy Sun File Photos/Robert Bosworth

By TOM JOYCE

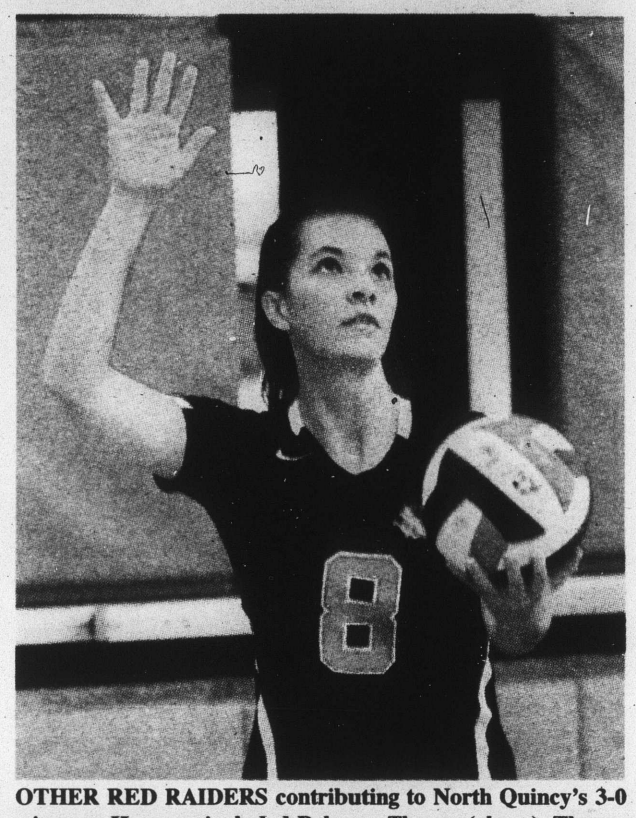
They are experienced, and it is playing in their favor this season.

Off to a 12-3 start, the North Quincy High School girls' volleyball team's entire varsity roster is composed of upperclassmen, primarily seniors but also a handful of juniors.

Last Friday, that experience was the difference-maker as the Red Raiders topped the Hanover Indians at home, 3-0. The Raiders won their sets 25-11, 25-10 and 25-23.

Overall, Raiders head coach Kerry Ginty was satisfied with her team's play.

"We're just trying to continue to get better everyday," she said, "We're still working on a lot of different things, defensively and offensively. We're still working through some different lineups in case we need it later in the season. I thought the girls did a good job making some adjustments. I thought overall, it was a hard-fought match. It was good to see them come back at the end the way they did."



OTHER RED RAIDERS contributing to North Quincy's 3-0 win over Hanover included Rebecca Thorne (above). The senior middle blocker was second with 11 points serving with five solo blocks, four digs, two kills and an ace.

While the Raiders took the first two sets with ease, they fell behind in the third. At one point in it, they trailed, 17-6. When they were down 15-6, Ginty called a timeout.

"We had to just make some adjustments," she said. "Their No. 17 is a great blocker and we were kind of running into her too much. I just told them to focus on getting a good pass. And then we wanted to run some different things offensively to move away from their strongest blocker."

Perhaps another motive was to null the Indians momentum. Regardless, they outscored their foes, 19-6 after breaking out of their slump.

The Raiders had a strong start as they went up 10-1 in their first set and 9-3 in their second.

"That's always nice," Ginty said of taking early leads. "Volleyball is a game of momentum. It's all momentum. If you don't have it, you're trying to get it back and when you have it, you're trying to keep it as much as you can.

"It's good to get off to a good start," she added. "But it can change at anytime, so we're always just focused on doing the best we can to keep it when we have it. When we don't have it,

Quincy Volleyball Tops W-H, Now Stands 16-2

By JOE REARDON

It's not the most recommended or romantic road to victory, but when you can overcome some lethargic play and still sweep a team on the cusp of qualifying for the tournament it's a sign your squad is resilient in the long haul of a volleyball campaign.

Quincy had its problems putting Whitman-Hanson away in the second game of their Patriot League match on Monday, but when they finally did, the outcome was a foregone conclusion in a 3-0 sweep on the Presidents' home court.

The win upped Quincy's record to an impressive 16-2 on the season with a huge rematch slated for Thursday against rival North Quincy and the tournament just on the horizon.

The first meeting between the two local teams Oct. 5th was a frantic masterpiece with the feel of a postseason contest as Jacqui Niosi's squad pulled out a 3-2 win with the final game going down to the wire, 16-14.

"I'm sure it'll be an unbelievable game," said Niosi. "They have a lot of seniors that have been working hard."

In their sweep against the Panthers, the Presidents got big games from Danielle Parry (17 assists, 10 digs), Shannon Foley (13 digs), Hillary Valenzuela (nine digs), Jackie Ryan (six digs) and Reagan Hutchins (seven assists).

With the tournament just around the corner, Niosi is more concerned about getting the team fully prepared and getting through the final two games on the regular season schedule.

"We just have to work on our overall communication," she said. "Our defense

SENIOR SETTER DANIELLE PARRY contributed 17 assists and 13 digs in Quincy's 3-0 win over Whitman-Hanson Monday.

Football Hall Of Fame Induction Banquet Nov. 22

The Quincy-North Quincy Football Hall of Fame will induct 12 new members at its 33rd annual banquet Tuesday, Nov. 22 at the Quincy Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St., Quincy.

Cocktails begin at 6:30 p.m. followed by dinner at 7 p.m.

Tickets are $40 per person and will not be sold at the door.

Tickets should be purchased by Tuesday, Nov. 15. To buy tickets to the banquet call Ron Ivil at 1-781-337-0062.

This year's Q-NQ Football Hall of Fame inductees are:

Also being inducted with a special award is Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth.

there's just a few different things we try to fix to dig ourselves out of that hole."

Senior outside hitter Isabelle Flaherty had 18 of the Raiders' 47 digs. She also had a team-leading eight kills and an ace.

Senior opposite hitter Remy Aucoin was second on the team with seven kills. She also had an ace.

Samantha Caldwell, a senior setter, led the team with 16 points serving, and she was second on the team with five assists. Fellow senior setter Kaleigh Manton led the team with nine assists.

Rebecca Thorne, a senior middle blocker, was second on the team with 11 points serving. She led the team with five solo blocks and added four digs, two kills and an ace.

Junior middle blocker Julia Klincewicz added three kills. Senior defensive specialist Jennifer Zou had seven digs while senior outside hitter Bridget Durgin and junior outside Sharon Yiang each added four digs apiece.

In particular, Ginty said she has been especially impressed by Durgin and Zou lately.

"Those two seniors have stepped up for us and they're really earning their way onto the court," she said.

As a team, the Raiders had 47 digs, five aces and 21 kills.

On Sept. 30, the Raiders also beat the Indians, 3-0 (25-18, 25-18, 25-16).

Earlier in the week, the Raiders also beat Scituate on Oct. 17, 3-0 (25-10, 25-22, 25-11). Two days later, they topped Pembroke, 3-0 (25-18, 25-23, 28-26).

With their strong performances this season, it is evident the Raiders are benefitting from their experienced varsity roster.

"It's been a long road to get here," Ginty said of her team's experience. "We were young for two years really. We had some seniors last year that we obviously miss, but we've been playing with a lot of the same core group of girls for the past two or three years.

"We suffered through some growing pains last year," she added. "But now, we're kind of reaping the benefits of going through that struggle because now we have the experience."

Knowing they will graduate a plethora of talent after this season, the Raiders are setting high expectations for themselves -- like a deep postseason run.

"We have a long road to get there," Ginty said. "We have a lot of good teams in our district. Quincy High is going to be a big obstacle for us on Thursday. We're looking to make a run into that tournament and hopefully make it to that sectional final if we can this year."

In order to realize that goal, Ginty said her team needs to be as consistent as possible.

"We're always looking to cut down on our errors," she said. "The team that makes less mistakes is eventually going to end up winning the game."

North Quincy visits Quincy tonight (Thursday) at 6:15 p.m. The Presidents rallied for a 3-2 win over the Red Raiders Oct. 5.

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

ARE YOU GETTING SHORTER?

While estimates vary, it is generally thought that, on average, people lose between one-quarter-of-an-inch to one-half-an-inch every decade past the age of 40 or 50. These losses tend to increase more during the later years, with women generally losing more height than men. Much of this shrinkage is due to fluid loss in the gel-like intervertebral discs that cause them to flatten. Other possible factors include declines in muscle mass and bone density, as well as poor posture. Osteoporosis may also play a role, as progressively decreasing bone mass increases the likelihood of vertebral fractures that compromise the spine's structural integrity. In any case, it is important to identify the cause of lost height and take steps to address it.

Although chiropractors are typically thought of as back pain specialists, we are also interested in the overall wellness and health of the entire body. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we can help you the natural way, without the use of drugs or surgery. If you or someone you know wants to experience the safest, most effective, least expensive, and supremely satisfying care, call 617.472.4220 for an appointment today. Don't let life pass you by! Let us help you live it free of pain. Our office is located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. Building more bone when a person is young will help to stave off bone loss in later years.

Quincy, North Quincy Duel To Scoreless Tie

GIRLS SOCCER

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was not the result that either especially wanted, but it was the result that each richly deserved.

Quincy and North Quincy played a dead-solid even girls soccer match. Each side played shutdown defense, each moved the ball quickly and sharply through the midfield, each marked attackers so well that there was rarely an open patch of field for a scoring chance.

The two dueled to a 0-0 tie in a tense, exciting, well-played Patriot League match on Senior Night Saturday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Neither side won. Neither side lost. It ended as it should have ended between the two ancient rivals. Even.

"It was a great match from both sides," said North coach Emily Rooney. "We played 80 minutes of good soccer. I'm so proud of my team. We adjusted well to what they were doing, and I thought we had the better of the play."

"It was great soccer," said Quincy coach Seth Harmon whose team posted a win and a tie in two rivalry games this season after going 28 years without a victory. "I thought we dominated in the first half when we spread the field and swung the ball to the open player. The second half was pretty even."

It was fitting that the dominant player from each side came from the fullback line, from the defense. Senior Mandy Hazelton was terrific for North. She did all the things a defender should do. She blocked shots, cleared the ball with strong boots, stopped thru passes, headed away crosses, won 50-50 balls and made steals from shooters who had a clean angles to the goal. In the first game (a 3-0 Quincy victory), Brianne Dane scored on a pair of breakaways. With Hazelton marking anyone who came through midfield, there were no breakaways Saturday night.

In addition, she created North's best offense of the night in the second half, forcing the ball up through the center and onto the attack as much by will as by skill. In her final rivalry game, she played great soccer

"Mandy is relentless. She is a competitor and so mentally tough that she thrives in a match like this," said Rooney.

Freshman Tara McCleary gave a scary glimpse of how good she could be in the future at center fullback for Quincy. She has the skills and instincts of a midfielder. She dribbles and passes the ball confidently. She has a strong foot to clear away threats and that unteachable awareness of everything that is happening around her which is common to all good defenders.

"By nature, she likes to attack. She would be great in the midfield, but this year she did what was best for the team which was play on defense. She is going to be very good," said Harmon.

North's senior Kerin Coleman was a strong presence in the middle of the fullback line. She is the last of six sisters to play soccer for North and, in her last game against Quincy, she was sure and steady in front of Shannan Kennedy. Ally MacPherson was solid on the backline with McCleary for the Presidents.

"I was Kerin's camp counselor when she was 12, so I was happy to have the chance to coach her," said Rooney. "She's a great leader and tonight, she showed her experience and talent in a big game."

Most of the match was played in the midfield. Neither side would surrender the flow of the game. Senior captain Joelle Robinson returned from a three-week absence from games and practice with a fine match for Quincy. Junior Taylor Routhier sent thru passes with just the right touch to the attack. Junior Kari Wismar and freshman Jill O'Toole flew up and down the wings testing the North defense.

Junior Jill Hallissey and sophomore Samantha Smith controlled the ball and kept North moving with short, crisp passes. Seniors Abby Koch, Alison Radzik and Ciara Viscione were all skilled and relentless in the midfield.

"Joelle worked to come back for this game. We have two games left, but she won't play in either. This was her last North game, and she wanted to play badly," said Harmon.

"I loved what my seniors did in midfield. Jill and Samantha are pure soccer players who should have excellent seasons next year," said Rooney.

Quincy had the better of the chances, but Kennedy was brilliant in posting her school-record 30th career shutout. Her best was a diving stop on Dane who was in clear midway through the first half. Two spot-on passing combinations from Wismar to Dane barely missed connecting for a goal.

North's Stephanie MacFarland, who performed a beautiful violin solo of the National Anthem before the match, saved a certain Quincy goal, by knocking aside a shot from Dane which was headed to an open corner of the net in the first half.

"Without Stephanie's play, it's not a 0-0 final," said Rooney.

The seniors from each school were presented with flowers and introduced along with their families before the match. Dane, Robinson, MacPherson, keeper Emi Guarante, Nina McDonald, and Kelsey Dunn were recognized from Quincy.

From North, Coleman, Hazelton, Kennedy, Koch, MacFarland, Radzik, Viscione, Nicole Flora, Sinead Hanley Mia Healy, Allesandra Toscanini, Vivian Tran, Devan Yilgor, Yasmine Yilgor and their families were also honored.

Quincy's Paulo Soares Scores Two Goals; North's Phillip Thalheim Stops 21 Shots

BOYS SOCCER

By BILL GRIFFIN

Speed, passing, skills and numbers.

It is a difficult combination to beat. Quincy put all four on display, passing the ball as if were attached to a string, racing to open spaces across the field, picking corners of the net for goals, and working a deep bench to drop North Quincy, 6-1 and move within a point of its second consecutive tournament bid at Veterans' Memorial Stadium Saturday night.

"I was pleased tonight because we worked hard," said Quincy coach Mark Spendlove. "We have good speed and skills. We know we have the numbers, and we used them to tire them out a little. We have to work had because North is always a battle."

Paulo Soares led the offense with a pair of goals. Senior midfielder Tristan McCormick had a goal, an assist, and on a night of splendid passing, McCormick had the best of them all, threading the needle with a 40-yard grounder for a Kevin O'Shea breakaway. O'Shea, Joseph Oduro, and Leandro Batista scored in a relentless attack built on quickness and passing.

"We have the ability and when we do the work like we did tonight, we play well," said Spendlove.

For North, senior Phillip Thalheim made another strong case for being one of the top keepers on the South Shore. He made 21 saves, many of them acrobatic efforts worthy of a highlight reel. He stopped a combination of 11 breakaways and clear point-blank shots. He made split kicks saves, dove through the air to take away drives labeled perfectly for the corner, fisted away crossing shots, and came out to beat attackers to the ball.

Most importantly, despite playing with an injured foot as the score mounted in the second half, he never gave a fraction less than a full effort. If ever there was excellence in defeat, it Thalheim's effort against Quincy.

"He's just a tremendous goalie. He never stopped playing hard. Without him, the score would have been much higher," said Spendlove.

"He never disappoints," said North Quincy coach Rich Hanlon.

If there was a dominant theme to Quincy's victory, it was passing. All six goals were assisted. McCormick started it by sending a low bullseye which traced its way through two defenders and covered nearly half the pitch for O'Shea's breakaway and a 1-0 lead early in the first half.

"That was a beautiful pass," Spendlove.

Soares and Youssef Khamis worked a perfect give-and-go to spring Soares from the right corner for a blast and a 2-0 lead. Owen Smyth set up Batista for a high finish, and McCormick scored off a thru pass from Mohamed Gouriche in extra time for a 4-0 halftime lead.

Oduro made a bulls-eye cross for Soares' second goal early in the second half, and Oduro upped it to 6-0 off an O'Shea feed. What did all four goals have in common? Passing, passing, and more passing.

"When we move and let the ball do the work, we're a good offensive team," said Spendlove.

Stephen Cobble connected on the shot of the night for North's goal with 15:35 left in the match. He lofted a perfectly-placed floater off a free kick from the 35-yard line for a score with 15:35 left in the match. Cobble, Devlin St. Marie, Abdel El Hashash, Aiden Ring, Declan Murphy and Lucjon Ceca all played well for North.

"Stephen made an unbelievable shot," said Hanlon.

It was more than just scoring for Quincy. McCormick, Soares and Smyth controlled the midfield and the fullback line of Clayton Rodrigues, Melvin Gonzales, and Ali Mokalled kept the scoring area clear in front of keeper Brendan Corbett.

North entered off an impressive 1-1 tie and a match against powerful Hingham in which the Red Raiders held the Harbormen scoreless over the final 50 minutes. Hingham has been to the state finals the last three years and only have two losses this season. Thalheim stopped two penalty shots in the match. On the same sequence. He turned back the first, but the officials ruled, he started too quickly. He set himself and stopped the second. This simply does not happen.

The Red Raiders led on a goal from El Hashash into the final minute when the Harbormen scored out of a scramble to tie the match.

"In all my years, I have never seen a keeper stop back-to-back penalty shots like Philip did," said Hanlon. "It was our best effort of the year. I thought it was something that we could built on, but we couldn't keep up with Quincy's speed. That's a good team over there"

Quincy (8-5-3) is at Whitman-Hanson Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. North is at Plymouth South Wednesday at 4 p.m.

Q-NQ Cross Country Edged By Hanover

The Quincy-North Quincy cross country team seems to have a penchant for one point losses. The latest was a one pointer against a much improved Hanover team.

Abby Murphy once again went wire-to-wire for the individual win but Hanover had a pack of five girls through most of the race and Devin Hiltunen (4th) and Kara Polsgrove (5th) couldn't break them up anymore than 2-3, 6-7 and the Indians pulled off a one point win.

Mairead Kelly was 10th. Other finishers were Eve Anderson (19th) and Ava Lapsley, just coming back from injury (20th).

On the boys side Jimmy Cannon returned to the victory stand running wire-to-wire for the win over the 2.5 mile course. Aidan Golden was 4th, Ryan Polsgrove 7th, Kevin White 11th and Dakota Pendleton 12th to close out the scoring for QNQ.

Other finishers for QNQ were Nick Ouellette 13th, Brian O'Connell 15th, Tyler Carey 16th, Alex Ouellette 22th, Braeden Kopp 23rd, Ryan Mahoney 31st, Ty Keohoe 33rd, Sean Scanlon 37th, and Kevin Mortimer 38th.

Quincycles Hosting 'Cranksgiving' Bike Ride Nov. 5

Quincycles is hosting its first Cranksgiving bike ride Saturday, Nov. 5 at 9 a.m.

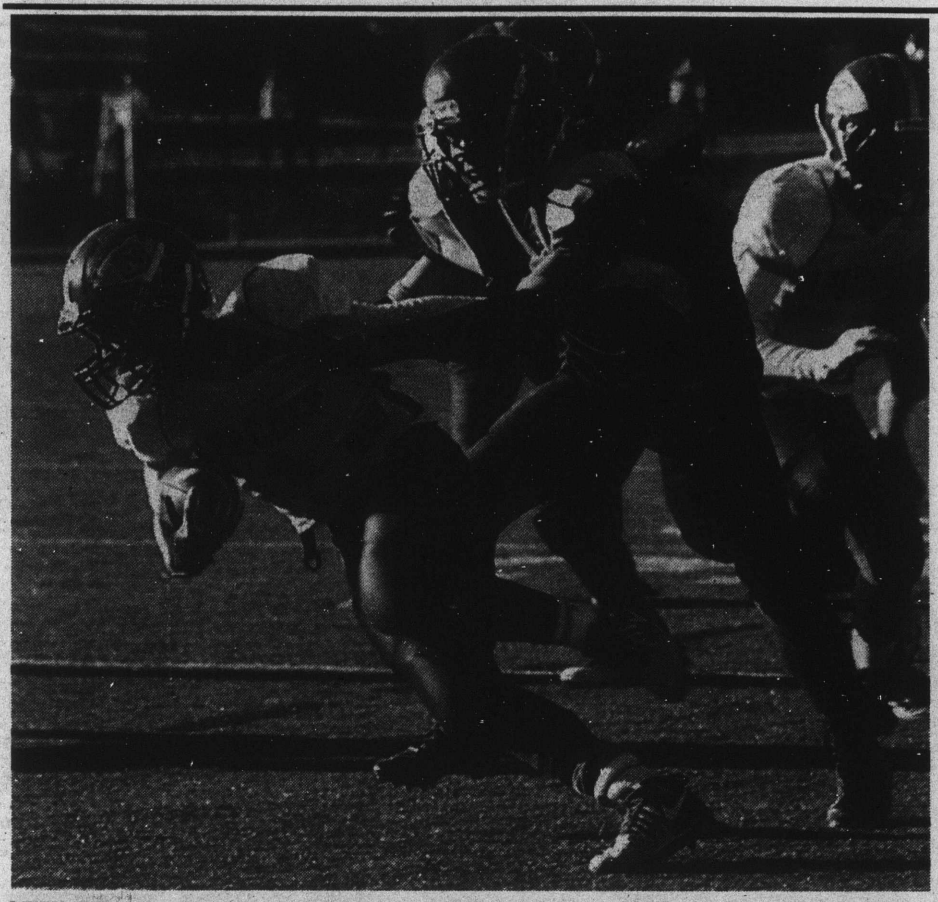
Cranksgiving is an opportunity for cyclists to give back to their community. For this year's event, participants will bike to at least four local markets to buy needed supplies for Interfaith Social Services and the Quincy Animal Shelter.

The unguided ride is free, but participants will use their own money to buy the supplies.

Participants of this bike-powered food drive should meet at Interfaith Social Services, 105 Adams St., Quincy at 9 a.m. to pick up the list of needed food-pantry and pet-friendly items and return to the same spot by 11:45 a.m. Parking near the site is limited.

Participants with receipts from at least four different markets will be entered into a raffle for prizes from Anderson Bicycle. Participants can ride in groups or on their own. Visit www.quincycles.org for more information on the event and to review ride guidelines. Monetary donations to Interfaith Social Services and the Quincy Animal Shelter can be made through their websites or at www.quincycles.org.

Quincycles is a group of Quincy residents advocating for bicycle infrastructure on our city streets and promoting responsible bicycling as a means of transportation, recreation, and exercise in Quincy. Contact Quincycles@gmail.com with questions.



QYFL TITANS – Tyler Le (#1, Apaches) and Isaiah Steinberg (#6 Manets) lead their respective squads on both sides of the football. The two battled Sunday afternoon in a great game between the Apaches and Manets. The Apaches knocked off the previously unbeaten Manets, 8-0.

The North Quincy Apaches (4-2) clashed with undefeated Houghs Neck Manets (6-0) last Sunday, in the QYFL regular season finale.

The rematch was another defensive battle between the two squads. On their opening drive, the Apaches drove the ball down to the Manet 3 yard line, only to be held on a goal-line stand.

Midway through the second quarter, Apache DT Declan Geary partially blocked a punt, giving the Apaches the Ball on the Manets 48 yard line. Four plays later, Apache QB Dan Scolaro connected with TE Colm Geary on a 30-yard TD pass. Scolaro kicked the 2-point conversion as the Apaches took an 8-0 lead at halftime.

Both teams mounted long drives that ate up most of the second half. Both defenses continued to hold each other scoreless in the second half, as the Apaches knocked off the previously unbeaten, Manets 8-0.

The Houghs Neck Manets (7-1) captured the Desmond Division and will have a first round bye in the playoffs. The North Quincy Apaches (5-2) will face the Milton Mustangs in Round 1 of the QYFL Playoffs Sunday, Oct. 30 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

JUNIOR VARSITY:

MANETS - 20 APACHES - 12

It was a defensive battle on the muddy turf of Cavanaugh field, through most of the first half. The Manets got on the scoreboard late in the half when Stephen Gallant ran for a 10 yard TD to make it 6-0 at halftime.

Early in the second half, the Manets recovered an Apache fumble. The Manets capitalized as RB Mike Cascarano scored on a 14-yard TD run to make it 12-0. The Apaches immediately fired back as RB Matt Craig raced for a 71-yard TD run to close the score to 12-6. The Manets answered with a 48-yard TD run by William Ploof. Cascarano added the conversion to extend the Manets lead to 20-6.

The Apaches got the ball back and mounted a drive capped off by a 3-yard TD run by JC Petrongolo. Time ran out as the Manets defeated the Apaches 20-12.

The Apaches got strong performances from Matt Craig, JC Petrongolo, Billy MacDonald, Justin Neil, Pat MacDonald, Theo Porter, Ruben Parilla, Grant Murphy, Tony Le, Scott Gutro and Pat Walsh.

The Manets were led by Mike Cascarano, Andrew Engren, William Ploof, Mason McDonough, Stephen Gallant, Dean Schaaf and Kyle Regan.

The Houghs Neck Manets (6-1) captured the Desmond Division and will have a first round bye in the playoffs. The North Quincy Apaches (3-4) will face the Milton Mustangs in Round 1 of the QYFL Playoffs Sunday, Oct. 30 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Quincy Recreation Tennis Tournament Results

Tennis is alive and well in the City of Quincy as demonstrated by the excellent turnout and outstanding play in the 46th annual edition of the Quincy Recreation Department's all city tennis tournament. The tournament is conducted each fall to crown the best resident tennis players in ten divisions of play.

This year's event proved that age doesn't matter if your skills out match your age, as the winner of the prestigious Men's Singles event Shane Lerkvikarn also laid claim to the boys sixteen and under championship as well. The North Quincy High School student set the stage for what could be a long run at tennis lore in Quincy with his impressive play. Tournament historians will also note the names of Eleey and Chan among the winners and finalists as these tennis families continue to make there presences know as some of the best in Quincy once again.

The Eleey family tennis tree shows them to be the first family of Quincy tennis with 41 appearances on championship trophies. Mother Aileen has 26, husband Peter 5, daughter Jacquelyn 5, daughter Alison 3 and son Peter with 2. One of Aileen's titles was in 1995 with her mother before she was an Eleey.

The Chan family has an impressive 23 Championships for their mantle. Mother Phoebe has 11; husband Job has 5 and daughter Lydia rounds out the total with 7.

Recreation Director Barry Welch joined with Judy Brazil, chief marketing officer of the Quincy Credit Union to present all champions and finalists with colorful plaques for their achievements. Welch praised the Quincy Credit Union for their "outstanding commitment to the citizens of Quincy as the sponsor of this event for the past twenty years.

"During this period thousands of tennis players and tennis families have had the opportunity to play in this uniquely Quincy tradition. We are grateful for the opportunity they provide," Welch said.

Over 110 matches were played in a three week period beginning September 17th both nights and weekend's with some new faces and familiar tennis family names rounding out this year's final matches. Welch also had high praise for Tournament Director John Franceschini who along with Michelle Hanly has more than 25 years of creating a draw that brings out the fairest and best play and makes the event so great.

"This year both the participants and I have high praise for recreation staffers Paul Cunniff and Tim Liuzzo who maned the scoring boards for long hours and did a great job scheduling and coordinating the players for the matches," Welch said.

Each champion and finalist receives a plaque for their achievement and the name of the champion is engraved each year on a silver bowl for each event. The bowls with the names of all champions dating back to 1975 remain on permanent display year round in the main office of the Recreation Department.

The Henry "The Master" McAuliffe Bowl is presented to the champions in the Men's Doubles division. The team of Kevin Paterno and Tin Tran defeated Ankur Katiyar and Ajay Tripathi in a tightly contested three set match, 1-6, 6-1, 6-4. Paterno and Tran advanced to the finals over Alex Gradouski and Kevin Moy, 6-1, 7-6. Katiyar and Tripathi advanced to the finals with a thrilling victory over the father-son duo of Sang and Shane Lerkvikarn, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2.

The largest draw in the tournament saw Shane Lerkvikarn claim the Lionel "Shine" Buckley Bowl as champion of the Men's Singles division. Lerkvikarn, who also took home the Boy's 16 and Under Championship, defeated Anthony Do in the final, 6-2, 6-3. Lerkvikarn advanced to the final with a victory over Alex Gradouski, 6-0, 6-3. Do advanced to the finals in this event by defeating Kevin Moy, 6-4, 6-3.

In the Women's Singles division, Phoebe Chan took home the championship with an impressive victory over Erika Sato, 6-0, 6-2. In her semi-final match, Chan defeated Ankita Golhani, 6-0, 6-0. Sato earned her spot in the finals with a victory over Paula Mwafulirwa, 6-0, 6-0.

Shane Lerkvikarn had an impressive victory in the championship of the Boys 16 and Under Singles division. Lerkvikarn was able to take home his second consecutive championship in a rematch of last year's finals. Lerkvikarn emerged with a victory over Peyton McGaffigan, 6-2, 6-1. In the semi-finals McGaffigan defeated Adam Tlacoxolal, 6-0, 6-1, while Lerkvikarn advanced past Austin Li, 6-0, 6-0.

In the Girls 16 and Under Singles division, Lydia Chan took home her fourth consecutive championship of the tournament with her victory over Caitlin Le, 6-0, 6-0. This was one of Chan's three finals appearances in this year's tournament. Le earned her spot in the final with an impressive victory over Christine Le, 4-6, 7-5, 6-2.

In the Mixed Doubles division, the championship featured a rematch of a 2015 semifinal, with the mother-son team of Aileen and Peter Eleey facing off against the father-daughter team of Job and Lydia Chan. The Eleey's were able to defend their title and claim the William F. Ryan Bowl with a 6-0, 6-1 victory. Aileen and Peter Eleey advanced to the championship by defeating Steven Pham and Wendy Zhou, 6-0, 6-0. Job and Lydia Chan advanced to the championship by defeating Elliott Columb and Trang Vo, 6-3, 6-0.

The Women's Doubles championship featured a matchup between two mother-daughter teams. The team of Aileen and Alison Eleey came out on top over Lydia and Phoebe Chan, 6-2, 6-2. The Eleey's advanced to the championship with an impressive victory over Caitlin Le and Erika Sato, 6-0, 6-0. The Chan's earned their finals appearance with a victory over May Huang and Christine Le, 6-0, 6-0.

In the Men's 35 and Over Singles, Ankur Katiyar took home the championship with a victory over tournament veteran Job Chan, 6-4, 6-2. Katiyar advanced to the championship with a victory over Ajay Tripathi in the semi-finals, 6-1, 6-0. Chan made his second consecutive finals appearance by defeating Kadirvel Subramaniam, 4-6, 6-2, 6-0.

Job Chan took home his third consecutive Men's 50 and Over title and claim to the Richard Meade Bowl with a victory over Sang Lerkvikarn, 6-3, 6-0. This was Chan's third finals appearance in this year's tournament. In the semi-finals Chan defeated Kadirvel Subramaniam, 6-1, 6-2. Lerkvikarn defeated Wes Friberg 6-3, 6-2 on his way to the finals.

In a competitive Men's B Singles division, Kevin Paterno emerged from the field to win the championship over Suresh Valivarthi, 6-0, 6-2. In the semi-finals Paterno moved past Sushil Kumarsaher, 6-4, 6-2. Valivarthi earned a spot in the finals for the second consecutive year with a 6-1, 6-0 victory over Wes Friberg.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, Oct. 14, at approximately 2:45 p.m., Officers Ken Wood and Robert Connell were dispatched to the area of Fifth Avenue for a report of an unknown person taking items out of a garage. A description was given out via the radio for a female wearing gray and black leggings, flip flops and wheeling luggage.

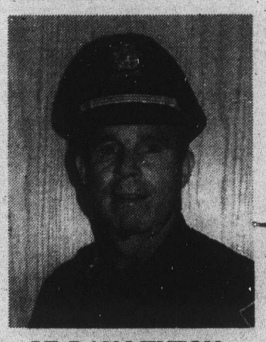
While en route to the call, Officer Paul Coughlin, who was at the school crossing at Southern Artery and Washington Street, flagged down Officer Wood. He told him that he just saw a female matching that description walking on Southern Artery.

Officer Wood made contact with the female as she was walking through the empty parking lot of 865 Southern Artery. When asked where she was coming from, the female asked why she was being stopped. After being told, the female said that she had observed numerous items on the sidewalk and in the driveway near a garage so she assumed that the owners were throwing them out. She added that she made contact with the owner and offered to pay for a tool box that was there.

When asked if she had ever been in trouble, the female said no, however, a criminal record check showed that she was last arrested in 2014 for possession of class A and has three other previous offenses. When confronted with this information, the female said that she had been arrested but since she beat it she didn't think it mattered.

Officer Connell went to the caller's address to get a statement as to what occurred. The victim said that she heard noises coming from her garage so she went out to investigate and found a female going through items up on shelves, looking in tool boxes, and placing items in a bag on the ground. She asked the female what she was doing but the female left without responding. With this information, Miranda Rights were read to the female suspect, which she said she understood and waived.

When asked if she entered the garage, she said she thought they were having a yard sale. She then changed her story by saying that she was half in the garage and half out of it because she thought the items in the garage were being thrown out. When asked if she tried to contact the owner of the house about the items before she started looking through them, she stated she walked to the door, banged on it but no one answered. Based on the information provided by the victim and the conflicting account by the female suspect, Officer Wood believed the female was intent on stealing the items. There was no indication that there was a yard sale or that the items were free to take.



LT. DAN MINTON

The female, a 36-year-old Weymouth resident, was placed under arrest and transported to the station. Officer Wood further interviewed the victim, who said that the garage door was not even open or locked and the garage was 75 feet into the driveway. There were no items in the driveway. She reiterated her account that the female suspect was first seen looking through shelves and tool boxes while putting items in a black bag on the ground. She said that some of the items were cleaning supplies, old fireworks and a new padlock.

When confronted, the suspect offered to give the victim $40 for the toolbox. The victim told the female suspect that nothing was for sale and wanted her to leave at which point she did, walking back up the driveway and down the street. The victim said the female never knocked at the door, never announced herself and never rang the door bell. She added that she was near the door and would have heard someone there. The victim used her phone to video the female suspect walking away.

During booking, Officer Tara Waters found a small piece of notebook paper with heroin it, along with a prescription bottle holding two small oval, orange pills identified as an amphetamine dextroamphetamine aka Adderall 30mg. There were also 8 blue pills identified as Alprazolam 1 mg. and one Cyclobenzprine hydrochloride 10 mg. pill. These pills were all located in a prescription bottle for FLUOXETINE prescribed to the female suspect. There was no prescription or corresponding prescriptions in her property for the above pills.

The female suspect was charged with, breaking and entering in the daytime to commit a felony, possession class A (heroin) and possession class E drugs.

Nice Work!

SCAM: Imposters have a new target: people who own tractor-trailer trucks and other commercial vehicles. A company calling itself "DOT Authority" led commercial truck owners to believe they were dealing with the real U.S. Department of Transportation or another government agency.

DOT Authority tricked the owners into paying extra service fees for help filing their federal and state motor carrier registrations. DOT Authority used robocalls, emails, and text messages to scare people into believing that if they didn't pay DOT Authority, they faced a $1,000 fine. Most of the people targeted owned small family businesses with only a few employees and fewer than five trucks. Owners that paid DOT Authority — instead of renewing their registration through the official Unified Carrier Registration website — did get their registration renewed, but they paid up to $550 more than the official government fee to do it.

That wasn't all. Commercial truck owners also have to recertify information about their vehicles every two years or deactivate their USDOT number if they're no longer operating. That's free through the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration.

DOT Authority charged people between $25 and $200 to download the form for recertification and $200 to file for deactivation. If that weren't enough, the company also put people into an automatic renewal program without their permission, taking out money again and again every year. The scheme, which began as early as 2012, took in more than $19 million from thousands of people throughout the U.S. (excerpts from FTC) can always get better. We've been playing better together as the season has gone on. The more times we step on the court the better we're going to be."

Senior Jessie Lei should be one of the key players on the court as the Presidents move forward. What Lei lacks in size she more than makes up with her jumping ability and talent. Whitman-Hanson had no answer for her as she was dominant at the net, unleashing hard shots just over the Panthers' front row. Lei finished with 13 kills and 11 digs on the night.

She is as quiet and unassuming on the sidelines as she is ferocious on the court. "I'm doing ok," Lei said with a smile. "I'm ready to versus great teams (in the tournament)."

Niosi knows she has a special player in Lei. "She has unbelievable volleyball instincts," Niosi said. "She's one of the best players I've ever coached and she's undersized."

The Presidents had the first game well in hand on Monday and never trailed, on the way to a convincing 25-14 victory. Lei drilled a ball over from the front row for a 15-11 advantage and Eryn McCarthy and Camryn Burgio (six kills) during a 6-1 spurt to extend the lead to 20-13. Hillary Valenzuela (nine digs) made good on two service points to round out the win.

Quincy didn't take the lead for good in the second game until its 19th point (19-18). The Panthers looked as though they might break the game open early as a 6-1 surge gave them a 10-5 lead, but the Presidents chipped away at the deficit, tying the game up seven different times. Burgio tied it at 24-24 in the homestretch and Lei added the final two points on a much-needed 3-0 finish for the 26-24.

The close loss in the second game for the Panthers was an opportunity missed as the Presidents were on their heels for the majority of the contest.

"It (second game) definitely kept going back and forth," said Niosi. "We were kind of quiet today. I don't know if it was a Monday thing. That's what we kept talking about during timeouts just picking up our energy. It seemed like we were going through the motions a little. Hopefully it's just a Monday thing."

There was far less drama in the deciding game as the Presidents started fast, running out to a 10-4 lead on the way to a 25-20 win and victory No. 16 of the fall.

"They're (Whitman-Hanson) one win away from qualifying for the tournament," said Niosi. "They're a good team. They're aggressive so it was a good match to play. We'll find out about the tournament next Tuesday. I know they're excited to play North on Thursday. We're really trying to stay focused on us and getting better every day."

'Highrock Hoedown' Saturday

Highrock Quincy will host a "Highrock Hoedown" on Sunday, Oct. 30th from 1 to 3 p.m. at 315 Whitwell St., Quincy.

This free afternoon of good old-fashioned fun will include a mechanical bull, square dancing, games and activities for all – including "trunk or treat." Children will collect candy as they go "trunk to trunk" asking for a treat.

Kid-friendly costumes are encouraged, as are cowboy hats. Pulled pork sandwiches for the first to arrive.

Quincy Democratic City Committee Hosts Ballot Questions Forum

New Slots Parlor License Debated

QUESTION 1: Additional Slot Machines License

By SCOTT JACKSON

A new slots parlor in Revere would be a winning hand for the city and the rest of Bay State, according to a backer of Question 1 on the November ballot, while an opponent of the measure said Massachusetts should wait until other licensed casinos are up and running before raising the stakes and allowing it to open.

Officials on both sides of Question 1 had a chance to make their case to voters Oct. 19 at an educational forum hosted by the Quincy Democratic City Committee. David Nealley of the Horse Racing Jobs and Education Committee spoke in favor of its passage, while Celeste Ribeiro Myers, chairwoman of the Committee for Sustainable and Responsible Economic Development, was opposed.

Question 1, introduced by Eugene McCain, would allow the state's gaming commission to award one additional slot parlor license if approved by voters. The slots parlor could only be located on a parcel of land at least four acres in size and within 1,500 feet of a horseracing track.

McCain has proposed building a slots parlor and hotel in Revere near Suffolk Downs, which is not involved in the project. Revere residents, in a non-binding vote on Oct. 18, said no dice to the proposal, voting against it 2,970 to 1,574.

Nealley, a city councillor in Bangor, Maine, said the opening of a casino there in 2005 greatly benefited the community, and would deliver similar results to Revere.

"I'm here because we have a great success story that happened in our city with a like facility," he said. "We have a gaming facility and a hotel that came in and became the number one taxpayer, helped not only redo our waterfront, add a $65 million civic center to the town and sort of build an entertainment corridor, which allowed for great economic development."

Myers, who led previous efforts to stop a full-scale casino from opening at Suffolk Downs, painted a different picture of the Bangor casino, saying it led to increased crime and revenues have fallen since a casino opened in Oxford, Maine, in 2012.

"I have articles and information that show that crime is nearly double the average in Bangor, Maine, with the epicenter being the casino," Myers said. "He's here to tell us 'the more the merrier, that we can only benefit from having an additional license available in the commonwealth,' when the Bangor casino is already returning revenues that are below their standards since the installation of the Oxford casino."

Massachusetts' current gaming law allows for three casinos – one in each of three regions – and a slots parlor. The state's gaming commission has awarded licenses to casinos in Everett and Springfield that are expected to open in 2019 and 2018, respectively, and a slots parlor license to Plainridge Park Casino in Plainville, which opened in 2015. The state received $88 million in tax revenue from Plainridge during its first year in operation, less than the $105 million initially projected.

Myers said the state should wait until the remaining casinos allowed under current law open before considering more.

"It's just too soon in the life span of the gaming legislation," she stated. "We have one facility open. It is underperforming by about 20 percent, and that's without any competition in the commonwealth. We have two facilities with shovels in the ground who have made drastic changes to their proposals; we've yet to see how that will work out."

Nealley said the state should be happy with the $88 million from Plainridge in its first year, saying the combined revenue from all casinos in the state, once in operation, would be enough to pay off Massachusetts' current $295 million budget deficit.

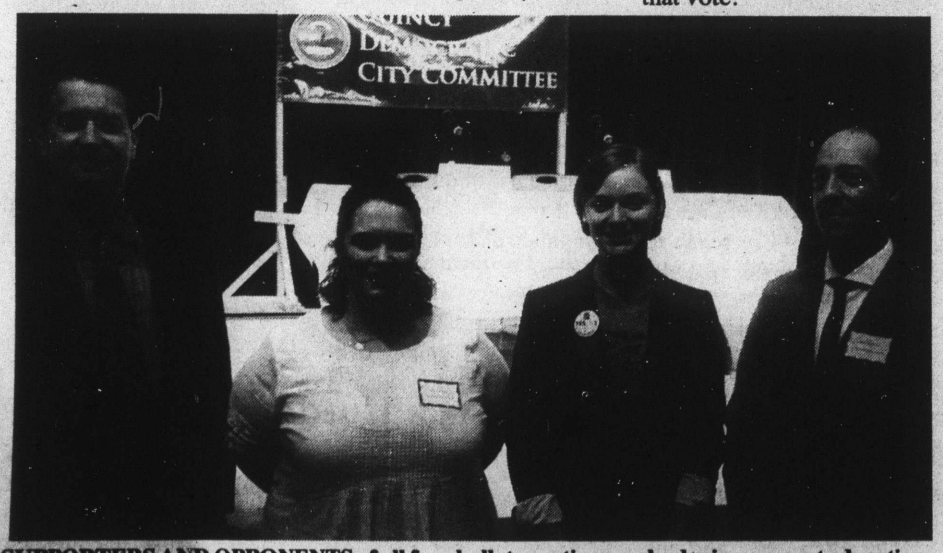
"Quite frankly, I think the state and Steve Crosby, the chair of the gaming commission, are very happy with the success of Plainridge," Nealley said. "That $88 million helps to fill the state budget hole – I think it's around $300 million. When you add the other facilities they're talking about, they think just on that alone the state of Massachusetts is going to fill its budget hole."

Nealley said a misinformation campaign led residents in Revere to oppose the proposal in the non-binding vote, which was held one day before the educational forum in Quincy.

"There were some pamphlets that went door to door and some other campaign that went door to door with gross inadequacies about what the developer has planned for the city of Revere," he stated.

Myers said Massachusetts voters should respect the wishes of Revere on the matter.

"The residents of Revere…pretty much loud and clear, 2-1, came out and said 'no, we do not want this proposal in our community,'" she said. "The residents of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts should respect that vote."



SUPPORTERS AND OPPONENTS of all four ballot questions spoke during a recent educational forum at Quincy High School organized by the Quincy City Democratic Committee. Among the speakers at the forum were (from left): David Nealley of the Horse Racing Jobs and Education Committee, which is in favor of Question 1; Keri Lorenzo of Great Schools Massachusetts, which supports Question 2; Stephanie Harris of the Humane Society, which is backing Question 3; and Daniel Delaney, chair of Safe Cannabis Massachusetts, a group opposed to Question 4.

Question 2 Backer, Opposition Make Their Cases

QUESTION 2: Lifting Cap On Charter Schools

By SCOTT JACKSON

A supporter of a ballot question that would lift the cap on charter schools in Massachusetts said her son had an "incredibly transformative experience" moving from a public school to a charter school, while an opponent of the initiative said charters siphon away money from other schools and lack local oversight.

Representatives from the sides supporting and opposing Question 2, which would allow up to 12 more charter schools in the state per year if passed, spoke at an Oct. 19 ballot question educational forum organized by the Quincy Democratic City Committee.

Keri Lorenzo, representing Great Schools Massachusetts, spoke in favor of passing Question 2, while Paul McClory, grassroots campaign deputy for the Massachusetts Teachers Association, spoke against it. Both speakers are members of the Democratic State Committee.

Lorenzo said her son, Matthew, now 9, has ADHD and was suspended 26 times while in kindergarten when he attended public school. She said the school had given up on her son, and feared he would fall through the cracks. At the suggestion of a friend, Lorenzo was able to get her son into a charter school.

"It was an incredibly transformative experience for him. He ended up skipping a grade. He's extraordinarily talented as an artist. He is a gifted student in reading and math and science, and his IEP (individual education plan) is now fully implemented," Lorenzo said.

"For me as a parent, it really opened my eyes [to] how important having that choice really is, because when you're seeing your child struggle, that is the worst thing…there are tens of thousands of other families that are desperate to be able to make this choice."

McClory, in response to a question from a resident, said Lorenzo's story shows the state's current law regarding charter schools does not need to be changed.

"I liked hearing her story, to be honest with you. I think it's wonderful that it worked out for her and any other mother or father or family that a charter school works out for. That's why we have the law in place the way it is. There are many charter seats still open – they can still add charter schools," McClory said.

"We don't need 12 new ones every year forever in order for Keri and other wonderful people to have a good experience in charter schools."

McClory gave three reasons why the MTA is opposed to the ballot question, including a loss of funds in public school districts, lack of local oversight, and the creation of a separate, unequal system.

"Charter schools do siphon off money from the public schools every year. Last year, in fiscal year 2016, it was around $400 million, and this is information that comes from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education's website. Projected for FY17, charter schools will siphon off $450 million from public schools," McClory said.

"Secondly…charter schools are not accountable to your locally democratic electeds. Finally, charter schools can create a separate and unequal education [system] for our students."

As an example, McClory said his hometown of Melrose is losing out on $2.5 million a year to the Mystic Valley Charter School in Malden.

"Even though the city of Melrose and taxpayers of Melrose are paying $2.5 million every year to send students to charter school in Malden, people they elected – the board of alderman and the school committee of Melrose – have absolutely no say," McClory said. "We see that as a big problem."

Charter schools are accountable to state education officials, Lorenzo said, comparing the situation to having both state and local police forces.

"We have local police that have direct accountability to local municipalities and we have state police that are responsible to state organizers and state administrators. It's the same thing with charter schools," Lorenzo stated. "Charter schools have direct accountability to the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, and they are actually under strict guidelines and accountability to that board."

Lorenzo said that school systems are reimbursed when a student moves to a charter school – under state law, the district receives 100 percent reimbursement of the increased tuition in the first year and 25 percent reimbursement in each of the next five years – giving officials time to adjust their budgets.

"If you can't competently figure out that this is the number of children you have to educate in your school district, then I think voters should be taking a look at who is actually running that school district," Lorenzo said.

McClory, in response, said Beacon Hill lawmakers have not fully funded that reimbursement, pointing to an op-ed from Boston Mayor Marty Walsh that states it has been underfunded by $48 million over the last three fiscal years.

"It is true there is a reimbursement system set up. The problem with that reimbursement system is it has not been fully funded by the legislature since fiscal year 2011," McClory said. "There is $48 million shortage in the reimbursement funding."

Free Tour Of Passanageset Park At Broad Meadows Nov. 6

The Park Department's Environmental Treasures Program is sponsoring a free tour of the recently restored Passanageset Park at Broad Meadows on Sunday, Nov. 6 at 2 p.m.

Entitled "Native Americans in Quincy," the tour will be led by Nanouw'eta of the Massachusetts Tribe and Michaela O'Gara-Pratt, one of the "History Girls" who researched the Native American presence at the Park.

On the tour participants will learn about the Native Peoples who lived here and who are still working to preserve their culture today.

Participants should meet in the parking lot of Broad Meadows Middle School, 50 Calvin St. (off Moffat Street).

Quincy Democratic City Committee Hosts Ballot Questions Forum

Both Sides Address Question 3

QUESTION 3: Minimum Size Requirements For Farm Animal Containment

By SCOTT JACKSON

Question 3 on the Nov. 8 ballot – which would set new statewide standards for how breeding pigs, calves raised for veal and egg-laying hens are confined – was debated at a recent educational forum with a supporter of the measure saying the new regulations are common sense, and an opponent contending it would lead to higher food prices.

Stephanie Harris, Massachusetts state director for the Humane Society of the U.S., spoke in favor of Question 3 during the Oct. 19 forum organized by the Quincy Democratic City Committee, with Diane Sullivan, campaign manager for Citizens Against Food Tax Injustice, against.

The ballot question, if approved would prohibit Massachusetts farmers from confining breeding pigs, calves raised for veal and egg-laying hens in a way that prevents them from lying down, standing up, extending their limbs or turning around freely – and would ban the sale of meat or eggs in the state from animals who do not meet those standards. Foods – such as hot dogs and pre-prepared soups and pizzas – that combine veal or pork with other products would be exempt from the new regulations.

If approved, the legislation would not take affect until Jan. 1, 2022.

Harris, who is leading the campaign for Question 3, called the proposed regulations "common sense," and said Massachusetts lacks any regulations on how farm animals can be confined.

"In the absence of rules you have some within the agribusiness industry that will cut corners and cram animals into cages so small that they can barely move," Harris said.

"Question 3 would simply require that breeding pigs, egg-laying hens and cows raised for veal have enough space to stand up, lie down, turn around and extend their limbs. It would represent a major positive change for farm animals."

Sullivan said passage of Question 3 would do harm to lower- and middle-income earners, saying it would cost residents up to $250 million in its first year alone.

"I view Question 3 as a social injustice – a social injustice that will do harm to our lower- and middle-income residents here in Massachusetts," she stated. "Question 3 asks us to spend a quarter of a billion dollars that we would essentially be sending to out of state producers to subsidize housing for their livestock."

Consumers, Sullivan added, already have the ability to choose which type of egg they prefer at the grocery store – and most choice what she called conventional eggs.

"Every day you go into the grocery store you are voting on Question 3 – 90 percent of us at the checkout counter are purchasing conventional eggs," Sullivan said. "My opponents have lost at the checkout counter, so they took it to the ballot. They say the market is trending this way – why not let the market respond? That's what a market does."

Harris, however, said the cost of each egg would increase by one or two cents, and noted a number of large companies have announced they will switch to cage-free eggs.

"It would only cost one to two pennies more per egg to shift away from this cruel cage confinement to cage-free methods. That's the reason that cost-conscious companies like Dollar Tree, Dollar General, Walmart, Taco Bell, Dunkin' Donuts have pledged to go cage-free," Harris said.

"McDonald's, probably the company most known for keeping their prices low, has pledged to go 100 percent cage free and publically stated they won't change their prices."

Harris said the passage of Question 3 would also improve food safety. The Humane Society, she stated, found hens laying eggs on top of rotting carcasses as well as rodents at a farm in Maine that supplies eggs to Massachusetts.

"Factory farms are incubators for disease due to their overcrowded, unsanitary and unhygienic conditions," Harris said. "Extensive research shows that there are significantly higher rates of salmonella in these cage facilities than in their cage-free counterparts."

Sullivan, however, pointed to a recent study released by researchers at Pennsylvania State University that found the opposite.

"Recently, Penn State released a study that compared salmonella levels in eggs from small farms [and] large farms – 240 different farms – and by and large they found salmonella was more prevalent in small farms," she said.

Marijuana Advocate, Opponent Speak Out

QUESTION 4: Legalizing Marijuana For Recreational Use

By SCOTT JACKSON

An advocate backing the legalization of marijuana in the Bay State said passage of Question 4 on the Nov. 8th ballot makes sense for the safety of children and families and would benefit Massachusetts financially, while an organizer of the campaign against the question said the proposed law's provisions on home growing and local control are problematic.

Francy Wade, a vice president at Anderson Robbins Consulting, spoke in favor of legalization at an Oct. 19 educational forum organized by the Quincy Democratic City Committee. Daniel Delaney, chair of Safe Cannabis Massachusetts, spoke against passage of Question 4.

Wade outlined the case for Question 4, saying it would improve safety by regulating marijuana, provide a new source of state revenue, and address social justice concerns caused by the current drug laws.

"I'm not a marijuana user, I never have been and I don't intend to become one. This is not a pro-pot law," Wade said.

"This is a law that makes sense for the safety of children and families in Massachusetts, for financial reasons here in Massachusetts – we are at a budget crunch every year and this would bring $100 million to the state – and also in terms of social justice this law is unfair to people of color and minorities, and we don't want to perpetuate that."

"The reason we can do this now is because we have learned from other states that this is going to bring in money, this is going to bring in revenue," Wade added. "The people who are smoking marijuana or using edibles right now are doing it anyway.

"There are 800,000 people in Massachusetts who say they use marijuana recreationally. Now we're going to tax that, regulate it, make it safer and get money for education, law enforcement, and a host of other things."

Delaney said the legislature should work with public health and safety officials to draft a better law.

"I don't see what the pressing need is," he stated. "Why not take it back to the legislature and have a thoughtful process that doesn't only have the marijuana industry and marijuana consumers involved, but has public health, has public safety."

In particular, he raised a concern about a provision in the law that would allow each resident over the age of 21 to grow up to 6 marijuana plants in their homes, and up to 12 plants per household.

"It's a lot of marijuana for, I think, even the most robust home grower, and this is not subject to testing, it's not subject to sales tax, it's not subject to controls in terms of how much you grow or what pesticides you use, and I think it provides a huge risk for youth diversion," Delaney said.

"I know a lot of folks who had liquor cabinets when I was 16, 17 – under the age – and somehow the volume of liquor in those liquor cabinets would disappear. I can't imagine that you won't have the same problem with youth diversion."

The law would require communities to license at least one dispensary for every five establishments with a retail alcohol license. Delaney said Cambridge, for example, would be required to permit at least eight dispensaries because there are 37 retail alcohol licensees. Communities are also required to allow recreational dispensaries in the same areas where medical marijuana dispensaries are permitted to open. Changing those rules could not be done by local officials, but only by a separate ballot question.

"It ties the hands of city officials and community officials to restrict both the number of dispensaries and the location of dispensaries," Delaney said. "To overcome this very tight restriction on local communities, you have to actually have another ballot initiative in the community."

Wade said the local control provision is an issue, but is still preferable to having drug dealers in the community.

"When Dan was talking a little bit about the number of facilities and local control, of course that is an issue. But if we're going to count facilities and we're going to count medical facilities – how many dealers do you think are out there right now not asking your children for an ID?" Wade said.

"I don't want my children exposed to a drug dealer – I don't – and this will take that away from the black market and put it in the hands of responsible adults."

Delaney countered that those under the age of 21 would still have to purchase marijuana from a dealer.

"Even if this passes, all of our children will still be black market consumers, so unless there is magic wand where the existence of a 21 plus market makes marijuana no longer attractive to the teenagers who are already having it, they are still going to have to go to drug dealers," he said.

Wade said the tax for marijuana in Massachusetts – 12 percent – is less than other states to discourage black market sales.

"The tax rate in Massachusetts is slightly lower than Colorado to try and eliminate dealers selling this on the black market, to make people say 'you know what, I'm not going to buy this on the black market,'" Wade said.

"It's not even going to be something that's attractive to a dealer to sell because nobody is going to want it because they can get it, taxed, responsibly at a facility."

Walk For Water Saturday

The public is invited to take part in the Glad Tidings Church Walk for Water Saturday, Oct. 29 at 1 p.m. at Wompatuck State Park in Hingham.

The fundraising goal for this year's event is $10,000.

All donations benefit Water Mission, a nonprofit Christian engineering organization that builds safe water solutions in developing countries and disaster areas. Water Mission will use the funds to drill a well and construct the plumbing infrastructure at Enkeriyian Primary School in rural Kenya.

To sign up for the Walk or to make a donation, visit elev8water.org or call 617-773-9797.

The Walk for Water promotes awareness of the global water crisis while raising funds to provide sustainable safe water around the world. During the approximately three-mile walk, participants are encouraged to carry a bucket of water to symbolize the burden that millions of women and children bear every day as they collect dirty water in developing countries.

Beale Street Holiday Fair Nov. 19

Keenan Says Outreach, Opioid Bills Among Top Accomplishments

low for up to 12 more charter schools in the state each year.

Keenan is opposed to Question 4, which would legalize recreational marijuana in the state, citing several reasons for his opposition. He said projections from supporters of $100 million in revenue brought in by legalization would fall short because Massachusetts's tax on marijuana would be one-third of Colorado's. Keenan was also concerned over the impact on adolescents if marijuana were normalized, and said marijuana is much more potent than it was in 1960s, '70, or '80s – three to four times stronger, with edibles between 10 and 18 percent more potent.

Keenan said Massachusetts should make an informed decision on legalization in the future, based on how it goes in Colorado.

"Colorado is doing it," he said. "My practical government approach would be let them do it and let us learn from the things they are learning now, and then make an informed decision at a later date based on their experiences rather than just jumping in before they've had the full experience of the effects of legalizing marijuana."

Keenan is opposed to Question 2, which would lift the cap on charter schools in the state, allowing 12 more each year.

"I am opposed to lifting the cap on charter schools for several reasons," Keenan said. "One: I think we end up with a public school system that is two-tiered, and I don't think that's in the best interest of all our students.

"Two: In a similar vein, if we are going to commit additional resources, I think the resources should be focused on all students. I think there are some things we can take from charter schools and use in a traditional public schools. We haven't really focused much on that, but I think we should. For instance, extended school days. For those reasons and many others reasons I'm a 'no' on the charter school question."

In the race for the White House, Keenan said he plans on voting for Hillary Clinton, the Democratic nominee.

"I'm a Democrat. In the Hillary Clinton versus Donald Trump race, I will cast my vote for Hillary Clinton," he said.

Mendez Hopes To Foster Public Engagement

water bans and water restrictions…that's a serious issue right now," Mendez said.

"We're not thinking about it, but we need to start talking, having the discussions, developing infrastructure because once it hits, it's going to be a major issue."

Massachusetts residents will vote on four different referendums on the November ballot, including one that would legalize marijuana for recreational use and one that would allow for up to 12 more charter schools in the state each year.

Mendez is in favor of Question 4, which would legalize marijuana.

"I support it," he said. "It's an issue of personal choice. It exists already, so I think we should just acknowledge it responsibly."

Mendez is opposed to Question 2, which would lift the cap on charter schools.

"I'm going to vote no on Question 2," Mendez said. "I think charter schools serve a purpose in the education system. The privatization allows them the autonomy to do what they want without too many limitations from the state, but I think we need to improve public education and that comes down to an allocation of resources.

"So if we're going to be allocating resources, should we be going into a private industry with less oversight, or we should we invest in public education? I'm a kid of public education, so I'm going to say we should fix the problem fundamentally instead of just a quick answer of privatization."

In the race for the White House, Mendez said he doesn't support either major party candidate – Democrat Hillary Clinton or Republican Donald Trump – or third parties candidates Gary Johnson (Libertarian) and Jill Stein (Green).

"I really don't support either candidate. Even the Libertarian, I don't support that candidate, not the ideas. And on the Green Party, I don't support the candidate but I support some of the ideas, so it's difficult," Mendez said.

"And that's partially why I'm running as an independent. The spectrum of political ideas is either cast into red or blue, and I'm like we have a much larger spectrum of ideas economically and socially, and I don't think they're represented on the national scale or even on the state level."

AWD Tire Rotation, Shocks/Struts, Auto Door Locks

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

I have a 2015 Mercedes ML350 SUV. When I brought my car in for service, they did not rotate the tires. The explanation was that it is an all-wheel-drive vehicle and tire rotation was not needed. The next time I would bring in my car, he said I would need new tires anyway so they didn't think it needed to be done. I argued since the tires were wobbly. I asked them to rotate and balance. Is this something new with AWD SUVs to not rotate tires? Any recommendations are welcome as I am not familiar with this philosophy.

All vehicles that have the same size tires need to have them rotated. Rotating the tires helps even out front tire wear caused be turning. At this point I would get a second opinion on the tire wear and inspect, rotate and balance the tires as required.

My car is a 2008 Honda Pilot with 57,000 miles on it. I had a brake inspection performed this morning at the Honda dealer and they said the front brakes are worn about 95% plus. It is recommended to resurface both front brake rotors and install a new set of pads. The rear brakes are also about 95 percent worn and it was recommended to replace the rear brake pads. The total cost is about $530. At this mileage is this normal wear and is the price within reason?

It is not unusual to replace brake pads at any mileage over 40,000 miles (sports cars and heavy duty vehicles brake wear can be much faster). Regarding the price, using the factory parts the estimate you were given falls in line with typical pricing.

I need some advice as to whether my car needs shocks and struts. I took my 2010 Nissan Maxima to a well know tire store and they said everything was fine. Then I took it to my neighborhood garage and he said they were also okay. I however don't like the way it feels on bumps and the handling is just not tight. Is there a way to improve the suspension and get the car to feel like new again? Would the shocks and struts make the car more responsive and ease the hard knocks over the bumps on the road. Will I not see much improvement if I get this expensive repair when I am told the car does not need it?

As the car starts to wear all of the suspension will loosen up. This would include struts, shocks, bushing and the steering. Add to this that over the past six years the springs have most likely started to sag a bit. As the springs start to sag the car will hit the bumps just a bit harder, add in slightly worn suspension parts and the car will have a bit more of a vague steering feel. Since this is not a safety issue, only you can decide if it makes financial sense to invest in the repair.

I recently purchased a used Chevy Suburban and now that I have been driving it for a while I'm starting to notice something. At certain speeds I can feel the engine characteristics change and even the engine sounds different. I was told it is the engine shutting off cylinders to save gas. I remember Cadillac had a system years ago that was similar that was also very problematic. Is this a problem or just a weird characteristic?

The active fuel management V-8 engine in some General Motors vehicles hasn't been perfect, but what you are feeling may be perfectly normal. The engine tone and smoothness does change when going into fuel saving mode. This is nothing like the Cadillac 4-6-8 engines that were truly a disaster in the 1980s

I remember when Hyundai came out with the Excel and it was in my opinion truly a horrible car. Now these newest Hyundai and Kia models seem quite good. Are they as good as they look?

The latest vehicles from Hyundai and Kia are very nice vehicles. They are well put together, have a great warranty and many models have top crash test scores. In addition where the first Hyundai was a very basic vehicle, the latest from Kia and Hyundai can be equipped the latest safety and electronic systems. Some of the high-end Kia and Hyundai models can compete with the best luxury cars from around the world.

I have a 2003 BMW 325i four-door sedan that is only rear wheel drive. The car needs two front tires. Should I have them put the new tires on the front or on the rear? The rear tires look to be in decent shape.

The best place to put the new tires is on the rear. There are several reasons; the new rear tires help the driver more easily maintain control on slick roads. In addition getting a flat tire/blowout on the rear is much harder to control. The new tires which are more puncture resistant on the rear is safer and the preferred placement.

My husband has a 2007 Passat and is ready to buy a car with and is looking for a cushy ride. What do you think of the Lexus ES and the Lincoln MKZ? One feature that he needs is the back seats have to fold down to accommodate his bicycle.

Both are good cars, but my choice would be the Lexus ES: it is comfortable, very quiet and rides well. I would also consider a trailer hitch mounted bike rack rather than possibly damaging the interior with a bike.

I have a 2012 Ford Escape, Limited, purchased new. About nine months ago I started having problems filling the gas tank. When I try to fill the tank, the gas pump shuts off after about 15 seconds or so. I have gone to different gas stations, used different pumps and still have problems filling the tank. Currently to fill the tank as much as possible, I leave the key in the ignition with the battery on, driver's side window down and try to read the gas gauge while filling the tank. Every time the pump shuts off I pull the nozzle out a bit, re-insert it and squeeze the handle again. The most I have been able to get into the tank is approximately 1 gallon before having to stop, pull the nozzle out a bit and re-insert the nozzle. Needless to say, this is a pain in the butt, and probably not safe. I have looked on-line and at a number of websites but have really found nothing. Any thoughts?

JOHN PAUL - AAA's Car Doctor

The issue is the tank is not venting properly or there is some sort of obstruction in the fuel fill pipe. I have heard of some gas nozzles losing the protective end cap which gets lodged in the filler neck on these cap-less systems. The vent system can also get clogged with dirt or in some cases even spider webs that prevent proper operation. A technician will need test the system for proper operation to find the problem.

I recently inherited a 2009 Honda Civic, which is set up for auto door lock when speedometer reaches about 10 miles per hour. The doors then unlock when car goes into park. I am sole driver, so I usually only unlock driver door. When the lock activates, either lock or unlock it squeaks/squeals but not all the time. When I bring it to dealer with this complaint, they tell me they can't duplicate the noise and hence, can't fix it. Would you have any idea what is causing this and what can be done to remedy it. As soon as I drove the car home the noise happened again. Anything you can suggest would be appreciated.

I have heard this complaint from other Honda owners and the repair seems to be replacing the door lock actuator(s). This can be a fairly costly repair to a seven-year old car which may be why the Honda dealer didn't suggest it.

I currently drive a Toyota Venza and love it. Unfortunately, Toyota discontinued it and I am in the market for a new or slightly used car similar to the Venza. Leg room is a priority as I am 6'4". What other cars would be similar to the Venza?

I would look at two cars, the Toyota Highlander could work and the controls and overall operation will feel very similar to your Venza. The other vehicle is the Subaru Outback. The Subaru outback has a smaller footprint but when comparing the Outback cabin specifications to a Venza, the Outback seating is slightly bigger in every dimension. I recently drove the 2017 Outback and found it to be quiet, economical and roomy.

Patricia M. Petersen, 53

Patricia M. (Garrity) Petersen of Acton, ME passed away on Sept. 30 at the age of 53.

Beloved wife of 25 years of Michael S. Petersen and devoted mother of Emily Petersen. Loving daughter of Noella Garrity and the late Thomas Garrity of Quincy. Cherished sister of Kathy Sweeney and her husband Richard of Scituate, Jim Garrity of Quincy, & Maura Garrity and Kristian Collier of San Francisco. Loving Aunt to Ryan, Kerin & Rowen.

Born in Dorchester and raised in Quincy. She was a graduate of Quincy High School, Class of 1981. She worked as a dog groomer at Brian's kennel for 17 years.

PATRICIA M. PETERSEN

Patty always enjoyed spending time with family for holidays and celebrations. She enjoyed vacations to Cape Cod, New Hampshire, Maine, Florida & Ireland.

Patty moved to her beautiful farmhouse in Maine in 2003. Where she enjoyed all her life passions, taking care of her horses and animals, gardening, cooking & starting a vineyard. Together with her husband Mike they realized their dream of opening their own restaurant, Emily's Woodfired Pizza in Springvale, ME. Patty will be remembered and sorely missed by her aunts, cousins, and special friends. She was a caring, giving and loving person who lived life to the fullest.

Funeral service was held on Saturday, Oct. 8, at the Carll-Heald & Black Funeral Home located in Springvale, Maine.

Those planning an expression of sympathy are asked to consider sending a contribution to Grahamtastic Connection, 21 Bradeen St., Suite 107, Springvale, ME 04083 or online at http://www.grahamtastic.org.

To leave a message of condolence for the family please visit www.blackfuneralhomes.com.

OBITUARIES

Melvia S. Sears, 94

Melvia S. (Peckham) Sears, 94, of Quincy, died Oct. 14.

Melvia was a graduate of North Quincy High School, class of 1939. She later continued on to get her college degree from Burdette College. Mrs. Sears worked as an executive secretary for 30 years at South Shore Mental Health Center before her retirement. Previously, she had worked for B.F. Goodrich Tire Service for five years.

She was an active and lifetime member of the Quincy Community United Methodist Church and was also a member of Sigma Phi for many years. At her former residence, 45 School Street, Quincy, Melvia made many loving friends and played several card games on a weekly basis. She loved to play cribbage and was involved in cribbage tournaments. Melvia loved playing a nickel game and would play with anyone who was interested. She loved doing crosswords and word search puzzles until she was no longer able. Melvia also loved playing bingo and continued to play until a couple of weeks ago. Melvia will be missed by all who had the pleasure of knowing her.

Daughter of the late Marion Thompson and John Sloop of Texas. Spouse of the late Everett Peckham Jr. and the late Ralph Sears. Cherished mother to Janet McGonigle and her husband Barry, Nancy Valorz and her husband Peter, stepdaughter Janice Kranz and her husband Doug and the late Barbara Longuemare. Loving sister to Janice Tibbetts and her husband Arthur. Dear stepmother to the late Lori (Sears) Munn. She is also survived by eleven grandchildren, many great grandchildren, nieces and nephews.

Melvia enjoyed her time at Sunrise Senior Living in Braintree. The staff and administrators were all involved in the great care given to her during her time there.

Visiting hours were Sunday in the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. A Celebration of Life Service was held in the funeral home Monday prior to the Funeral service in the Quincy Community United Methodist Church.

Burial at Knollwood Memorial Park, Canton.

Donations in memory of Melvia may be made to Old Colony Hospice, 321 Manley Street, W. Bridgewater, MA 02379-1022 or to the Quincy Community United Methodist Church Memorial Fund, 40 Beale Street, Quincy MA 02170.

Happy Birthday In Heaven

LORI PODGURSKI

October 29, 1976

Birthday wishes sent to Heaven, from your family below
We miss and love you dearly and we wanted you to know.

Your Birthday's not forgotten and your memory lives on
We celebrate the life you had even though you're gone.

If we were given just one wish,
one that would come true
We'd wish you back beside us to spend this day with you.

We will always love and miss you and will often shed a tear
Especially on your special day,
Year after year.

Love and miss you.

Alfredo's Closing, Asian Restaurant Opening

By SCOTT JACKSON

A longtime Italian eatery on Franklin Street is set to close with an Asian fusion restaurant opening in its place, and an Adams Street convenience store will now be allowed to sell beer and wine.

The Board of License Commissioners on Oct. 18 approved a request for the transfer of the all alcohol license held by Alfredo's Restaurant at 75 Franklin St. to Fusion Kitchen, which will open in the same place. The board also approved a transfer of the retail wine and malt license held by D&D Deli, 101 Liberty St., to Dennis Lane, owner of the 7-Eleven store at 678 Adams St.

Chris Coleman, an attorney for Fusion Kitchen manager Janson Zhen Ye, said the 3,800 square foot space would be closed for renovations for a couple months before reopening. Fusion Kitchen's menu will feature both Chinese and Japanese cuisine, including sushi.

Ye has managed Fusion Taste in Arlington since 2006 and a restaurant of the same name in Stoneham since 2013, Coleman said; Ye plans to resign from his posts at those restaurants and run the new Quincy location full-time.

"The applicant plans on spending 40 plus hours a week at the location – that's a really good thing," Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, the chairman of the licensing board, said.

Coleman said the restaurant would seat 120 patrons, 40 less than Alfredo's capacity.

Lane had previously sought a transfer of retail wine and malt license held by D&D Deli more than a year ago, which was rejected by the license board at that time.

Lane, who has owned the Adams Street store for more than 40 years, said his customers have expressed a desire to be able to purchase beer or wine there while picking up other items over the years. Lane expects his current customer base to be the ones purchasing beer and wine, and will not advertise the fact that he sells alcohol.

"We're not doing this because we just woke up one morning and said we want to sell beer and wine. We're very sensitive to what our customers ask us to do," Lane said.

"I serve that community and that's why we want to sell beer and wine, and I'm openly making this commitment to the board there will be no outside signage and there will be no advertising. We want to offer beer and wine to the customer base that we now have, and we're very, very responsible."

Lane's attorney also provided a traffic study to the board undertaken by Jack Gillon, a former traffic engineer for the city. The attorney, Jon Aieta, said Gillon's report found the 7-Eleven's beer and wine license would have a "de minimis" impact on traffic, and that the 28 parking spaces on site would be more than enough.

Six area residents spoke in favor of granting the transfer, with one opposed.

The board approved the transfer unanimously.

"Dennis has been there an awful long time. Any time I've ever gone in the store, Dennis is always in there. His employees are absolutely fantastic, courteous. Dennis does a super, super job," Scheele said.

"I actually think this will alleviate some of the traffic…I am going to be in support of this."

The board also granted the request from K&R Auto Body, 1200 Sea St., to increase the number of vehicles allowed on site from 15 to 25, and change the hours of operation – previously 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. – to allow for a 9 p.m. closing.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest supported the request. She credited owner Brandon Bergstrom for responding to concerns raised by her and neighbors.

Bergstrom said he plans to work inside, not outside, after 7 p.m. in response to concerns from board members about creating noise at night in what is largely residential area.

In other business Oct. 18, the board also:

Approved a transfer of the retail all alcohol license held by Anh Corp., 1183 Sea St., to Olivia Store Corp., which will continue to operate the store on site.

Approved requests for one-day extension of premises for Cagney's at 214 Washington St. The extensions of premises were granted for Oct. 27, 28, 29 and 30, Nov. 24 (Thanksgiving) and Dec. 15. The board had previously granted the restaurant permission to open a patio, but outdoor seating is typically only allowed between Patriots Day and Columbus Day.

Granted a request for new stockholders and transfer of stock for Long Chuan Garden, 47 Billings Rd.

Granted a common victualler license to Epicurean Feast, which will operate the employee cafeteria at the Stop & Shop office building at 1385 Hancock St.

Granted a special use permit to Boy Scout Troop 6 for its Punkin Chunkin event, which will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Nov. 5 at Pageant Field.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A work-related situation that started last month takes on increasing importance this week. The choice is still yours as to how it will evolve. Be careful not to make quick judgments.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) "Careful" is the watchword for the prudent Bovine this week. Don't let your emotions overwhelm your logic. Try for balance as you maneuver through a touchy situation.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your energy levels rise to meet the challenges that will mark much of this month. New opportunities beckon. Look them over, but proceed cautiously before making any kind of decision.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your private life can be a problem this week, as a partner becomes more difficult. Resist a reaction you might regret. Instead of walking away, try to talk things out.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You should be your usual sunny self these days, as you bask in the admiration you adore. Enjoy it as you move into a new arena to confront an exciting upcoming challenge.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your perseverance reserves will be tapped frequently this week as you deal with the problems involved in making a new situation work for you. But it'll all be worth it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You'll find fewer roadblocks turning up as you continue to move ahead with your plans. Expect some important news to come your way by mid-November.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Good news -- you finally get to the bottom of that pesky mystery you've been trying to solve for weeks by using some gentle persuasion to get someone to break his or her silence.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The best time to take on that important task is now. Move forward one step at a time so you can assess your progress and, if need be, change direction.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The new opportunities you hoped to find this month are beginning to open up. Study them carefully to be sure you make the choice that's best for you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Turn a disappointment into a learning experience. Check out possible weaknesses in your approach and strengthen them. A loyal colleague offers good advice.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your new situation offers opportunities to help you get the skills you'll need in order to stop swimming in circles and finally move straight toward your goals. Go for it.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a sharp, logical mind and a quick intellect. You would make an excellent mystery writer.

RIGGERS FROM THE Shaughnessy & Ahern Rigging Company, South Boston, used a 100-ton capacity grove hydraulic crane Monday to lift the 20,000-pound historic Quincy granite gazing ball from one corner of McIntyre Mall to its new location about 35 yards away as the centerpiece of the "Walk of Names" City Hall entrance presently under construction. Above: Foreman Patrick Morrissey (left), and Alie Shaughnessy prepare the ball to be lifted from its granite pedestal to a make-shift wooden cradle. Top right photo: the ball is lowered into its wooden cradle temporarily so that the 12,000-pound pedestal - also made of Quincy granite - can be lifted and settled into place in its new location as the walk centerpiece. Middle photo right: the granite pedestal is guided into place in the centerpiece by riggers (from left) Paul Crook, Alie Shaugnessy of Squantum and foreman Patrick Morrissey, a lifelong Quincy resident. Bottom photo right: The crane transports the granite ball from its wooden cradle to the granite pedestal. City officials hope the new Walk of Names will be completed in November or early December.

Granite Gazing Ball The Centerpiece - Again

Wigglesworth, who attended Harvard University and started as quarterback for the Crimson from 1909 to 1911, also served as the U.S. ambassador to Cuba from Dec. 15, 1958 until his death on Oct. 22, 1960. He was interred in Arlington National Cemetery.

As years went by the ball became less visible at the rotary with shrub growth. Motorists traveling over the bridge north or south on busy Route 3A risked an accident trying to grab a glimpse of the ball instead of keeping their eyes on the road.

Others thought the rotary placement deprived children of seeing the ball close-up and "gazing" at their own reflection in the polished granite.

After years of steady lobbying for its return to City Hall from some advocates including Quincy Sun founder Henry Bosworth, then Mayor William Phelan ordered it back to City Hall in 2005.

"The remote location (Fore River rotary) prevented full enjoyment of this true community asset," Phelan said.

"It's a beautiful and unique piece of artwork that was intended to be accessible to the public so its true design could be fully appreciated, hence its nickname the 'Gazing Ball' for its mirror-like quality it possesses."

Among the riggers who helped move the ball on Monday was Alie Shaughnessy of Squantum. Allie's great-grandfather, John J. Shaughnessy – co-founder of Shaughnessy and Ahern Rigging in South Boston – along with John's son, Herbert Shaughnessy, who lived in Merrymount at the time in 1925, helped move the ball from a West Quincy quarry to City Hall some 91 years ago.

Alie, who today operates his own crane company - said he received a phone call from the Shaugnessy Rigging Company on Monday and was asked if he wanted to help with the granite ball move again. He quickly accepted.

"I'm a Quincy guy and to know that my great-grandfather helped put this ball here 91 years ago that means a lot to me. There is a little spot in my heart for sure to help move it again," he said moments before beginning the four-hour process.

Before it reached the center spot of the Walk of Names area, the granite ball was carefully lifted off its granite pedestal and placed gently into a make-shift wooden cradle. Then the pedestal was rigged and hoisted into place in the new location.

Finally, about four hours after the big yellow crane and riggers arrived on site, the granite ball was raised from its cradle and placed on the pedestal. Several onlookers watched from the sidewalk on Hancock Street as well as the pathway leading into City Hall.

After making sure everything was a go in its new home, the riggers and Mayor Thomas Koch posed for photos in front of the gazing ball.

Also in the photo is a sign held by Alie Shaughnessy. It's the same sign that was used when the ball first transported and set up on its pedestal at City Hall 91 years ago.

The sign reads: "Safety Always: Shaughnessy & Ahern Co. Safe & Machinery Movers. Danger - Keep Out."

The Granite Gazing Ball – safe and sound again – where it should be.

The crown jewel of the soon-to-be new and improved "Walk of Names."

Nation's Founders Deserve More Interest From Citizenry

Author David McCullough Among Speakers At John Adams Birthday Anniversay Ceremony

By SCOTT JACKSON

America's founding fathers deserve more interest from the nation's citizens, Pulitzer Prize-winning author and historian David McCullough said recently in Quincy, and being ignorant of their work is both rude and ungrateful.

McCullough was the special guest speaker at a wreath-laying ceremony honoring one of those founding fathers – John Adams – Oct. 28 at the United First Parish Church in Quincy Center recognizing the second president's 281st birthday, which fell on Sunday this year.

McCullough has won two Pulitzer Prizes – the first for his 1992 biography of President Harry S. Truman and the second for his 2001 biography of Adams. The Adams biography, entitled "John Adams," was later adapted into an award-winning HBO miniseries –

Thousands Of Local Voters Cast Ballots Early; Race For White House, Four Questions Among Ballot Highlights

By SCOTT JACKSON

The race for the White House comes to an end next Tuesday, Nov. 8, as voters across the country pick their next commander-in-chief, and 72 percent of Quincy's registered voters are expected to cast ballots by the time the election is over.

Topping the ticket in this year's election is the showdown for president between Democrat Hillary Clinton and Republican Donald Trump. Voters across Massachusetts will also decide four different ballot questions, and Quincy voters will

City Solicits Firms For Broad Traffic/Pedestrian/Bicycle Master Plan

Mayor Thomas Koch's administration Tuesday advertised for formal proposals to conduct a sweeping citywide transportation study and master plan that will tackle a broad series of issues ranging from traffic flows and neighborhood parking to bicycle and pedestrian safety.

The formal Request for Proposals will be open to civil and traffic engineering firms, and would mark the first citywide traffic and transportation study conducted in the city in at least a generation, Mayor Koch said.

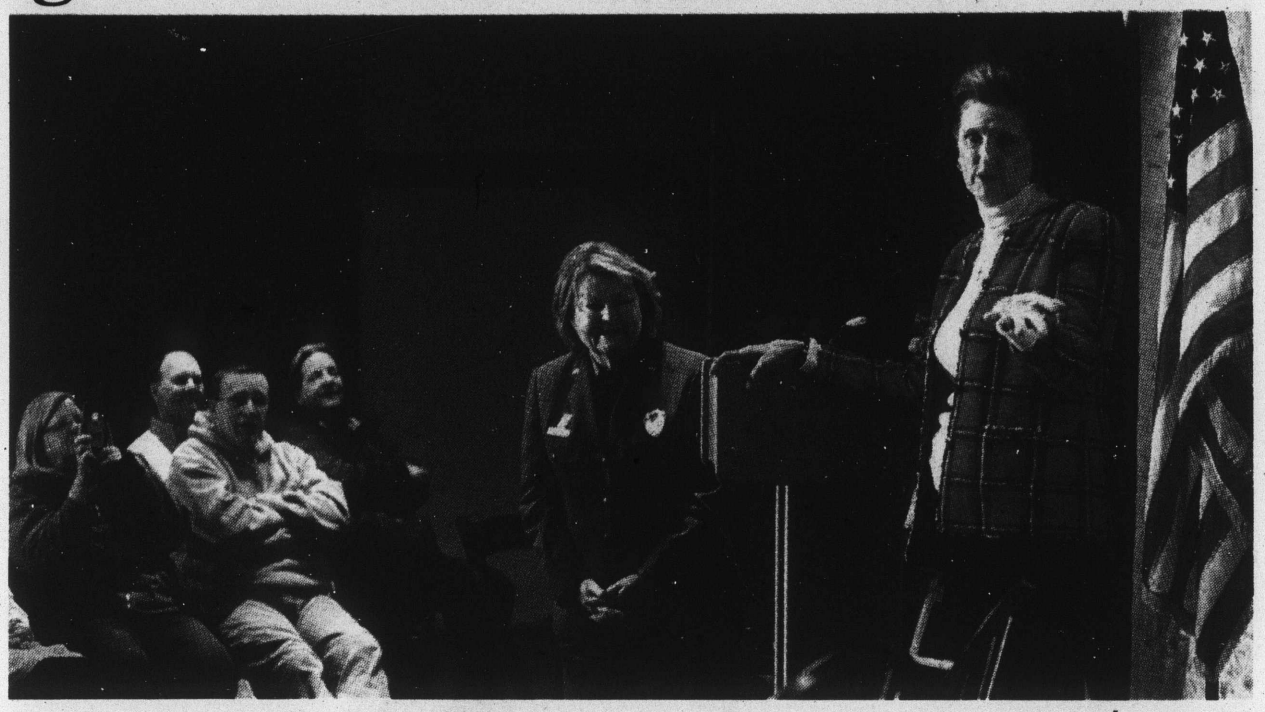
LBJ's Eldest Daughter Recalls White House Years

Lynda Bird Johnson-Robb Visits Adams National Historical Park



ADAMS NATIONAL HISTORICAL Park Superintendent Marianne Peak, left, listens to Lynda Bird Johnson-Robb address the celebration of the park's 70th anniversary and the centennial of the National Park Service. Johnson-Robb, age 72, is the eldest daughter of President Lyndon Johnson and First Lady Lady Bird Johnson and the oldest living child of a U.S. president.

By TOM GORMAN

Lynda Bird Johnson-Robb related stories of her life as the daughter of former President Lyndon Johnson and former First Lady, Lady Bird Johnson during a visit to the Adams National Historical Park as part of a celebration marking the 100th anniversary of the National Park Service and the 50th anniversary of the National Historic Preservation Act enacted by her father in October 1966.

Robb, 72, wife of former Virginia Governor Chuck Robb, talked of her father's civil rights campaigns and how her mother worked to beautify the country to a group of Woodward School for Girls students and several adult visitors on Oct. 25 in the Carriage House in the sprawling park on Adams Street, once home to President John Adams and Abigail Adams. The park, which was visited by Lady Bird Johnson several times in the 1960s, is celebrating its 70th anniversary of being acquired by the National Park Service.

During her years as a young adult in the White House, Robb was a witness to new economic, social and educational programs being implemented through the work of her father, who was known by his initials – LBJ. As part of his Great Society program, Johnson enacted legislation for education reform, ending racial injustice and voting rights.

"We were fortunate to live in exciting times," Robb said. "There were so many changes."

She told the gathering how her father, as then vice president, spoke at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania where the Union defeated the Confederate army in a turning point in the Civil War. Johnson's speech in 1963 reiterated the Gettysburg Address by President Abraham Lincoln 100 years earlier to

Veterans Day Parade, Observance Nov. 11

Decorated WWII Army Air Force Pilot Russell Erikson Keynote Speaker

By SCOTT JACKSON

Russell G. Erikson, a decorated World War II Army Air Force pilot, will be the keynote speaker for Quincy's Veterans Day observance on Nov. 11.

The city's observance of Veterans Day begins with a parade that will step off at 10:30 a.m. from the intersection of Quincy Avenue and Scammell Street and runs north along Hancock Street. In Quincy Center, the parade procession will follow Hancock Street to Temple Street and Washington Street near United First Parish Church and then back on Hancock Street until it reaches the Adams Academy. Units marching in the parade will form up in the Quincy Credit Union parking lot at the intersection of Quincy Avenue and Scammel Street beginning at 10 a.m.

The observance will be held at the Doughboy Statue on the grounds of the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St. Mayor Thomas Koch; City Council President Kirsten Hughes; Quincy Veterans' Council Commander Robert Lewis; and George Nicholson, the parade chairman and Quincy's director of veterans services, will also address the crowd.

Lawrence Norton will serve as the master of ceremonies. The Rev. John Swanson will deliver the invocation and benediction, Robert Lafleur will sound "Taps," and Abigail Coughlin, a 12-year-old student at Atlantic Middle School, will sing "The Star Spangled Banner."

The observance will also include a ceremony to honor Quincy's Vietnam veterans.

In the event of inclement weather, the observance will held in the Quincy High School gymnasium at 100 Coddington St. beginning at 11 a.m. Access via Russell Street entrance. Call the veterans services department at 617-376-1194.

Erikson, a 94-year-old Quincy native, served with the U.S. Army's 8th Air Force in Europe during World War II. He piloted a B-24 Liberator bomber during the war, flying 33 combat missions over Germany and Europe. For his service, Erikson received the Air Medal with five Oak Leaf Clusters, three Distinguished Flying Crosses, and the French Legion of Honor.

Erikson attended Quincy High School where he was a standout athlete in cross-country and hockey. He worked at the Quincy Shipyard and Boston Gear Works before his service in the war.

Upon completion of his service, Erikson returned with his wife, Beverly, who would remain at his side for 62 years, built their home in Quincy and raised five sons and a daughter. Erikson resumed his career as a carpenter and construction contractor until his retirement. He still maintains a myriad of interests and an active lifestyle.

Organizations marching in the parade include the:

Cyril P. Morrisette Post 294 AL; William R. Caddy Detachment MCL; Second Marine Division Association; Robert I. Nickerson Post 382 AL; Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter; Quincy Cavanagh Chapter 79 DAV; George F. Bryan Post 613 VFW; Houghs Neck Post 380 AL; Quincy Post 95 AL; and the Jewish War Veterans Post 193.

Also taking part in the parade are the Quincy Police and Fire Honor Guards; USS Constitution Honor Guard; Navy Operational Support Center Color Guard; Windjammers Drum Squad; Norfolk County Sheriff Department Honor Guard; North Quincy High School ROTC; Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts; Gold Star parents; Brewster Ambulance; and the Quincy National Guard.

Lewis will serve as parade marshal. George Bouchard, past commander of the QVC, is co-chairman of the parade. Leo Reardon, past QVC commander, is officer of the day. Sergeant-at-arms is Fred Cook, past commander of the DAV Chapter 79.

Ask the GEMOLOGIST

BY JEFFREY M. BERTMAN
GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST

MAKING LEMONADE

Citrine is the transparent, pale yellow to brownish orange variety of quartz. Like most other varieties of quartz, it is attractive, affordable, and durable, which makes it the top-selling yellow-to-orange gemstone. This birthstone for the month of November derives its name from the French word for lemon, "citron." It should come as no surprise, therefore, that this gemstone displays a juicy lemon color. On the other hand, many citrine aficionados have come to love the darker, reddish-brown variety of quartz known as Madeira citrine, which some believe gets its name from the Brazilian word for "wood." Others claim that Madeira citrine is named after the fortified wine made in the Madeira Islands just off the coast of Portugal.

Celebrate a loved one's November birthday with citrine, a beautiful yellow-gold gemstone, which is said to be comforting, energizing and life-giving. Citrine is a durable, versatile gem that is perfect for rings, earrings or pendants. For more information, please call Rogers Jewelry at 617-773-3636. Finally ... you get to do what you want to do

The question now – what's the best way to pay for it? Maybe you're simplifying your life. Maybe you're complicating it. Either way, you're at the point where some new doors are opening. You have resources. You have options. What you want is a lender you can talk with, to help make the financing happen intelligently. At Colonial Federal, you deal directly with lenders who actually like coming up with good ways to make things happen. Including sometimes being able to make customized loans. Sound interesting? Like to talk? Call Angela Blanchard, VP/Retail Lending, at 617-471-0750 or apply online at colonialfed.com.

McCullough: Founders Deserve More Interest From Citizenry

the book and the miniseries are credited with a surge of interest in the Adams family, including visits to historic sites in Quincy.

Speaking before the crowd of more than 300, McCullough said visiting historic sites is among the best ways to learn about people from the past.

"I have long held that one of the best of all ways to connect with those who went before us and to understand not only who they were but what kinds of people they were…is to go where things have really happened," McCullough said.

"To go the battlefields, to go to the birthplaces, and to soak it up, feel the presence of that landscape and that atmosphere and put yourselves the best you can in their shoes."

Americans, McCullough continued, should not be ignorant of past generations

"We Americans are beneficiaries of some of the wisest and bravest and most generous-spirited people of all time," he said. "We owe much more to them than we are customarily expressing, and to be ignorant of their travails, of their achievements, and their humanity is not just to be ignorant – it's to be rude and ungrateful.

"We all should be showing more gratitude and more interest than we have been of late."

McCullough spoke highly of the second president and his family during the hour-long ceremony. He noted Adams was the only founding father who did not own slaves.

"I wonder how many of you realize that John Adams was the only founding father – the only one – who never owned a slave as a matter of principal. If anything, his wife Abigail is even more adamant on the subject," McCullough said.

"That's not just an incidental fact – that speaks volumes to the kind of human beings they were."

McCullough also spoke about Adams' parents – John Adams Sr. and Susanna Boylston Adams.

"I'm inclined to mention the father – the first John Adams," he said. "We know very little about him, except the impact he had on his son. His son felt that his father was the greatest man he'd ever known. It was his father's honesty, his father's independent spirit and love of country that [were] the famous John Adams' lifelong inspiration.

"It's a shame we don't know more about his mother. Very little is known except she was apparently a very strong person, very affectionate…and she was almost certainly illiterate.

"The idea that genius of both John Adams and John Quincy Adams would arise in the open availability of education in this country and from the lineage of his mother as well is part of the miracle of our country."

McCullough also offered advice to the many students in attendance during the ceremony, relaying a quote to them from Thomas Jefferson about the importance of education.

"Jefferson said 'a nation that expects to be ignorant and free expects what never was and never will be,'" McCullough stated. "So those of you who are in the process of becoming educated, keep in mind that what you make of your lives will depend greatly on what you read and the kind of teaching and encouragement you'll be receiving."

There is a tendency, I think, to think of John Adams as a rather sour fellow. He wasn't at all. He had a great sense of humor and he had great vitality, loved to sing and dance, love to be with his friends, and he loved to be with his children. And he could be very optimistic.

McCullough concluded his remarks by thanking those in attendance for their presence.

"Your interest is expressed in the fact that you came here for this occasion today, and all of us are grateful for that," he said. "Community matters more than we know. Families more than we know, and the traditions of families – particularly of that very creative and formative time – are important to understand.

"We can never, ever know enough about the Revolutionary War era and all that it brought forth for our country and for the world."

Mayor Thomas Koch spoke briefly during the ceremony, saying he did not want to take time away from McCullough. Koch said the author inspired Quincy to stake its place in the nation's history once again.

"I am going to defer my comments today because we are quite honored and delighted to have a special guest with us today," the mayor said. "He needs no introduction, of course, but chatting with Mr. McCullough just a few minutes ago over at City Hall we were speaking about what's going on around the church here with the new park that will be dedicated very soon.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On Nov. 14, 1851, "Moby-Dick," a novel by Herman Melville about the voyage of the whaling ship Pequod, is published under the title "The Whale." The book contains one of the most famous opening lines in fiction: "Call me Ishmael."

• On Nov. 19, 1915, British airman Richard Bell Davies performs a daring rescue, swooping down in his single-seat scout plane to whisk a downed fellow pilot from behind Turkish lines just as enemy soldiers approached.

• On Nov. 16, 1945, the United States ships 88 German rocket scientists to America. The U.S. government was desperate to acquire the scientific know-how that had produced German rockets during World War II.

• On Nov. 17, 1958, the Kingston Trio's "Tom Dooley" hits No. 1 on the Billboard pop chart. The song was probably first sung sometime after 1868, when a North Carolina man named Tom Dula was hanged for the murder of his fiancée.

• On Nov. 15, 1965, at the Bonneville Salt Flats in Utah, 28-year-old Californian Craig Breedlove sets a new land-speed record of 600.6 mph in the Spirit of America. The car was powered by a Navy jet engine.

• On Nov. 20, 1982, the Cal football team wins an improbable last-second victory over Stanford when they complete five lateral passes around members of the Cardinals' marching band, who had come onto the field a bit early. Cal's Kevin Moen careened through the confused horn section to reach the end zone, where he slammed into a trombone player. The touchdown counted, and Cal won 25-20.

• On Nov. 18, 1991, Shiite Muslim kidnappers in Lebanon free Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite after more than four years of captivity. Waite had secured the release of missionaries detained in Iran, British hostages from Libya and even American hostages from Lebanon before he was seized in Beirut.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1915 postcard view of Grandview Avenue in Wollaston Heights. The view is from its intersection with Lincoln Avenue looking south up the hill. First developed in the 1870s this section of Wollaston has many large Victorian style houses that were built by wealthy Boston businessmen who were attracted to the area by its easy commute on the Old Colony railroad. The nearby depot originally on the west side of the tracks and called Wollaston Heights was built for that reason. The street was named for its views of Boston Harbor and the city including the State House dome. Today, large trees pretty much block the grand views. Colonial Federal Collecting New Hats, Gloves, Socks For Salvation Army

Colonial Federal Savings Bank is sponsoring its second annual "Share The Warmth" drive to collect new hats, gloves and socks for a just-before Christmas donation to the Salvation Army.

Donation boxes are available now through Dec. 17th in the Colonial Federal Savings Bank offices in Quincy, Weymouth and Holbrook and for residents only at 1000 Southern Artery.

"As a neighborhood bank, we're always looking for ways to help people in the community," said Susan Shea, Colonial Federal treasurer and chief operating officer. "This seemed like a fun, easy way for people to help others – something that would make both the givers and the recipients happy."

Practical and/or fashionable warm new hats, gloves and socks are needed for men, women and children. Cash/check donations are also welcome.

For questions or to arrange to make a cash/check donation, call Kerry or Meg at Colonial Federal Savings Bank, 617-471-0750.

Mayors Coalition Urges No Vote On Question 2

The Metropolitan Mayors Coalition voted to oppose Ballot Question 2, which would allow up to 12 new charter schools to open each year without any approval at the local level. If Question 2 passes, municipal budgets will be dramatically impacted as millions of additional dollars will funnel away from our public district schools and into these new charter schools.

The Coalition does not oppose charter schools. Many of its members have developed strong working relationships with existing independent charter schools and see them as assets to the communities they serve. However, Question 2 is an extreme measure that does not take into account the needs of our current school systems.

The passage of Question 2 would lead to serious cuts throughout all of our school districts. We do not want to see class sizes grow and hope to continue investing in the arts, athletics, and other programs that benefit our students. Diverting state funding away from our public district schools will significantly compromise our ability to fund these critical services and programs.

Charter school policy decisions in Massachusetts are best left to the Legislature – they are too complex to be left to the ballot initiative process. Question 2 is simply too much, too fast. It will rapidly pull essential resources from the public district schools that educate 96 percent of the public school students in the commonwealth, without allowing for local input in the process.

The Metro Mayors Coalition, an organization of cities and towns in the urban core of metropolitan Boston, is a voluntary forum where members exchange information and create solutions to common problems. The municipal officials comprising this group represent over 1.4 million constituents in Boston, Braintree, Brookline, Cambridge, Chelsea, Everett, Malden, Melrose, Medford, Newton, Quincy, Revere, Somerville, and Winthrop.

Stage Set For Hot Ward Council, School Races

Tuesday's preliminary election results have set the stage for red hot ward council and school committee races in the Dec. 4 final election.

A surprising 39 percent (19,204) of the city's 48,838 registered voters went to the polls. A lean 28 percent had been forecast. Mayor Walter Hannon with 11,110 votes, will face Mrs. Grace Saphir with 5,997 votes, in the final election. Incumbent City Councillors Clifford Marshall, Ward 2, Albert Barilaro, Ward 4, J. Vincent Smyth, Ward 6, as well as Councillors at Large Arthur Tobin, Joseph LaRaia and John Quinn were all nominated.

Quincy's preliminary election had been an on again off again affair for months after the city had been ordered by a federal court judge to redistrict. This delay caused the scheduled Nov. 6 final election to become the preliminary election with the final election scheduled for Dec. 4

SHOPPERS PARK FREE ON FRIDAY EVENINGS

Shoppers can now park free in downtown Quincy, North Quincy and Wollaston, on Friday evenings, thanks to an ordinance change passed unanimously by the City Council. The ordinance change amendment, passed in the Ordinance Committee chaired by Ward 2 Councillor Clifford Marshall, allows free parking on Fridays from 6 p.m. on.

push for equality. Johnson was later instrumental for landmark civil rights legislation.

"The country wouldn't be like it is now if it (legislation) wasn't passed," Robb said.

Robb carried on her father's work in seeking equality. She chaired President Jimmy Carter's women's advisory committee to promote equality for women in the workplace and in social and cultural life. Robb noted equality for women continues to be an ongoing battle.

"We continue to be discriminated against," she said. "We continue to keep up our efforts. We're fighting the same battles we did 50 years ago."

Robb also chaired the Reading is Fundamental program founded in 1966 through a grant from the Ford Foundation by teacher Margaret McNamara, wife of then Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara. The program provides millions of free books to children in every state.

Robb is still active in politics having participated at Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton's rallies with running mate, Gov. Tim Kaine of Virginia. Clinton worked with Robb when the latter served as chair of the Virginia Task Force on Infant Mortality.

"She would be a great person for president," Robb said of Clinton.

Robb talked of her mother's accomplishments as First Lady, notably her work to clean up the nation's highways of litter and unsightly billboards. The Highway Beautification Act, nicknamed Lady Bird's bill, was passed as a result of her advocacy.

While growing up in the White House, Robb said she got to see he father deal with running the nation and had a chance to meet some celebrities including actor Warren Beatty and poet Carl Sandburg.

Robb recounted how one day she wanted to ditch the Secret Service agents that were constantly guarding her and younger sister, Luci. She explained how she put on her coat and joined a group touring the White House "to see what people were saying about us."

As the group was leaving, Robb told the tour guides to let the Secret Service know she was leaving and that "They won't mind."

"It was the only time I ever escaped," she said.

Robb fielded several questions from the students and visitors including how she got her name.

She explained her name was derived from a combination of her parents' names – Lyndon and Lynda Bird.

Answering a question of what advice she would have for the young female students in the audience, Robb answered that it is important to be independent.

"Don't depend on someone to take care of you," she said. "Stand on your own."

Following her remarks, Adams National Historical Park Superintendent Marianne Peak presented Robb with a paperweight symbolizing the legacy of Abigail Adams whom Peak said Robb reflects.

"We are proud to have you as a friend of the National Park Service and the Adams National Historical Park," said Peak.

Robb was also honored by State Representatives Bruce Ayers and Tackey Chan with citations from the House of Representatives to mark the centennial of the National Park Service for its work in preservation and community engagement.

WOODWARD SCHOOL STUDENTS Kat Carson, left, and Fiona Powers Ozyurt greet Lynda Bird Johnson-Robb inside the Carriage House at the Adams National Historical Park Oct. 25.

Chan expressed appreciation for the work of Robb's father for social reform.

"I would like to thank President Johnson," said Chan. "I wouldn't be here if not for change in the '60's and '70's on immigration," he said.

Peak said she became friends with Lady Bird Johnson as a result of the First Lady's several visits to the Adams National Historical Park. Upon seeing how important the Adams park was, Peak said Johnson was prompted to donate the family's Texas ranch to the National Park Service.

"Her relationship with this park was unique," Peak said. "She saw how the National Park Service took responsibility for resources that represent our history and culture. We connect to the Johnsons as they connect to the Adamses."

QHS Class Of 1943 Holds 73rd Reunion

The Quincy High School Class of 1943 recently held its 73rd reunion at the Inn at Bay Pointe in Quincy.

Classmates reminsced about their high school memories. The year 1943 was the height of World War II and many classmates had left the city to serve their country during the war in the nation's armed services. Many missed graduation but were awarded their diplomas at a later date.

The classmates hope to continue this annual luncheon and truly enjoy getting together and remembering their friendships in those days and sharing stories about their lives and families. They have a strong bond.

'Punkin Chunkin' Fundraiser Saturday Benefits Boy Scouts

Boy Scout Troop 6 in Quincy is holding a "Punkin Chunkin" fundraiser Saturday, Nov. 5 at Pageant Field from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Organizers said last year's event was a "smashing success" so the boy scouts will be doing it again this fall.

To participate, bring leftover Halloween pumpkins and Jack-o'-Lanterns to Pageant Field from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 5 and launch them with Troop 6's trebuchet and giant sling shot.

Each launch is a donation of $5. No pumpkins bigger than 10 lbs.

Also, bring any unwanted extra candy and the Boy Scouts will send it to soldiers overseas.

All proceeds go to support Boy Scout Troop 6 Quincy.

Library Bookstore Celebrates 5th Anniversary Saturday

The Crane Library Bookstore is celebrating its fifth anniversary with giveaways to express appreciation to its loyal patrons who have supported the store and contributed to its success since its opening in November, 2011.

On Saturday, Nov. 5th one free book with a value of up to $2 will be given away with a purchase of equal or greater value. Gently-used books, DVD's, CD's, audiobooks, foreign language media, reference books and a large selection of children's and young-adult books and media are available.

With the exception of some distinctive items, like the shop's wide assortment of coffee table books, most merchandise sells for a dollar or two. Children's paperbacks and mass-media paperbacks sell for even less and there's a special corner of the store where some best-selling authors' books sell four for a dollar.

A time-generous group of volunteers from The Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library staff the store, which is overseen by committee members who have been together since its planning days.

All proceeds, which frequently amount to more than $20,000 annually are used to support the library's many community programs which include lectures, winter and summer lawn-concerts, current film screenings, museum passes, programs for children, teens, adults, and a variety of special events listed on the library's website and in its newsletter.

The shop is open on Thursday evenings from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. and on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 pm., and has its own separate entrance on Spear Street in the rear of the Crane Public Library, which nearly 30 years ago was designated a National Historic Landmark.

During the Christmas season the store will be open on Thursday, Dec. 22 and then remain closed until Thursday, Jan. 5.

Chelsea Jewish Foundation To Honor Doug Fiebelkorn

The Chelsea Jewish Foundation will present Doug Fiebelkorn, Managing Principal of CliftonLarsonAllen LLP New England based in Quincy, with the 2016 "Mensch of the Year" award today (Thursday.)

The award honors a leader who exemplifies the qualities of a true "mensch" – a Yiddish word that describes someone who acts with great integrity, ethics, and a commitment to helping others in their community.

Fiebelkorn has been a leader in the Greater Boston healthcare community. As a principal in the health care group and the managing principal of the Massachusetts offices of CliftonLarsonAllen, Fiebelkorn's focus is on audit, reimbursement, tax, and financial consulting for a variety of health care organizations. He has extensive experience with third party reimbursement, HUD, and other financing, and mergers and acquisitions. Clients have included both profit motivated and not for profit entities, ranging in size from single site to multiple site organizations.

Fiebelkorn holds a Bachelor's of Science degree from Canisius, a Master of Science degree from Bentley University, and a Juris Doctorate from Suffolk Law School. He has been a very active member in the local community, serving on a number of boards. He currently serves on the Board of Directors for the Massachusetts Senior Care Foundation and is a Past Director of the Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants. Doug lives in Boston with his husband, Andrew Hall.

The Hyatt Boston Harbor Hotel is located at 101 Harborside Dr., Boston.

The breakfast and award presentation will take place from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. Nov. 3. For tickets to the event or more information, contact Judy Mastrocola, jmastrocola@chelseajewish.org or call 617-887-0001.

Rita's Strawberry Cream Cake

By MARIE

When our family gathers on the Cape we each try to bring something to the table. And so in keeping with our tradition on our last trip my daughter, Rita, brought dessert which was a Strawberry Cream Cake.

When it was time for dessert, Rita brought out the cake, already baked of course, and all of the other ingredients to make this spectacular looking and tasty cake.

We all stood around and watched her fix this beautiful dessert. First off she cut the cake in three layers and set them aside. Then Rita made the cream filling.

WHITE CAKE RECIPE

½ cup of butter
2 ½ cups all-purpose flour
2 and ½ teaspoons of baking powder
1 and ¼ cups of sugar
¾ cup of milk
1 teaspoon of vanilla
3 egg whites

In bowl combine butter, flour baking powder and one cup of the sugar, the milk and the vanilla. Beat for 2 minutes at medium speed. Now in a different bowl beat eggs whites to a froth.

Gradually beat in the rest of sugar (1/4 cup) and continue beating until stiff. Add to the butter mixture and beat for one more minute. Pour into greased and floured 9-inch round pan. Bake in preheated 375 degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes and let stand in pan for 5 minutes. Then unmold it and cool on a rack.

CREAM FILLING RECIPE:

1 pint of heavy cream
6 ounces of cream cheese
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon of vanilla
1 large package of fresh strawberries cut in half and set aside

In a bowl mix cream cheese and sugar. Add the heavy cream, salt and vanilla beat until smooth. Fill each layer starting with the bottom layer. Spoon on the cream mixture, smooth and top with strawberries.

Repeat this step for the second layer and then put the top on the cake. Once the cake and cream layers are all together put cream on the top and place the strawberry halves all around the top, with 3 or 4 strawberries decoratively in the center.

This is a beautiful looking and very tasty cake guaranteed to be a crowd pleaser!

Chicken Bone Broth Recipe

By SUSIE

Many cultures have used bone broth to make healing elixirs, soups, and stews for many centuries.

The Jewish community made chicken soup the popular remedy for colds and flu without fully understanding the unique health benefits which science has revealed. The bones house a variety of powerful nutrients that become released when they are slowly simmered.

These nutrients include bone marrow which helps to provide the raw materials for healthy blood cells and immune development. It also helps the development of healthy joints, bones, connective tissue, ligaments, tendons as well as hair and skin. Bone broth is also great to heal digestive disorders as well. Keep some on hand for this winter, I heard it's going to be a doozy!

CHICKEN BONE BROTH RECIPE
Total Time: 48 hours
Serves: Varies

INGREDIENTS:

- 4 pounds chicken necks/wings/thighs
- 3 carrots, chopped
- 3 celery stalks, chopped
- 2 medium onions, peel on, sliced in half lengthwise and quartered
- 4 garlic cloves, peel on and smashed
- 1 teaspoon Himalayan salt
- 1 teaspoon whole peppercorns
- 3 tablespoon apple cider vinegar
- 2 bay leaves
- 3 sprigs fresh thyme
- 5-6 sprigs parsley
- 18-20 cups cold water

DIRECTIONS:

1. Place all ingredients in a 10 quart capacity crock-pot.
2. Add in water.
3. Simmer for 24-48 hours, skimming fat occasionally.
4. Remove from heat and allow to cool slightly. Discard solids and strain remainder in a bowl through a colander. Let stock cool to room temperature, cover and chill.
5. Use within a week or freeze up to 3 months.

Bursitis And Tendinitis Basics: Conditions, Treatments

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

RUTH JONES

Bursitis and tendinitis are conditions that involve inflammation of the soft tissue surrounding muscles and bones, most often in the shoulder, elbow, wrist, hip, knee, or ankle.

Bursitis arises when a bursa, a small fluid-filled sac that acts as a cushion between a bone and other moving parts, becomes inflamed. Bursitis is generally caused by overuse or direct trauma to a joint. Bursitis may occur at the knee or elbow, from kneeling or leaning on the elbows longer than usual on a hard surface. Individuals such as carpenters, gardeners, and athletes who perform activities that require repetitive motions or place stress on joints are at greater risk for tendinitis and bursitis. An infection, arthritis, gout, thyroid disease, and diabetes can also generate inflammation of a bursa or tendon.

Tendinitis is inflammation of a tendon, a flexible band of fibrous tissue that connects muscles to bones. They are found throughout the body, including the hands, wrists, elbows, shoulders, hips, knees, ankles, and feet. Tendons can be small, like those in the hand, or large, like the Achilles tendon in the heel. Tendinitis is most frequently the result of a repetitive injury or motion in the affected area. Some common names for tendinitis include tennis elbow, golfer's elbow, pitcher's shoulder and jumper's knee.

Tennis elbow (lateral epicondylitis) refers to an injury to the outer elbow tendon. Golfer's elbow (medial epicondylitis) is an injury to the inner tendon of the elbow. These ailments can also occur with any activity that involves repetitive wrist turning or hand gripping, such as using a tool, hand shaking, or twisting movements. Pain occurs near the elbow, often radiating into the upper arm or down to the forearm.

Two types of tendinitis can affect the shoulder. Biceps tendinitis causes discomfort in the front or side of the shoulder and may travel down to the elbow and forearm. Pain may also happen when raising the arm overhead. The biceps muscle helps accelerate and decelerate the arm during overhead movement in activities like tennis or pitching.

Rotator cuff tendinitis causes shoulder pain at the tip of the shoulder and the upper, outer arm. The pain can be intensified by reaching, pushing, pulling, lifting, raising the arm above shoulder level, or lying on the affected side. The rotator cuff is mainly a group of four muscles that attach the arm to the shoulder joint allowing the arm to rotate and elevate. Repeated motion involving the arms, or the aging process involving shoulder motion over numerous years, may also aggravate and wear down the tendons, muscles, and surrounding structures. Squeezing of the rotator cuff is termed shoulder impingement syndrome. Inflammation caused by rheumatoid arthritis may cause rotator cuff tendinitis and bursitis. Sports involving overuse of the shoulder and occupations necessitating frequent overhead reaching are other possible causes of irritation to the rotator cuff or bursa, and may lead to swelling and impingement.

If a tendon is overused during activities, it may elongate or undergo microscopic tears and become inflamed. Attempting to break a fall may also cause the quadriceps muscles to contract and tear the quadriceps tendon above the knee cap or the patellar tendon below it. Tendinitis of the patellar tendon is sometimes called jumper's knee because the muscle contraction and force of hitting the ground after a jump strain the tendon, in sports such as basketball. People with tendinitis of the knee may feel pain during running, accelerated walking, or jumping. Knee tendinitis can increase the risk for ruptures or large tears to the tendon.

Achilles tendon injuries encompass an irritation, stretch, or tear to the tendon connecting the calf muscle to the back of the heel. Achilles tendinitis is a common overuse injury, but can also be caused by tight or weak calf muscles or conditions that cause the tendon to become less flexible and more rigid, such as arthritis or aging. Achilles tendon injuries can happen to anyone who consistently participates in activities that cause the calf muscle to contract, like climbing stairs or using a stair-stepper. Achilles tendinitis can be a chronic condition or a sudden injury.

Diagnosis of tendinitis and bursitis initiates with a medical history and physical examination. In the case of a torn tendon, x rays may help show which tendon is affected. The doctor may also use magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) to confirm a partial or total tear. To rule out infection, the doctor may remove and test fluid from the inflamed area. Treatment centers on healing the injured bursa or tendon. The first step in treating both of these conditions is to alleviate pain and inflammation with rest, compression, elevation, and anti-inflammatory medicines such as aspirin, naproxen, or ibuprofen. Activity involving the affected joint is also restricted to foster healing and prevent further injury. In some cases protective devices, such as foot orthoses for the ankle and foot or splints for the knee or hand, may temporarily diminish stress to the affected tendon or bursa and facilitate faster healing times. Gentle stretching and strengthening exercises and massage of the soft tissue may also be beneficial.

If there is no improvement, the doctor may inject a corticosteroid medicine into the area encircling the inflamed bursa or tendon. However these medicines must be used with caution because they may lead to weakening or rupture of the tendon. If there is still no improvement the doctor may perform either arthroscopic or open surgery to repair damage and relieve pressure on the tendons and bursae. If a tendon is completely torn, surgery may be needed to repair the damage. If the bursitis is caused by an infection, antibiotics the doctor will prescribe are usually the treatment of choice.

Ruth Jones is the director of Nursing for the City of Quincy Health Department.

Free Tour Of Passanageset Park At Broad Meadows Sunday

72% Voter Turnout Seen For Presidential Election Nov. 8

settle races for Congress and the state Senate.

In Quincy, City Clerk Nicole Crispo anticipates nearly 43,000 voters – 72 percent of the city's 59,639 registered voters – casting ballots in the election. That would top the 70.23 percent turnout in 2012 when 40,464 of 57,612 voters in the city went to the polls, and the turnout of 70.65 in 2008, when 39,820 of the city's 56,364 voters cast ballots.

Polls across Massachusetts will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Election Day, Nov. 8, and Quincy Public Schools will be closed that day.

While Election Day is Nov. 8, thousands of voters have cast ballots in Quincy over the week and a half as the Bay State offers early voting for the first time.

Crispo said nearly 4,000 residents had voted early as of 2 p.m. Monday, including 1,633 who did so Saturday at North Quincy High School.

Early voting will continue through Friday in the lower level of the James R. McIntyre Government Center (Old City Hall), 1305 Hancock St. The voting booths there will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Wednesday, and from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday and Friday.

Residents, Crispo said, have been largely happy with the early voting so far, though there have been some complaints about parking at City Hall.

"People aren't 100 percent happy with parking here, but I find it very accommodating," she said. "We've had a lot of positive feedback compared to a handful of complaints."

In addition to the nearly 4,000 early voters, Crispo said 1,728 residents had cast absentee ballots as of 2 p.m. Monday.

More than 2,400 Quincy residents registered to vote between the state primary in September and the Oct. 19 deadline to do so for the presidential election, increasing the total number of eligible voters in the city from 57,198 on Aug. 18 to 59,639. Crispo said such an increase in registered voters is typical in the lead up to a presidential election.

More than half of all registered voters in Quincy – 30,645 – are unenrolled. There are 22,945 Democrats in the city and 5,139 Republicans. The United Independent Party has the most registered voters of any third party with 586, followed by the Libertarian Party with 129 and the Green-Rainbow Party with 67. The city's remaining 128 voters are spread across 15 different designations.

Clinton, 69, would be the first woman elected president if she defeats Trump. She previously served as the U.S. secretary of state during President Barack Obama's first term, and is a former U.S. senator from New York. She was first lady of the United States when her husband, Bill, was president.

Clinton's running mate is Tim Kaine, a 58-year-old U.S. senator from Virginia. Kaine was previously governor of Virginia and is a former chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Trump, 70, is a billionaire businessman from New York. He is making his first run for elected office.

Trump is joined on the Republican ticket by Mike Pence, the 57-year-old governor of Indiana. Pence previously represented the Hoosier State in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Candidates from two other parties are on the ballot in Massachusetts.

The Libertarian ticket includes Gary Johnson, a former governor of New Mexico, and running mate William Weld, a former Massachusetts governor. Both are former members of the Republican Party.

On the Green-Rainbow ticket are Jill Stein, a former Town Meeting member in Lexington, Mass., and her running mate Ajamu Baraka, a human rights activist.

In Massachusetts, voters statewide will decide four binding referendums.

Question 1, if approved, would give the state's gaming commission one more slots parlor license to award. The slots parlor could only be located on a parcel of land at least four acres in size and within 1,500 feet of a horseracing track. The proponent of the question – Eugene McCain – is seeking to build a slots parlor near Suffolk Downs in Revere.

Question 2 asks voters to lift the cap on charter schools in the state. If approved, up to 12 new charter schools would be allowed each year.

Question 3 would, if ap-

QUESTION 1

QUESTION 1: LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Do you approve of a law summarized below, on which no vote was taken by the Senate or the House of Representatives on or before May 3, 2016?

SUMMARY

This proposed law would allow the state Gaming Commission to issue one additional category 2 license, which would permit operation of a gaming establishment with no table games and not more than 1,250 slot machines.

The proposed law would authorize the Commission to request applications for the additional license to be granted to a gaming establishment located on property that is (i) at least four acres in size; (ii) adjacent to and within 1,500 feet of a race track, including the track's additional facilities, such as the track, grounds, paddocks, barns, auditorium, amphitheatre, and bleachers; (iii) where a horse racing meeting may physically be held; (iv) where a horse racing meeting shall have been hosted; and (v) not separated from the race track by a highway or railway.

A YES VOTE would permit the state Gaming Commission to license one additional slot-machine gaming establishment at a location that meets certain conditions specified in the law.

A NO VOTE would make no change in current laws regarding gaming.

QUESTION 2

QUESTION 2: LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Do you approve of a law summarized below, on which no vote was taken by the Senate or the House of Representatives on or before May 3, 2016?

SUMMARY

This proposed law would allow the state Board of Elementary and Secondary Education to approve up to 12 new charter schools or enrollment expansions in existing charter schools each year. Approvals under this law could expand statewide charter school enrollment by up to 1% of the total statewide public school enrollment each year. New charters and enrollment expansions approved under this law would be exempt from existing limits on the number of charter schools, the number of students enrolled in them, and the amount of local school districts' spending allocated to them.

If the Board received more than 12 applications in a single year from qualified applicants, then the proposed law would require it to give priority to proposed charter schools or enrollment expansions in districts where student performance on statewide assessments is in the bottom 25% of all districts in the previous two years and where demonstrated parent demand for additional public school options is greatest.

New charter schools and enrollment expansions approved under this proposed law would be subject to the same approval standards as other charter schools, and to recruitment, retention, and multilingual outreach requirements that currently apply to some charter schools. Schools authorized under this law would be subject to annual performance reviews according to standards established by the Board.

The proposed law would take effect on January 1, 2017.

A YES VOTE would allow for up to 12 approvals each year of either new charter schools or expanded enrollments in existing charter schools, but not to exceed 1% of the statewide public school enrollment.

A NO VOTE would make no change in current laws relative to charter schools.

QUESTION 3

QUESTION 3: LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Do you approve of a law summarized below, on which no vote was taken by the Senate or the House of Representatives on or before May 3, 2016?

SUMMARY

This proposed law would prohibit any farm owner or operator from knowingly confining any breeding pig, calf raised for veal, or egg-laying hen in a way that prevents the animal from lying down, standing up, fully extending its limbs, or turning around freely. The proposed law would also prohibit any business owner or operator in Massachusetts from selling whole eggs intended for human consumption or any uncooked cut of veal or pork if the business owner or operator knows or should know that the hen, breeding pig, or veal calf that produced these products was confined in a manner prohibited by the proposed law. The proposed law would exempt sales of food products that combine veal or pork with other products, including soups, sandwiches, pizzas, hotdogs, or similar processed or prepared food items.

The proposed law's confinement prohibitions would not apply during transportation; state and county fair exhibitions; 4-H programs; slaughter in compliance with applicable laws and regulations; medical research; veterinary exams, testing, treatment and operation if performed under the direct supervision of a licensed veterinarian; five days prior to a pregnant pig's expected date of giving birth; any day that pig is nursing piglets; and for temporary periods for animal husbandry purposes not to exceed six hours in any twenty-four hour period.

The proposed law would create a civil penalty of up to $1,000 for each violation and would give the Attorney General the exclusive authority to enforce the law, and to issue regulations to implement it. As a defense to enforcement proceedings, the proposed law would allow a business owner or operator to rely in good faith upon a written certification or guarantee of compliance by a supplier.

The proposed law would be in addition to any other animal welfare laws and would not prohibit stricter local laws.

The proposed law would take effect on January 1, 2022. The proposed law states that if any of its parts were declared invalid, the other parts would stay in effect.

A YES VOTE would prohibit any confinement of pigs, calves, and hens that prevents them from lying down, standing up, fully extending their limbs, or turning around freely.

A NO VOTE would make no change in current laws relative to the keeping of farm animals.

QUESTION 4

QUESTION 4: LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Do you approve of a law summarized below, on which no vote was taken by the Senate or the House of Representatives on or before May 3, 2016?

SUMMARY

The proposed law would permit the possession, use, distribution, and cultivation of marijuana in limited amounts by persons age 21 and older and would remove criminal penalties for such activities. It would provide for the regulation of commerce in marijuana, marijuana accessories, and marijuana products and for the taxation of proceeds from sales of these items.

The proposed law would authorize persons at least 21 years old to possess up to one ounce of marijuana outside of their residences; possess up to ten ounces of marijuana inside their residences; grow up to six marijuana plants in their residences; give one ounce or less of marijuana to a person at least 21 years old without payment; possess, produce or transfer hemp; or make or transfer items related to marijuana use, storage, cultivation, or processing.

The measure would create a Cannabis Control Commission of three members appointed by the state Treasurer which would generally administer the law governing marijuana use and distribution, promulgate regulations, and be responsible for the licensing of marijuana commercial establishments. The proposed law would also create a Cannabis Advisory Board of fifteen members appointed by the Governor. The Cannabis Control Commission would adopt regulations governing licensing qualifications; security; record keeping; health and safety standards; packaging and labeling; testing; advertising and displays; required inspections; and such other matters as the Commission considers appropriate. The records of the Commission would be public records.

The proposed law would authorize cities and towns to adopt reasonable restrictions on the time, place, and manner of operating marijuana businesses and to limit the number of marijuana establishments in their communities. A city or town could hold a local vote to determine whether to permit the selling of marijuana and marijuana products for consumption on the premises at commercial establishments.

The proceeds of retail sales of marijuana and marijuana products would be subject to the state sales tax and an additional excise tax of 3.75%. A city or town could impose a separate tax of up to 2%. Revenue received from the additional state excise tax or from license application fees and civil penalties for violations of this law would be deposited in a Marijuana Regulation Fund and would be used subject to appropriation for administration of the proposed law.

Marijuana-related activities authorized under this proposed law could not be a basis for adverse orders in child welfare cases absent clear and convincing evidence that such activities had created an unreasonable danger to the safety of a minor child.

The proposed law would not affect existing law regarding medical marijuana treatment centers or the operation of motor vehicles while under the influence. It would permit property owners to prohibit the use, sale, or production of marijuana on their premises (with an exception that landlords cannot prohibit consumption by tenants of marijuana by means other than by smoking); and would permit employers to prohibit the consumption of marijuana by employees in the workplace. State and local governments could continue to restrict uses in public buildings or at or near schools. Supplying marijuana to persons under age 21 would be unlawful.

The proposed law would take effect on December 15, 2016.

A YES VOTE would allow persons 21 and older to possess, use, and transfer marijuana and products containing marijuana concentrate (including edible products) and to cultivate marijuana, all in limited amounts, and would provide for the regulation and taxation of commercial sale of marijuana and marijuana products.

A NO VOTE would make no change in current laws relative to marijuana.

proved, prohibit Massachusetts farmers from confining breeding pigs, calves raised for veal and egg-laying hens in a way that prevents them from lying down, standing up, extending their limbs or turning around freely – and would ban the sale of meat or eggs in the state from animals who do not meet those standards.

Question 4 would legalize recreational use of marijuana in the state if passed, and create a new cannabis control commission. It would also set a 12 percent tax on marijuana sales.

In Quincy, there are a pair of contested races in which residents can vote.

Incumbent U.S. Rep. Stephen Lynch, a South Boston Democrat, is facing a challenge from Republican William Burke of Quincy. Lynch is seeking his seventh full term on Capitol Hill; he was first elected to Congress in a 2001 special election.

State Sen. John Keenan is facing a challenge from independent candidate Alexander Mendez. Both are Quincy residents. Keenan is seeking his fourth term representing the Norfolk and Plymouth District, which includes all of Quincy, Holbrook, Abington and Rockland as well as several Braintree precincts.

The remaining members of Quincy's delegation on Beacon Hill, all Democrats, are unopposed.

Rep. Bruce Ayers is seeking his tenth term representing the First Norfolk District. The district includes all of Ward 6; Precincts 4 and 5 of Ward 3; Precincts 1 and 3 of Ward 4; Precinct 2 in Ward 5; and four precincts in Randolph.

Rep. Tackey Chan is seeking his fourth term representing the Second Norfolk District. Included in the district is the entirety of Ward 1; Precincts 1 and 2 in Ward 3; Precincts 1 and 2 in Ward 4; and Precincts 1, 3, 4 and 5 of Ward 5.

Rep. Ron Mariano is seeking his thirteenth full term as the representative for the Third Norfolk District. Mariano was first elected in a 1991 special election. The district includes all of Ward 2 and Ward 4, Precinct 5 in Quincy, as well as several precincts in Holbrook and Weymouth.

Rep. Dan Hunt is seeking is second full term as the representative in the Thirteenth Suffolk District, which covers parts of Boston and Ward 3, Precinct 3 in Quincy. Hunt was first elected in a 2014 special election.

Three incumbent Norfolk County officeholders, all Democrats, are up for re-election this year as well.

They include Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti of Quincy, who is seeking a fourth six-year term.

County Commissioners Joseph Shea of Quincy and Francis O'Brien of Dedham are up for re-election this year – voters will pick two commissioners to serve four-year terms. Shea was appointed last year to fill the seat vacated by the retirement of John Gillis and his seeking his first full term, and O'Brien is seeking his fourth full term.

Also up for re-election is Governor's Councillor Christopher Iannella Jr., a Democrat from Boston seeking a new two-year term. Ianella has served on the Governor's Council since 1993 and before that served from 1985 to 1991.

Mayor's Substance Abuse Task Force Opposes Question 4

YES Vote Would Legalize Recreational Marijuana

The Mayor's Substance Abuse Task Force voted unanimously to oppose Ballot Question 4, calling the proposal to legalize recreational marijuana a deeply flawed plan with virtually no checks or restrictions on a burgeoning pot industry.

The task force – a group of parents, health care providers, clergy, law enforcement and city leaders – was formed in 2008 by Mayor Thomas Koch to help combat the substance abuse epidemic affecting communities across Massachusetts. The group earned recognition as national model for community intervention and advocacy.

"This legislation was written by corporations that stand to make a fortune with the open-ended sale of marijuana in our communities," the Task Force said in a statement. "Much like the pharmaceutical companies that flooded the market with needlessly dangerous and addictive painkillers and the tobacco industry earning profits from selling their products to young people – it's the same strategy and it's bad for the community."

The task force pointed to a several provisions in the ballot petition as "deeply troubling," including the lack of restrictions on the potency of the high-inducing chemicals in marijuana products and the absence of any protections to prevent marketing candies and other edible forms of the drug to young people.

Mayor Koch also voiced his opposition to the ballot question, building upon the task force's arguments that the legislation was riddled with loopholes and lacks any serious regulatory structure. He said the legislation would have no limits on the number of marijuana stores that could open, no local control on where stores could be located – including near schools – and no regulations for law enforcement to deal with impaired driving.

"There seems to be a misconception that this law just lets people smoke a joint in their home – that's already not a crime. This is an industry-driven proposal with hardly any regulatory framework – and that's without a doubt being done on purpose by those who will profit of this law," he said.

Since the formation of the Task Force, and through its advocacy and support, the City of Quincy became the first city in the country to equip its Police Department with the anti-overdose drug NARCAN. The program has saved over 600 lives and was recognized by the White House as a National Model. The task force also worked to implement prescription take back days and greatly expanded educational resources in Quincy Public Schools.

是否贊成下方總結的法律(在 2016 年 5 月 3 日當日或之前參議院或議院未進行投票)?

總結

此法律提案將允許州博委員會增發一張第 2 類許可, 允許博機構在不設面遊戲的情況下營 運, 並且吃角子老虎數量不可超過 1,250 台。

此法律提案將授權博委員會要求博機構提交申請, 以將此增發的許可證授予場地符合以下條 件的博機構:(i) 大小至少為 4 英畝;(ii) 臨近道或道在 1,500 英尺範圍內, 道包括道的 輔助設施, 例如道、空地、圍場、車庫、觀 席、圓形劇場及露天看臺;(iii) 可以現場舉辦賽馬會;(iv) 將來應舉辦賽馬會;以及 (v) 道未被高速公路或鐵路隔開。

贊成票將表示允許州博委員會, 對於符合法律中明確規定的特定條件的吃角子老虎博機構, 增發一張許可證。

QUESTION 2

議題 2

公民對立法的創制請願

是否贊成下方總結的法律(在 2016 年 5 月 3 日當日或之前參議院或議院未進行投票)?

總結

本次法律提案將允許小學及初中教育州委員會核 准開辦多達 12 所新特許學校, 或在現有特許學校的規模下每年提升入學率。此法律提案通過後, 每年特許學校入學率的提升將令
全州公立學校總 入學率提升 1%。依據此法律提案核准的新特許學校和提升入學率, 不受特許學校數量、學生入學數量、劃撥給特許學校的本地學區費用金額的現有限制條件約。

如果委員會在一年內收到符合條件的申請人的超 過 12 份申請書, 法律提案將要求委員會在如下學區優先核准擬議的特許學校或提升入學率:全州 學生表現評估在前兩年內處於所有地區倒數 25% 的區間, 以及父母對於增加公立學校需求最強烈的區域。
依據此次法律提案所核准的新特許學校和入學率提升, 將遵循和其他特許學校相同的審核標準, 也將遵循目前適用於一些特許學校的錄取率、留校率及多語言推廣服務需求。將依據委員會制定的標準, 每年對根據此法律提案取得授權的學校執行表現審。

此法律提案將於 2017 年 1 月 1 日開始生效。

贊成票將表示支持每年增批 12 所新特許學校, 或提升現有特許學校的入學率, 但是不超過全州 公立學校入學率的 1%。

反對票將不會改變與特許學校有關的法律。

QUESTION 3

議題 3

公民對立法的創制請願

是否贊成下方總結的法律(在 2016 年 5 月 3 日當日或之前參議院或議院未進行投票)?

總結

此法律提案將禁止任何農場主或經營者以某種方式阻止任何種豬、肉用小牛或蛋雞臥、站立、完全伸展其肢體或自由地轉身, 蓄意限制其自由。若供人食用的全只雞蛋或任何生牛肉塊或豬肉塊產品產自以此法律提案禁止的受限制方式飼養的母雞、種豬或肉用小牛, 禁止麻塞諸塞州任何企業主或經營者在知情或理應知情的情況下販售此類產品。此法律提案允許販售將小牛肉或豬肉加入其他產品(包括湯類、三明治、披薩、熱狗、或類似加工或烹製方式的食物)而生產的食品。

此法律提案禁止對飼養動物限制的要求不適用於以下情況:運輸期間;州縣展覽會;4-H 計劃;根據適用法律和法規宰殺;醫療研究;獸醫檢、試驗、治療和在具有獸醫執照的獸醫的直接監督下執行手術;在種豬的預產期前 5 天;母豬哺乳仔豬的任何一天;以及臨時使用動物耕種時長在任何 24 小時時間段內不超過 6 個小時。

此法律提案規定每次違法, 將執行高達 1,000 美元的民事罰款, 並授予司法部長執行此法律的專有權, 並核發實施此法律的相關規程。作為對執行程序的辯護, 此法律提案允許企業主或經營者以誠信之態度信任供應商提供的書面證書或供應商合規性保證書。

此法律提案將作為任何其他動物福利法的補充, 且不會妨礙更嚴苛的本地法律。

此法律提案將於 2022 年 1 月 1 日開始生效。此法律提案聲明, 即使其中任何一部分宣無效, 其他部分仍有效。
贊成票將禁止對豬、小牛、母雞施加任何限制行為, 阻止這些動物臥、站立、完全伸展肢體或自由地轉身。

QUESTION 4

議題 4

公民對立法的創制請願

是否贊成下方總結的法律(在 2016 年 5 月 3 日當日或之前參議院或議院未進行投票)?

總結

此法律提案將允許 21 歲及以上人員限量持有、使用、分銷及種植大麻, 並將免除此類活動的刑事處罰。此法律提案將為大麻、大麻配件、大麻產品商業化及銷售這些物品須繳納的稅收做出法規規定。

此法律提案將核准以下以下各項:21 歲及以上人員可在個人住所外最多持有 1 司大麻;在個人住所內最多持有 10 司大麻;在個人住所內種植 6 株大麻植株;向 21 歲及以上人員提供 1 司(或更少)大麻且不牽涉金錢支付;能持有、生產或轉讓大麻;或生產或轉讓與使用、儲存、種植或加工大麻相關的物品。

將依據此法令成立大麻管制委員會 (Cannabis Control Commission), 由州財政部長任命的三
名成員組成, 其職責通常包括管理用於監管大麻使用和分銷的法律、頒布規程及負責授權大麻商業構。此外, 將依據此法律提案成立大麻諮詢委員會 (Cannabis Advisory Board), 由州長任命的 15 名成員組成。大麻管制委員會將採用管理以下各項的規程:授權資格證書;安全;記錄存留;健康和安全標準;包裝和標籤;試驗;廣告和展示材料;必要的檢驗及委員會認為有必要的其他事項。委員會記錄將對外公開。

此法律提案將核准城市和城鎮採納合理的限制條件, 限制大麻的營運時間、地點和方式, 及限制各個社區的大麻種植機構數量。城市或城鎮能舉行本地投票以決定是否允許銷售大麻和大麻產品, 用於在商業機構的經營場所內吸食。

大麻和大麻產品的零售額收益將繳納州銷售稅及3.75% 的額外消費稅。城市或城鎮能分開徵收最高 2% 的稅收。州額外徵收的消費稅或授權申請費用以及因違反此法律而處罰的民事罰款將存入大麻監管基金會 (Marijuana Regulation Fund), 用作管理此法律提案的專。

沒有明顯且令人信服的證據表明依據此法律提案核准的大麻相關活動會對未成年孩童的安全造成不當危險, 因此此類活動不得作為擾亂孩童福利訴訟案件秩序的依據。
此法律提案將不會影響有關藥用大麻治療中心或吸食大麻後操作車輛的現行法律。此法律提案將允許業主禁止在其個人經營場所內使用、銷售或生產大麻(屋主不得禁止大麻租戶以吸食大麻以外的方式吸食大麻)並允許雇主禁止在工作場所吸食大麻。州政府和當地政府可繼續限制在公共建築物或在學校內或學校附近使用大麻。向不滿 21 歲的人員提供大麻屬於違法行為。

此法律提案將於 2016 年 12 月 15 日開始生效。

贊成票將允許 21 歲及以上人員能限量持有、使用及轉讓大麻和包含大麻濃縮物(包括可食用產品)的產品及種植大麻, 對大麻和大麻產品的商售做出法規規程並徵收稅款。

反對票將不會改變與大麻有關的現行法律。

Drinking Fountains At Three City Schools Shut Off

Will Be Repaired, Replaced After Lead Concentrations In Water Samples Exceeded State Limits

By SCOTT JACKSON

A handful of drinking fountains at three of Quincy's public schools have been shut off and will be repaired or replaced after lead concentrations in water samples collected earlier this fall exceeded state limits.

School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said two fountains at the Bernazzani School, one at the Parker School and one Atlantic Middle School had lead levels exceeding Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection limits in a letter to parents and students Oct. 25. Those fountains, he stated, have been shut off and would be replaced or repaired.

The fountains at Atlantic and Bernazzani were not functional prior to being shut off, officials said, with water flowing only as a drip.

Along with the four water fountains, hand-washing sinks at eight schools had lead or copper concentrations in exceeding DEP limits – eight at Beechwood Knoll, 11 at Bernazzani, five at Montclair, one at Parker, seven at Wollaston, three at Atlantic, two at Broad Meadows and five at Sterling.

Those sinks have all been clearly labeled "for hand washing only." Neither lead nor copper is absorbed into the skin, so there is no health concern caused by hand washing.

None of the sinks or fountains at the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center or Atherton Hough had concentrations exceeding DEP limits.

Results of the tests on water samples collected at the city's remaining public schools – Lincoln-Hancock, Clifford Marshall, Merrymount, Snug Harbor, Squantum, Central, Point Webster, both high schools and the GOALS building – were not available Tuesday. The superintendent said testing of those water samples could be completed within the next several weeks and would results would be released when available.

DeCristofaro in August announced every fountain and sink in the city's schools would be tested for lead and copper as part of a $2 million state initiative. The samples were collected over several weeks in September and October.

DEP regulations only require communities to test for lead at two school buildings annually, and at two locations in those schools.

While Quincy's water supply does not contain lead, the heavy metal can be found in some buildings because of its use in pipes and solder. The use of lead in plumbing materials was banned in 1986.

Officials anticipated that based on the sample size of the city's program and the age of some buildings that some fixtures would return levels requiring action. That was the goal, said both DeCristofaro and Mayor Thomas Koch.

"The direction from Mayor Koch was to go beyond the testing requirements of the DEP, find all potential issues no matter how small, be transparent, and work toward a water system that is entirely lead-free – not one that just meets testing mandates," the superintendent said.

The DEP considers water with lead concentrations in excess of 15 parts per billion unsafe. Water with copper concentrations in excess of 1.3 parts per million is likewise considered unsafe.

Suzanne Condon, a retired associate commissioner and director of environmental health for the state Department of Public Health, is assisting the city with the sampling program. She said the goal of health officials is always to eliminate any source of lead exposure to children, but noted the action levels are set very low purposely to provide a framework for response not to indicate any immediate threat. Drinking water action levels are based on chronic, long-term exposure.

The most serious exposure route and health concern is children under the age of 6 being exposed to lead paint in their homes, Condon said.

The testing program at the 20 school buildings is part of a wider effort by the city to reduce and eliminate even minimal levels of lead through in the Quincy water system.

In addition to the expanded school testing program, Koch directed the Quincy Water and Sewer Department to more broadly identify residences in the city that may still have lead water service lines – the privately owned pipe that runs from the city system to faucets at homes.

The City Council on Oct. 3 approved Koch's request to spend up to $1.5 million – financed through an interest free loan from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority – to replace the remaining lead service lines in the city next year. Officials believe 141 lead service lines are still in use.

"We've made great progress over the years limiting exposure to lead for young people in our city, but the goal is to be 100 percent lead-free in our water system," Koch said. "That means taking some additional steps, identifying issues, encouraging discussion, and taking action where appropriate."

One of the most common threats we face is identity theft. Just imagine someone stealing your information and pretending to be you. You'd have no control as this person acts in your name, spending money — and possibly, ruining your credit.

Securing today and tomorrow

That's why we've added an extra layer of security for our customers when they interact with us online.

Your my Social Security at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount is a safe and secure place to do business with us.

On July 30, 2016, Social Security implemented a new layer of security, asking account holders to sign into their account using a one-time code sent via text message. This second layer of security requires more than a username and a password is known as "multifactor authentication." Although we have always provided the "extra security" option to account holders, we implemented this new process to comply with the President's Executive Order on Improving the Security of Consumer Financial Transactions.

As before July 30, current account holders will be able to access their secure account using only their username and password. We highly recommend the extra security text message option, but it will not be required. If you are uncomfortable with texting, we will be creating an option where you will receive a code via email.

We strive to balance security and customer service options, and we want to ensure that our online services are both easy to use and secure. The my Social Security service has always featured a robust verification and authentication process, and it remains safe and secure.

There's no requirement that you access your personal my Social Security account as a result of the steps we are taking. However, when you do access your account, we encourage you to sign up for the extra security text message option. You can access your account by visiting www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount.

ELECTION DAY: Tuesday, Nov. 8

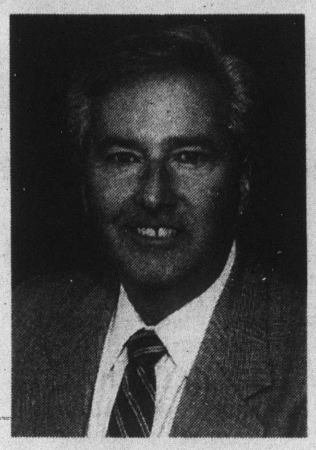
Rep. Ayers - Question 4: The Devil Is In The Details

By BRUCE AYERS
State Representative

When Massachusetts citizens go to the polls on Nov. 8 to cast their votes, perhaps one of the most important questions they will consider is that of the legalization of marijuana.

While Question 4, which would legalize the recreational use of marijuana and implement a tax on its sale, has received some media attention, it has been overshadowed by a contentious presidential election. The fact of the matter is that, due to the language of the ballot initiative itself, too many questions remain – and too many negative implications exist – for residents to cast a "Yes" vote on Question 4.

Following the 2008 decriminalization of marijuana, Massachusetts voters in 2012 approved the legalized use of marijuana for medicinal purposes. While only 8 medical marijuana dispensaries have opened statewide (one of which is located within my legislative district in West Quincy), many more are currently navigating through the approval process.



BRUCE AYERS

In this early stage of medical marijuana implementation, with challenges and unanswered questions remaining in terms of regulation and potential impacts on the surrounding communities, voters should consider the additional burden the sudden and complete legalization of recreational marijuana would cause.

As an example of potential pitfalls, one can simply look to Colorado and the many issues they are facing due to their hasty implementation of legalized marijuana. Since legalizing marijuana 4 years ago, 454 pot stores have opened in the state. The medical marijuana industry exploded too, with 528 dispensaries statewide. They have proven incredibly difficult for Colorado officials to regulate appropriately, and places a great weight on the shoulders of a government first and foremost responsible for providing essential services to residents.

OP ED

In Massachusetts, while medical marijuana dispensaries are thoroughly regulated by the Department of Public Health, they must also adhere to local city and town zoning laws.

Before opening their doors for business, medical marijuana dispensaries have had to go through the same process as any other new business in a municipality: Building and zoning plans must be presented and approved by local officials, traffic impact data must be factored in, and other neighborhood impacts must be weighed.

However, due to the poorly written language of Question 4, existing medical marijuana dispensaries may be able to drastically change their business model to center mainly around the recreational sale of marijuana, without having to present updated plans to local municipalities.

The language proposed in Question 4 also stipulates that the only way to stop a recreational or medicinal marijuana dispensary from opening is by a local ballot referendum. Aside from the exorbitant cost a ballot referendum would present to local taxpayers, this loophole completely eliminates local oversight, and could result in dramatic community impacts and public safety implications, including traffic and infrastructure issues (among many others).

Municipal issues aside, there has been no time to thoroughly study the impacts Question 4 as written would have on the community, particularly those who are most vulnerable. The ambiguous language of the ballot question could allow for the marijuana industry to sell dangerous high-potency marijuana, and could even entice underage residents with edibles like candies and soda. Poison Control reports that just last year, over 4,000 kids were exposed to pot edibles that look like harmless snacks.

Further, with a growing crisis of opiate abuse claiming more lives each year in the Commonwealth, lawmakers already have their hands full trying to address ways to end the epidemic. As most experts agree that marijuana is a gateway drug, especially for young people, we simply don't have enough data on how this language could affect our society.

Whether you are for or against the idea of marijuana legalization, I urge the voters to realize that the language in Question 4 just isn't conducive to the needs and rights of local towns and cities. We have other challenges that need to be addressed first. Now is just not the time, and this ballot question is not the right vehicle. We need to ensure that we get the implementation of medical marijuana right before we begin thinking about burdening our communities with sudden and complete legalization.

Technology Start-Up Founder To Speak At ENC Nov. 30

Dockwa Co-Founder and Chief Revenue Officer Matthew Fradette will be the featured speaker at the next presentation of Eastern Nazarene College's Professional Speaker Series, to be held at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 30 at 180 Old Colony Ave. in Quincy.

The presentation is free and open to the public.

Fradette will discuss "What I learned in launching a technology brand for a global market," drawing on his experience as a sales executive for both Nestle and Hubspot before co-founding Dockwa, which enables boaters to search, reserve, and pay for dockage and moorings through their mobile device while allowing marinas to better manage their reservations.

Sponsored by Eastern Nazarene College's Division of Adult and Graduate Studies, the Professional Speaker Series brings business experts to campus to share their insights with students, alumni, business and community leaders, and the general public.

Prioritize Safety Of Everyone In Quincy

Another pedestrian was killed by a car in Quincy on Oct. 30, the fifth person this year. It is high time we got a better response from the city beyond the facts of the crash, beyond "Was the driver speeding?" and "Was the person who died using a crosswalk?" As citizens we deserve to know more. We deserve to know what the city will do to make our roads safer.

Quincy must start asking hard questions about our engineered environment and follow other communities, including Boston, on a path toward zero traffic fatalities. Our elected officials can begin by implementing and no longer ignoring the road safety improvement recommendations in plans made for and adopted by the city in 2010, 2013, and 2014.

Quincy can implement these low-cost traffic calming measures to help keep driving and non-driving citizens safe from ending up on either side of a similar tragedy – a distraught driver or dead pedestrian.

As a community, let's stop prioritizing level of service for motor vehicles over the lives of our neighbors. Let's prioritize the safety of everyone who moves around our city. Anything less is intolerable.

Pedestrian Struck, Killed In North Quincy

By SCOTT JACKSON

Police are investigating a pedestrian crash that claimed the life of a 61-year-old man late Sunday night in North Quincy, but believe the victim was not in the crosswalk and the driver was not speeding or impaired at the time of the collision.

Officers were called to the intersection of Hancock Street and Hollis Avenue shortly after 10:30 p.m. Sunday for a serious pedestrian crash. Police said the victim, later identified as 61-year-old Lixia Lin of Quincy, was rushed to Boston Medical Center, where he succumbed to his injuries.

Lin was struck by an Acura SUV driven by a 32-year-old woman, police said. The driver's name had not been released, pending the investigation.

The crash remained under investigation by the Quincy Police Department's Crash Reconstruction Unit as of Tuesday morning, according to Capt. John Dougan. No citations against the driver had been issued at that time.

A preliminary investigation, police said, showed Lin had entered the travel lane and was not using a crosswalk or traffic signal. The pedestrian was also wearing dark clothing and visibility was difficult at that time because it was raining.

Police said there were no indications the driver was traveling at excessive speed or was impaired.

Guilty Plea Expected In Death Of Quincy Teacher

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Maine woman who allegedly struck and killed a Quincy schoolteacher in 2015 while drunk driving is expected to plead guilty later this month to several charges, including manslaughter.

The teacher, Emily Zarnoch, was struck and killed by the alleged drunk driver while walking down the road with her boyfriend in York, Maine, on Aug. 4, 2015. Zarnoch was 24 years old.

Zarnoch was a 2009 graduate of North Quincy High School who then attended Framingham State University, graduating in 2014. She had worked at Central Middle School as a substitute teacher prior to her death and was scheduled to begin working as a seventh grade teacher there starting in September 2015.

Carolyn Lee, the driver who allegedly struck Zarnoch while driving a 2010 GMC Yukon, was arrested shortly after the crash on charges of operating under the influence and leaving the scene of a crash with a serious personal injury. A charge of manslaughter was later added.

Lee, a resident of York, Maine, was indicted by a York County grand jury on charges of manslaughter, leaving the scene, operating under the influence and reckless conduct in January. She pleaded not guilty to those charges at her February arraignment and was allowed to remain free on $50,000 bail she had posted last fall, according to Maine media reports.

Lee is expected to plead guilty to those charges on Nov. 17 at 1 p.m. in York County Superior Court in Alfred, Maine. Members of Zarnoch's family and close friends are expected to give victim impact statements following the plea.

Under Maine state law, Lee faces up to 30 years in prison and the permanent loss of her driver's license if convicted on the manslaughter charge.

Quincy Police No-Shave November For ALS Research

In Memory Of Officer Timothy Tobin

Officers with the Quincy Police Department will be putting down their razors this month to raise funds for ALS research.

Each November, Chief Paul Keenan has allowed officers to participate in No-Shave November, letting them grow a beard or a goatee for a $50 donation to a designated charity. This year, the department is raising money for ALS One in memory of Officer Timothy Tobin, who recently lost his battle with the neurodegenerative disease.

Tobin, known to many as "Timmy," was a well-liked patrolman who served for 33 years with the Quincy Police Department; most of that time was spent in Quincy Square. Tobin was an honest police officer, but more importantly he was a devoted family man. He was a caring, loyal professional with a keen wit and sense of humor, who always enjoyed helping others. Tobin retired from the Quincy Police Department on Feb. 2, 2000, and worked numerous jobs for enjoyment after his retirement.

Tobin started experiencing symptoms consistent with ALS in 2014; however, his diagnosis did not come until January 2016. His son, Lt. Det. Kevin Tobin, remembers, "My family went to numerous doctors appointments with my dad, but it was a specialist at Beth Israel Medical Center who ultimately diagnosed him with ALS."

Tobin experienced symptoms of ALS for close to two years, but never complained. He fought a courageous battle with grace and dignity, but on Aug. 13, 2016, Tobin passed away at home surrounded by his family.

"My sister, Terry, my mom, Nina, and I appreciate all the support we received from the Quincy police community, family, and friends following my father's death," Kevin Tobin said.

"We are honored that Chief Keenan has decided to choose ALS One as the recipient for this year's campaign."

Nobel Prize Laureate Inspires High School Students

Dr. Sheldon Lee Glashow: 'Choose A Profession You Will Enjoy And Want To Do'

By TOM GORMAN

Despite Dr. Sheldon Lee Glashow flunking his high school physics course, he went on to become a physicist and ultimately winning the Nobel Prize in Physics.

The 83-year-old Nobel Prize Laureate shared his journey of being a son born to Jewish emigrants from Russia in New York City to becoming a world-renowned physicist with 100 North Quincy High and Quincy High school students in Quincy High's Adams Hall on Oct. 19. Fifty advanced placement chemistry and physics students from each school listened to Glashow speak about his life experiences and asked him questions.

"The most important thing to think about is to choose a profession you will enjoy and want to do," he told the students.

Glashow won the Nobel Prize in physics in 1979, sharing it with Steven Weinberg and Abdus Salam for the discovery of the unifying forces of electromagnetic interactions. Glashow also is credited to be the first to predict a fourth quark in 1964, a type of subatomic particle.

"It was a dream come true and an honor to work in science and be successful in my career," Glashow said.

He explained that he didn't set out to win the Nobel Prize when he began work in electromagnetic theory.

"The worst thing to do is to set out in your career to win the Nobel Prize," said Glashow. "It certainly was not something on my mind until a year or two later."

He became interested in science as a child, telling his father, who was a plumber, that he wanted to be a physicist when he grew up.

Glashow said his father questioned him, "What's that?" and "Do you get paid for that?'"

He said his teachers noticed his interest in science.

"In the sixth grade I was always called upon by the teacher to explain new-fangled things."

Glashow graduated from Bronx High School in 1950 where he failed a physics course in his senior year.

"I didn't really like the teacher," he said. "The only thing I remember about the high school physics class is the name of the author of the book we used."

After high school, Glashow went to Cornell University where he admitted he wasn't the most studious student.

"I spent a lot of time in the game room, playing poker, bridge and ping

Thanksgiving Food Drive Nov. 20 at United Methodist

Each November, Quincy Community United Methodist Church conducts an annual Thanksgivings In-Gathering of Food. This year's in-gathering will be held Sunday, Nov. 20.

"Every year the goal is to fill a parishioner's van full of food," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of the church. "So far, we've succeeded every year."

The in-gathering is in addition to the church's monthly food drives for Interfaith Social Services Food Pantry. Those who would like to contribute to the food drive but cannot bring donations on Sundays can call the church office at 617-773-3319 and arrangements will be made.

Pumpkin Peddle Memorial Bike Ride Nov. 5

The public is invited to take part in the third annual Pumpkin Peddle Bill Roberts Memorial Bike Ride on Saturday, Nov. 5th beginning at 8 a.m. at Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd. in Wollaston.

This fun fundraiser for the church will be 25 miles in length and will tour all nine beaches in Quincy.

A $25 donation is requested for Union Church's General Fund and lunch is included.

For further information or to register call the Church Office at 617-479-6661.

Hope For Quincy Weekend Nov. 11-13

The public is invited to attend Hope For Quincy Weekend, to take place Nov. 11th, 12th and 13th.

The Evangelical Clergy Association of Quincy will offer three worship services; Friday at 2 p.m. on Wollaston Beach between the Yacht Clubs; Saturday at 6:30 p.m. at Atlantic Middle School and Sunday at 5 p.m. at Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd. in Quincy.

For further information contact Martha Swanson at 617-894-2577 or John Culp at 617-471-6806.

United Methodist Church Holiday Craft Fair Dec. 3

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold a holiday craft fair Saturday, Dec. 3 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Vendors will offer a variety of items, and a homemade luncheon featuring hot dogs will be available.

Tables are $30 each. Call 617-773-3319 to reserve a table.

The church building is handicapped accessible at the front doors nearest the flag pole.

Nobel Prize Laureate Inspires Students pong," he said.

Glashow graduated from Cornell with a bachelor's in science and went to Harvard University where he received his doctorate in physics. He later became an associate professor at the University of California at Berkeley and joined the physics department at Harvard in 1966 and became an emeritus there in 2000. Glashow is now a professor of math and physics at Boston University.

He said he learned much from fellow physicists, particularly Weinberg, whom he graduated with from Bronx High School. Glashow explained how he worked on his Nobel winning thesis while in Copenhagen, Denmark on a post-graduate scholarship from the National Science Foundation.

After winning the Nobel, he went to teach at Harvard, retired from there and went to Boston University to continue his research in particle physics.

Glashow fielded several questions from the students, including how his Nobel winning theory was derived.

"I had the right advisor in grad school," said Glashow. "That person played a key role."

He explained how he wrote a paper in 1960 that he had forgotten about that provided a base for developing his theory.

"By the mid-1970s, the things we had done started to be accepted by others and we knew it was important," Glashow said. "In 1979, the Swedes agreed."

Another student questioned how winning the Nobel changed his life.

"All of a sudden, I was invited to all matters of things," Glashow answered. "The Nobel is the gift that keeps on giving. It has responsibilities. You're asked to express your views on things."

He noted that he joined 60 other American Nobel Laureates in signing a document supporting Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton.

"Supporting (Republican candidate Donald) Trump from a science viewpoint would be a disaster," said Glashow.

In January, Glashow said he will be traveling to Vienna Austria to address climate change and will also speak in Indonesia and Thailand about his research.

Glashow was also questioned about how to deal with failure - "Deal with it." His thoughts about the benefits of space travel - "Don't see the point of going to the moon again to make tracks in the dust." What area of science to study – "I would go into biology. Science is moving rapidly in that direction." And, the best book to read – The Greatest Story Ever Told by Lawrence Crouse. It's about the history of matter."

Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said the students will have an opportunity to ask Glashow additional questions as a follow-up to his visit through Skyping with him at his BU office.

"There's always a follow-up," he said.

The superintendent noted that another Nobel Laureate will be coming to meet high school students in February or March to coincide with the science fairs.

"We try to have two (Nobel Laureates) a year," he said

Glashow's visit was provided by the Nobel Laureates School Visits of North Quincy. The non-profit organization was founded by Russian-American scientist and inventor Dr. Edward Shapiro.

"We have 200 laureates coming from all over the world," Shapiro said. "We crisscross the United States, going from California, to Massachusetts and Hawaii."

He noted that the program is not all about the Nobel Prize, but to provide a takeaway for students to be curious and embrace things that interest them.

"We bring the laureates as role models to local public and inner-city schools to inspire young people," Shapiro said. "Most of the laureates come from low-income, or inner-city families or refugees. Dr. Glashow is one of these. His parents came as refugees to the US."

After the program, North Quincy High School senior Ziwei Hu, who is planning to study computer science, said she found Glashow's presentation inspiring.

"He has a wealth of knowledge in the area he studied," she said.

School Bus Driver Cited In Crash

By SCOTT JACKSON

A Quincy school bus driver has been cited following a crash that sent five students to the hospital.

The Quincy Police Department on Monday announced the bus driver, Mark Woods, has been cited for negligent operation and a marked lanes violation following an investigation by the Crash Reconstruction Unit.

Negligent operation, police said, carries a criminal penalty of up to two years in jail and/or up to a $200 fine, plus $250 to the state's head injury fund; it can also carry a 60-day license suspension. A marked lanes violation carries a $105 fine.

Police Capt. John Dougan said Woods did not seem to be impaired, but the department is still awaiting the results of blood tests.

School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro on Monday said Woods was placed on paid administrative leave following the crash pending the investigation. He said Woods would remain on paid administrative leave until after school officials reviewed findings from Quincy and State Police and the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

A message left for the superintendent Tuesday was not returned before The Sun went to press for the week.

The bus crashed on Quarry Street near the intersection of Kidder Street around 11:45 a.m. on Oct. 25, an early release day for the city's elementary schools. On board were 32 students from the Charles A. Bernazzani School, according to Quincy police.

Five of those students were taken to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth, and Woods was taken to Quincy

STUDENTS AND FAMILIES of Quincy Catholic Academy participated in a "gently used" coat drive during October to benefit the St. Francis House, a homeless shelter in Boston, and Cradles to Crayons, serving homeless children. Olivia Bailey (above), a sixth grade student, came up with the original idea for the drive. She realized there were probably many adults and children who need winter coats. More than 100 coats were collected.

"I said it to Mr. McCullough and I will repeat it publicly: He truly has been the inspiration for this city to reclaim our place in our nation's history."

Students from the city's three high schools also spoke during the ceremony,

Dashiell Chin, a student at Quincy High, said Adams was an advocate for justice, democracy and national strength.

"As an educated and principled man, Adams was an advocate for justice, democracy and national strength. To demonstrate justice, he ensured our enemies received a fair trial by courageously defending them himself. He demonstrated that fairness and equality must be upheld under the law," Chin said.

"During his presidency, Adams showcased our national strength by refusing to pay bribes…Adams showed that as people we must take pride in and responsibility for our country."

Curtis DeBiscchop, a North Quincy High student and member of the United First Parish Church, recalled visiting the Adams crypt inside the church each Sunday following worship service.

"To my family, weekly visits to the Adams family crypt were normal, simply part of the routine pattern of daily living; however, as my worldview extended, my knowledge of U.S. history grew deeper and more intimate," DeBiscchop said.

"I began to realize this first-hand connection to our nation's history was not [routine]. Knowing that John Adams and his family lived in my hometown, it became an event that was truly special."

Destiny Joseph, who attends the Woodward School, said Adams represents the ideals that make Americans, Americans.

"The contributions of President Adams are unique and exceptional. He is a founder of our democracy and a writer of our constitution. To read his words and understand what he believed is inspiring. He represents the ideals that make us Americans," Joseph said.

"We're here because of thinking and actions of John Adams and others over 200 years ago, which is pretty amazing. It took great effort and courage to make our country."

Douglas Adams, a descendant of John and Abigail, highlighted the history of Peace field. John Adams purchased the property, which includes the Old House, in 1787 and the family remained there until 1929. It was donated to the National Park Service in 1946 and is now part of the Adams National Historical Park.

The property, Douglas Adams explained, was named Peace field in part to recognize John Adams' work in ending the Revolutionary War with the 1783 Treaty of Paris.

"In 1796, John wrote of the house down the road, 'I think to christen my place by the name of Peace field in commemoration of the peace which I assisted in making in 1783, of the 13 years of peace and neutrality which I've contributed to preserve, and of the constant peace and tranquility which I've enjoyed in this residence,'" Douglas Adams stated.

Douglas Adams also touted his ancestor's work in writing the Massachusetts Constitution, which would serve as an inspiration for the U.S. Constitution and is the world's oldest written constitution still in effect.

"John had written a constitution or form of government for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts – in two months – in September and October of 1779 when he had briefly returned from Europe. It's the oldest active constitution in the world," he said.

"It was John's experience in England and Holland the further informed his conviction of the need for a strong, elected executive – a principle the world had not known without an aristocracy. An important issue was orderly succession by election."

Rose Fennell, the National Park Service's deputy regional director for the Northeast region, called the United First Parish Church an anchor of the community.

"This granite Alexander Parris edifice represents the strength of John Adams' appeal to his fellow Americans to arm themselves intellectually – 'let us tenderly and kindly cherish therefore the needs of knowledge," Fennell said.

"This is the anchor of this historic community, it is the centerpiece for the Adams Hancock Green, and has a legacy all of its own."

Other speakers at the ceremony included H. Kirtland Switzer II, the chair of historic preservation for the church, who said the annual wreath laying – now in its 49th year – has become increasingly important.

The Rev. Rebecca Froom, the church's minister, delivered both the invocation and benediction. She asked that those present consider how they too could create communities of peace, liberty and equality for all, like Adams did.

William Westland, the church's historian, relayed the history of the wreath-laying ceremonies. The ceremonies, which began in 1967, were low key at first and the public was not invited in until 1993. Bob Damon, director of the history and visitors program at the church, talked about what commemorations mean.

Jim Cooke, portraying John Quincy Adams, read a sonnet the sixth president wrote following the death of his father.

ua Rhode, sang a musical interlude. The Navy Band Northeast, based in Newport, performed the musical prelude and organist Norman Corey the postlude.

Sailors with the Navy Operational Support Center Quincy – led by Commander Paul Annexstad, who was representing President Barack Obama – placed the wreath on John Adams' tomb. In a first this year, the wreath, created by Clifford's Flowers, was on display at other historic buildings – including the Adams National Historical Park, City Hall and the Crane Library – in the week leading up to the ceremony inside the church.

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY performed a musical interlude led by Conductor Joshua Rhode in the 281st birthday anniversary of John Adams last Friday at United First Parish Church and led the guests in the singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

Student Speakers Remember President John Adams

By DESTINY JOSEPH
The Woodward School

I am honored to speak today to remember President John Adams in this historic place. Thank you Reverend Froom and Mr. Damon for the invitation to The Woodward School. My senior class is here with me and I am proud to be representing them and Woodward today.

The Woodward School, the First Parish Church, and President John Adams all share an ongoing story. Woodward's Founders, Dr. Ebenezer Woodward and his wife Mary Greenleaf, were cousins to the Adams, and Dr. Woodward was a leading physician in Quincy, until his death in 1869. Both families were members of this congregation, and they shared a belief in broad and serious educational opportunities for all American citizens.

In May, I will graduate with The Woodward School Class of 2017 from this Church, our school tradition. My Mother and Aunt are also graduates of Woodward. So, I am able to say that for two generations, members of my family have been direct beneficiaries of the vision and generosity of the Adams and Woodward families, and we are grateful.

When we honor President John Adams today, we also honor the strongest, common bonds we have together as Americans. The contributions of President Adams are unique and exceptional. He was a Founder of our democracy, and a writer of our Constitution. To read his words and understand what he believed and worked to put into place, is inspiring. As we look back to remember him, he represents the ideals that make us Americans.

I think most people would agree that the United States is a nation that inspires people. We are a nation of immigrants who come here for the promise and the values of America. And we are here because of the thinking and actions of John Adams and others, over 200 years ago, which is pretty amazing.

It did take great effort and courage to make our country. John Adams described The Constitutional Convention describing it this way: "The deliberate union of so great and various a people in such a place, is, without all partiality or prejudice, if not the greatest exertion of human understanding, then the greatest single effort of national deliberation that the world has ever seen."

And we have the result – our freedoms and rights. Although we don't wake up every morning thinking about it first thing, maybe we should, because the constitutional government our Founders created for us may be the most important thing in our lives. Everything else comes from it.

The confidence we have that we are free, and that we have rights, is built into us in a way that not everyone around the world can understand, because they have not experienced life in a country with constitutional protections, the way I have since the day I was born.

Though it may seem as if we are all divided and arguing in America, we have in common that we stand up and speak. Even while we disagree, what we all feel exactly the same about, is a government of laws and not men, where we can say: I am exercising my first amendment rights, and all my other constitutional rights and protections. It's not nothing to be able to say that.

Our Founders looked into the future, thinking of us to come. It is only right for us to look back at them. In his writings, President Adams seems to have anticipated the questions we might have. To read his thoughts is to be re-inspired, and also warned not to squander the gift and privilege of American citizenship and democracy.

When he wrote about our founding, he said, "I will hazard a prediction that, after the most industrious and impartial researches, the longest liver of you will find no principles, institutions or systems of education more fit in general, to be transmitted to your posterity, than those you have received from your ancestors."

As we celebrate the birthday of John Adams today, we are given the opportunity to reflect on his accomplishments. Before, during, and after the Revolutionary War, John Adams played a pivotal role in the formation of our country. Through his writings and rigorous political actions, he is one of our most important Founding Fathers.

While many of us know the stories of famous presidents influencing the United States in their own time, it is important that we recognize how these presidents' values, policies and ideas continue to impact us as a community, state and nation. Though they may be long gone, presidents leave a lasting and visible legacy.

President Adams' actions and writings reflect issues from hundreds of years ago, yet we can see how his ideas still apply to our institutions today. In our community of Quincy, the influence of John Adams is celebrated throughout the City with monuments and dedications, however, we also honor him in the decisions we make at all levels of government. John Adams penned our Massachusetts State Constitution which is the world's oldest functioning written constitution. His writings served as the model for our revered national Constitution.

As an educated and principled man, Adams was an advocate for justice, democracy and national strength. To demonstrate justice he insured that our enemies received a fair trial by courageously defending them himself. He demonstrated that fairness and equality must be upheld under the law, and most certainly before our own self interests.

During his presidency, Adams showcased our national strength by refusing to pay bribes. For a new country, rejecting the notion that the United States should ever appease the unreasonable was quite brave. Adams showed that as a people we must take pride in, and responsibility for, our country.

While considering the current presidential election, we must particularly value Adams' important precedent in leaving office during our nation's first and historical peaceful transition of power. The world was shocked that America's experiment with democracy was here to stay. All presidents and candidates have since followed Adams' example, and hopefully will continue to do so.

As a nation we have used Adams' ideas as our standard. Whether we know it or not, as citizens of Quincy, Massachusetts, and the United States, we constantly emulate both his actions and his principles. It is, therefore, fitting that we celebrate the presidents of the past, and in particular, our hometown hero, John Adams.

In closing, President Adams said, "Posterity! You will never know how much it cost the present generation to preserve your freedom! I hope you will make good use of it." President Adams, 240 years later, as we celebrate your birthday, know that posterity thanks you!

Since a young age, I have attended the United First Parish Church for Sunday worship services with my family. As a member of this beautiful church, I have always been aware of the importance of our church's history, but it was not until I began to grow older and more mature that I truly began to understand its significance.

Nearly every Sunday, my friends and I would visit the Adams Family Crypt to pay our respects and look with awe at the well-kept, beautiful granite tombs of John Adams, Abigail Adams, John Quincy Adams, and Louisa Catherine Adams. We were continually told how lucky we were to be surrounded by this national history, but at the time this message did not fully resonate. After all, to my friends, my family, and I, weekly visits to the Adams Family Crypt were normal; simply part of the routine pattern of daily living.

However, as my world view expanded and my knowledge of U.S. history grew deeper and more intimate, I began to realize that this first hand connection to our nation's history is not available to everyone. Knowing that John Adams and his family lived here in my hometown, he came alive to me in a way that was truly special and unique.

John Adams was an incredibly special person for his outstanding values and civic virtue. He was brave enough to risk his life and reputation in defense of liberty and the fair treatment of all. He truly is an amazing role model for us to emulate in the 21st century.

In order to fully appreciate the historical significance and national importance of presidential final resting places, such as the Adams Family Crypt, we must first start with the respect and preservation of these resting places. Fifty years ago, President Lyndon B. Johnson created the Presidential Wreath laying program for this very reason.

Following this tradition, the beautiful condition of the Adams Family Crypt is not only treated with respect and admiration, but the amazing lives and accomplishments of both of these presidents and their first ladies are remembered. It makes me incredibly proud to see our city's Mayor, members of the Massachusetts' state government, citizens of Quincy, my minister, and many others come together for the common goal of showing their appreciation and respect for our nation's presidents and their wives.

By placing a wreath upon the tombs of John Adams, Abigail Adams, John Quincy Adams, and Louisa Catherine Adams, our nation, our state, and our city are brought together in order to pay our respect towards these historic American figures. This tradition creates a connection to not only our city's history, but to that of our nation.

I am incredibly proud to live in this historic city and to be able to experience this wonderful tradition.

By DESTINY JOSEPH - The Woodward School

He sounds proud of what they created and he did not take these achievements for granted. He believed that "Children should be educated and instructed in the principles of freedom."; and that educated citizens were necessary to preserve our democracy. And he warned that we must protect it, writing in a letter: "Liberty once lost, is lost forever."

He seemed to speak directly to us into the future, when he wrote: "Posterity! You will never know how much it cost the present generation to preserve your Freedom. I hope you make good use of it. If you do not, I shall repent in heaven, that I ever took half the pains to preserve it."

So, I am honored to remember and thank President John Adams for imagining and creating the system that is our incredible, wonderful, country. With all of our problems and disagreements, we live within the enormous freedom and energy that is the United States, a nation of passionately engaged citizens.

When we stop to look back, remember, and listen to the words of our Founders, I think it becomes impossible to ignore how precious it is, for us and for future generations. I hope we can live up to President Adams' great expectations, educating ourselves to understand, appreciate and preserve our freedom, and to make good use of it, as he hoped and dreamed we would.

Thank you President Adams, and thank you everyone here today.

A Fence to Freedom

Transformation of the White Picket Fence

The white picket fence that shows its appreciation for the veterans.

This 4th of July the First Church of Squantum's Pastor's wife, Cynthia Gray, transformed their white picket fence into a display in thanks for our veterans. What an awesome way to thank our veterans, such a nice gesture from the Gray Family.

Mrs. Gray painted the white fence into a flag with red, white, and blue paint. Veterans signed the fence so that people who passed the house could see who served and thank them for their service.

With Veteran's Day coming up I thought it would be nice to let the veterans know about this so they could feel appreciated. If you see a veteran please thank them. It's not just Veterans Day that you should thank them but any day you see a veteran go up to them and just say, "Thank you for your service."

Happy Veteran's Day!

Tom Larsen Named Manet COO

Manet Community Health Center has hired Tom Larsen, of Franklin, as chief operating officer. Larsen will oversee operations for Manet's five practice locations in Quincy, Hull and Taunton.

Larsen comes to Manet after serving in central positions at health care organizations in Massachusetts and Florida, including Hallmark Health System, CharterCARE Health Partners, Baptist Health South Florida, Children's Hospital Boston and Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. He became familiar with Manet during his tenure as Executive Director of Operations at Quincy Medical Center.

"Tom is a strategic thinker, a dedicated practice developer, and a team builder," says Cynthia Sierra, Manet's chief executive officer. "He has demonstrated a keen ability to nurture collaborative relationships to better lead and reinforce high-performing operations. We are so pleased that Tom will bring this experience, vision and passion to his new role as Manet COO."

With experience in settings that include multi-site ambulatory clinics, large academic medical centers and community hospitals, Larsen has successfully planned, evaluated and managed daily operations in primary care, pediatrics and behavioral health, as well as specialty, laboratory, rehabilitation and imaging services. He has helped increase patient/family satisfaction to over 90 percent in multiple locations and he has designed and implemented programs for provider retention and mentorship of emerging leaders.

Larsen earned a master's degree in Healthcare Administration at Suffolk University Sawyer School of Management and his undergraduate degree from the University of Tampa.

QNQ Cross Country Sweeps Silver Lake

More Local Sports Page 31 - 36

Whatever miscues and flatness troubled the Quincy-North Quincy cross country team at Hanover, racing over the 2.5 mile Pageant Field course was just what the doctor ordered.

All the girls clocked season bests and a majority of the boys did so in doubling up the Laker girls 20-35 and the boys 24-31. Abby Murphy led wire-to-wire increasing her Quincy High School record for the Pageant course 15:51, the first time she's dipped under the 16 minute barrier.

Devin Hiltunen was 3rd in 16:52 her first time under 17 mins. Kara Polsgrove was just over in 17:01 good for 5th, Olivia Palazzi and Mairead Kelly were 7-8 to close out the scoring. Other finishers were Eve Anderson 11th, Emily Vu 13th and Kayla Vu 16th.

On the boys side Jimmy Cannon dominated cruising to a 13:26 but the real story was Aidan Golden whose 14:37 was a PR and more importantly grabbed 2nd place and secured victory. Ryan Polsgrove was 5th, Kevin White 6th, Nick Ouellette was 11th and Dakota Pendleton 12th. Other finishers were Alex Ouellette 16, Brian O'Connell 17, Braeden Kopp 18, Tyler Carey 19, Ryan Mahoney 29, Eric Mei 30, Ty Kehoe 34, Eric Manter 35 and Kevin Mortimer 36.

The boys finished up their dual meet season at 2-6, while the girls were 3-5. Two of those losses were by one point.

At the league meet QNQ's top runners did themselves proud. Abby Murphy finished 5th for girls. Jimmy Cannon was 2nd for boys. Scoring wise the girls finished 6th while the boys finished 7th.

Free Dental Exams, Cleanings For Veterans

In honor of Veterans Day, Quincy dentist Dr. Steven A. Brustin, is offering free dental exams and cleanings to Quincy veterans during the month of November.

In order to take advantage of this offer, veterans must call Dr. Brustin's office, 44 Greenleaf St., Quincy at 617-479-6220 and make an individual appointment.

Dr. Brustin is a Quincy native and alumni of the Morrisette American Legion Baseball program.

Homebuyers Workshop Nov. 8, Nov. 10

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. will offer a two-part workshop for first-time homebuyers, to be held from 5 to 9 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 8 and Thursday, Nov. 10 at the Winter Gardens apartment complex (lower level community room), located at 45 Winter St. in Quincy.

Sponsored by MountainOne Bank, the workshop will give participants an opportunity to meet and hear from real estate brokers, insurance agents, attorneys and loan originators. Attendees also will have an opportunity to learn about the South Shore Home Consortium's down payment assistance programs, which may provide qualified buyers with up to 9 percent of the purchase price toward their down payment and up to an additional 1 percent toward closing costs on homes purchased in Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Holbrook or Milton. Workshop participants will also be able to speak to a lender about different mortgage options.

The registration fee for the workshops is $20 per person. To register and pay online, visit www.nwsoma.org or call (617) 770-2227 x34 for more information.

National Grid Reminds Customers About CO, Fire Safety

Change Clocks, Change CO/Smoke Alarm Batteries

Heating season has arrived. This coming weekend, we'll "fall back" by turning our clocks back one hour. While we enjoy an extra hour of hard-earned sleep, it is also an ideal time to change the batteries in our carbon monoxide and smoke alarms.

"The safety of our customers is the top priority for National Grid," said Marcy Reed, president of National Grid in Massachusetts. "Take proper safety precautions now to make sure you and your family are safe from the potentially deadly effects of carbon monoxide poisoning."

Carbon monoxide (CO) is an invisible, odorless gas that can be deadly if left undetected. When fuels such as natural gas, butane, propane, wood, coal, heating oil, kerosene, and gasoline don't burn completely, they can release carbon monoxide into the air. Common sources of carbon monoxide include malfunctioning forced-air furnaces, kerosene space heaters, natural gas ranges, wood stoves, water heaters, fireplaces and motor vehicle engines. The symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning are similar to those of the flu. Depending on the amount of carbon monoxide in the air and length of exposure, symptoms may include headaches, weakness, confusion, chest tightness, skin redness, dizziness, nausea, sleepiness, fluttering of the heart or loss of muscle control.

If you suspect carbon monoxide is present in your home, go outside immediately. Next, call National Grid's gas emergency contact number 800-233-5325 for Massachusetts, or call 911. Do not return to your home until the carbon monoxide source is found.

National Grid shares the following safety reminders with its customers to help identify and prevent carbon monoxide poisoning:

- Install Underwriters Laboratory (UL) approved home carbon monoxide detectors on every floor of your home. Follow the manufacturer's instructions for placement and mounting height.
- Check chimneys or flues for debris, bird nests or other blockages, and have them cleaned periodically.
- Be sure space heaters and wood stoves are in good condition, have adequate ventilation and are used in strict compliance with the manufacturer's instructions.
- Never use a gas range for heating or burn coal or charcoal in an enclosed space.
- Never cover slots or holes in the bottom of the oven with spill pans or foil, which can block airflow in the oven.
- If you use a back-up generator to supply power during an outage, be sure to operate it outdoors.
- Know that open windows do not provide sufficient ventilation to safely operate a generator indoors.

National Grid will respond immediately to all carbon-monoxide related calls for all natural gas customers within its service area – even if you purchase natural gas from an alternative gas supplier or marketer. However, please always call 911.

More ways to practice safety in the home:

- Confirm that you have working smoke detectors in every bedroom to ensure you "hear the beep where you sleep" in the event of a fire. Spring into action and replace the batteries. Click here for more information about smoke alarm safety.
- Inspect fire extinguishers at least once a month, ensure that: the extinguisher is not blocked by equipment, coats or other objects that could interfere with access in an emergency; the pressure is at the recommended level; the nozzle or other parts are not hindered in any way; the pin and tamper seal (if it has one) are intact; and there are no dents, leaks, rust, chemical deposits and/or other signs of abuse/wear. If you don't currently have a fire extinguisher, get one. Base your selection on the classification and the extinguisher's compatibility with the items you wish to protect.
- If you smell gas, (the odor is similar to rotten eggs), make sure everyone in the home leaves immediately. Once you're safe, call National Grid at 800-233-5325 for Massachusetts or 911 right away. Don't light a match or smoke, turn appliances on or off (including flashlights), use a telephone or start a car. Doing so can produce sparks that might cause the gas to ignite. Remember: Smell gas. Act fast.
- Always dial 811 two to ten days before digging or excavating on your property. After you call, utility companies will mark the approximate locations of their lines at no charge to you. Whether you're planting a shrub or installing a deck, every job requires a call to 811 – it's the law.

Registry Of Deeds Reform Legislation Passes Through House

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell announces the Massachusetts House of Representatives has passed reform legislation to alleviate a growing problem for Registries across the Commonwealth when it comes to storing land court documents.

The legislation (H.3862) now moves to the Senate Ways and Means committee for their consideration.

O'Donnell said the bill will save a great deal of money and make documents more readily accessible to the public by removing the requirement that all registered land documents must be filed in hard copy in the Land Court, which the Registries of Deeds oversees.

"The collection of land related documents such as deeds, homesteads, mortgages, mortgage releases and Declarations of Trust on the Land Court side have been piling up for decades after decades." O'Donnell said. "Today, we have more than 1.3 million land-related documents just on our Land Court side. Other registries of deeds are facings similar situations."

"Under this proposed legislation," O'Donnell continued, "these documents can now be scanned and microfilmed with the originals being sent back to the landowner or their designee. In addition, this administrative reform will no longer require registries to look for additional leasing space or require the purchase of a bigger building to store these ever increasing documents. It's a win-win situation for the Registry of Deeds, it's customers and the taxpayers."

O'Donnell said he is hopeful that the legislation will be reported favorably by the Senate Ways and Means committee and approved by the full State Senate given that it has approximately 50 legislative co-sponsors and no apparent opposition.

"I want to thank Rep. Bruce Ayers and Rep. Tackey Chan for their co-sponsorship and hard work in the passage of this bill. I also want to thank Sen. John Keenan for his co-sponsorship of the bill. Having the legislation before the Senate is hopefully a major step to its passage into law," O'Donnell said.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday, Oct. 19, at approximately 11:10 a.m., Officers Michael Dougan, Paul Jackson, Paul Holland and Dan Parisi were dispatched to 40 Nelson St. for a disorder. Due to the history of incidents at this building, four officers responded to the "911" call.

Upon arrival, Officer Dougan located a female he was familiar with from previous calls, sitting on the front porch speaking with Detective Pieper, who was in area and responded. The female is well known to the police as is her boyfriend (father of her child) who had four outstanding warrants.

The female said that her boyfriend showed up at her apartment looking for $75 and she told him that she would not give him any money. The female said that she could tell by the look in his eyes that he was going to do harm to her. She attempted to exit the apartment but her boyfriend pushed her back in twice. He then grabbed her by the throat with both his hands and threw her down to the ground. She attempted to get by him once more but he jumped on top of her and began to "choke" her. She said that he put both hands around her neck and started squeezing, to the point she was gasping to take a breath and that her eyes began to roll back into her head.

Officer Dougan could see slightly pink marks around her neck and a red abrasion on her right shoulder which she stated was from when she was on the ground while he was choking her. When he stopped choking her and got up, he took her cell phones and went inside the apartment. She ran to another apartment and called 911. Detective Pieper, first on scene, said he never saw the boyfriend, only the caller/victim visibly disturbed and crying. A search of the building was conducted but there was no sign of the boyfriend.

LT. DAN MINTON

Additional Officers, including State Police Officers, arrived on scene to search for the boyfriend. After advising the victim of her rights to get a restraining order, Officer Dougan then joined in the search for the boyfriend. At approximately 12:20 p.m., State Police Sergeant Sementelli located the boyfriend in the woods near the parking lot of the Avalon apartments at 229 Quarry St. He was placed under arrest and a quick body search revealed seven phones in his pants pockets, including one which was the victim's phone. The boyfriend was transported into the police station for processing by Officer Holland.

Once at the station, Officer Holland called for assistance because the boyfriend was attempting to kick out the cruiser window. He continued being combative in the lock up area. Once he was led to the cellblock, the boyfriend started kicking and punching at the Officers, resulting in one Officer injuring his hand. The 34 year-old South Boston resident is being charged with kidnapping, unarmed robbery, strangulation, assault and battery on a police officer, witness intimidation, domestic assault and battery on household member and the four outstanding warrants.

Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE

On Friday, Oct. 21, at approximately 8:25 p.m., Communication Operator Felicia Lawless received a frantic call from a woman stating that her boyfriend is diabetic and losing conscientiousness. She told the operator that she was talking to him on his cell phone and he sounded strange. She didn't know where he was but was concerned that his condition could worsen.

Operator Lawless was able to "ping" the boyfriend's cell phone number off the Ricciuti Drive tower which showed that the phone was in the general area. Numerous police units were dispatched to the area. Operator Lawless called the boyfriend's cell phone and he answered, however, he was incoherent and couldn't state where he was. A description of the boyfriend's vehicle was given out to all units.

Sergeant Joseph Lencki was checking the Blue Hills and located the boyfriend in his vehicle at the Chickatobut Overlook. The sergeant immediately called for an ambulance and the boyfriend was taken to the hospital for treatment. Nice Work!

Quincy Downs North In Another 5-Game Thriller

Both Squads Tourney Bound

By TOM JOYCE

Two of the better girls volleyball programs in the state are in Quincy.

So when the North Quincy Red Raiders (12-5) traveled south to take on the Quincy Presidents (17-2) at Quincy High School Oct. 27, the expectation was that it would be a hard-fought match. And the two squads did not disappoint.

At times, the Presidents were dominant. At others, the Red Raiders could not be stopped. Ultimately though, the Presidents came away with a tight 3-2 win (25-14, 19-25, 25-23, 17-25, 15-12) over their crosstown foes.

In the first set, the Presidents jumped out to a 5-1 lead and while the Red Raiders would fight to make it 13-9, the Presidents took an 11-2 run, giving themselves a 24-11 advantage. After giving up three points, the Presidents finished the set on top, 25-14.

The Red Raiders would retaliate, however, going up 13-8 on the second set. Their edge forced a Presidents timeout. The timeout was moot though as the rest of the set was essentially a stalemate, so the Red Raiders won it 25-19.

A 10-2 start for the Presidents in the next set was vanquished when the Red Raiders went on a 10-2 run themselves, tying the set at 12 apiece. In response, the Presidents called a timeout. The Presidents fell behind again, 19-17, before tying it up at 21 apiece. And with the set tied at 23 all, the Presidents scored a quick two points to win it, 25-23.

Albeit the Presidents had the edge, the Red Raiders still fought. They found an early edge in the fourth set, up 5-2. Still battling, they forced the Presidents to call a timeout when they made it 16-11. They forced another timeout when they made it 20-13. But the timeouts could not stop the Red Raiders from taking the set, 25-17.

With the match tied, the Presidents began finding separation in the final set as they open it up on a 7-0 run. Albeit the Red Raiders were competitive following following the deficit, they were not able to come back. And the Presidents topped them, 15-12, to take the win.

"We were able to come back from a deficit a couple times," Red Raiders head coach Kerry Ginty said. "We were able to close things out when we needed to. Quincy is a really good team. This time of year, it's great to have this kind of competition right in our backyard."

"We knew coming in it would be a great game," she added. "It always is when you play Quincy with such a heated rivalry. These girls play with each other all year

GETTING OUT OF TIGHT SPOTS

Runners are notorious for having tight muscles, particularly their glutes, hamstrings, inner thighs, and hip flexors. The reason for this is that these muscles are not being stretched during the running motion. Moreover, because running is a repetitive motion that utilizes the same muscles in the same way over and over, these muscles become increasingly tight. The good news is that increasing their flexibility counteracts that tension and helps runners improve their stride and protect against injury. Otherwise, when one muscle group is tight and an opposing muscle group is flexible, it can lead to muscle imbalances and joint pain. Regular chiropractic treatment can help runners avoid these imbalances, as well as address factors that compromise performance and endurance.

If you are already suffering from a running injury, chiropractic is a wonderful non-drug alternative to helping you get rid of pain while working towards correcting the problem and improving your running form. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we focus on improving your overall health and wellness in order to reduce the risk of injury and illness and avoid disease. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Please call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. Chiropractic works! We offer computerized spinal scans.

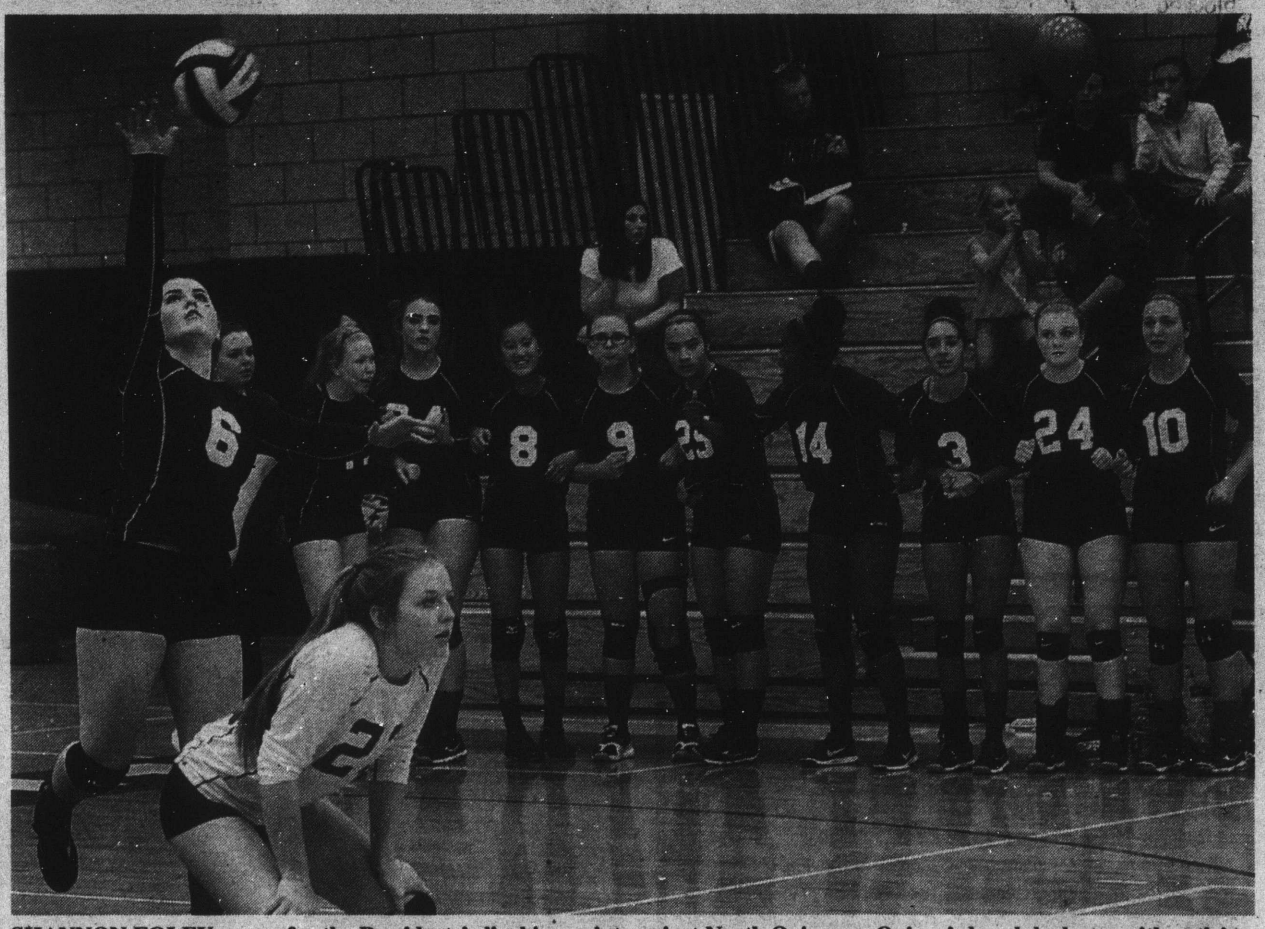
long. A lot of them compete against each other and with each other with club and different sports and all that. There's a big rivalry. But there's a lot of love too. It was a great atmosphere and a really competitive game."

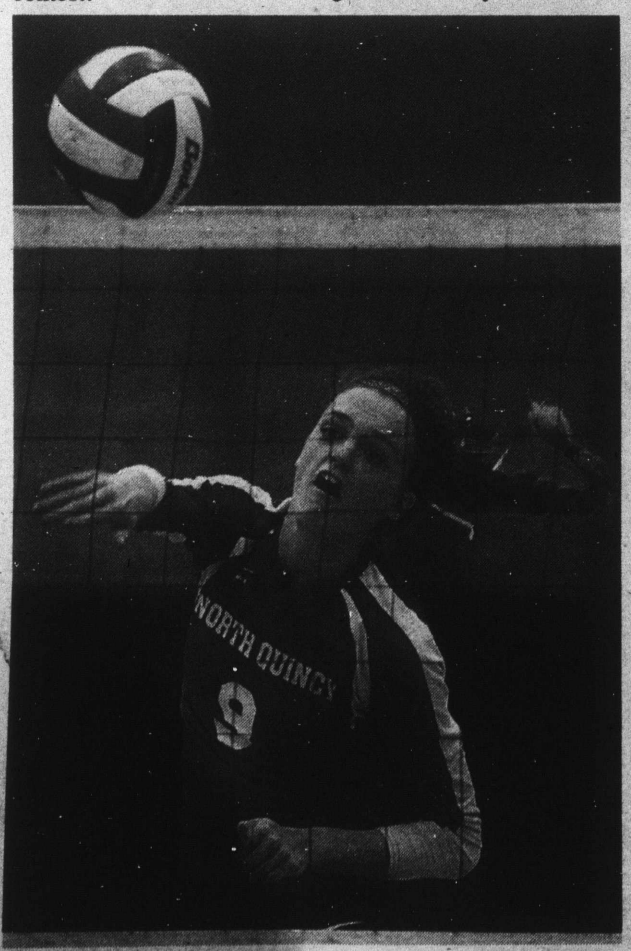
Presidents head coach Jacqui Niosi said she was impressed with the way her team played, especially given the atmosphere of the contest.

"The feel is so different than any other game," she said. "That's like a tournament game. And you can't replicate that."

"This is the biggest crowd we always get," she added. "They've grown up playing together and I think that's why it always goes back and forth: we know each other inside out. But it was hard-fought on both sides. North (Quincy) played a fantastic game, so I'd say we were really lucky to win today."



SHANNON FOLEY serves for the Presidents' clinching point against North Quincy as Quincy's bench looks on with anticipation. Foley led the Presidents with 14 points serving in Quincy's 3-2 win over North Oct. 27. Ready for the serve is teammate Reagan Hutchins (foreground).



LEADING THE Red Raiders' scoring was Isabelle Flaherty who contributed 20 digs, 10 kills and nine points against Quincy.

For the Presidents, Jessie Lei shined with 29 kills and 19 digs. Hillary Valenzuela added 19 kills and 11 digs. Shannon Foley, who led the team with 14 points serving, had 15 digs and seven kills. Reagan Hutchens was second with 13 serving points. She also had a team-leading six aces. Danielle Perry also had a strong serving performance with 11 points and eight digs on defense. Jackie Ryan had eight digs while Camryn Burgio added seven digs and 11 kills.

They did not have many blocks, but that is not a big part of their strategy.

"We're scrappy," Niosi said. "We're not that tall. If we're going to beat someone, it's playing defense and hitting spots. You need a lot of people to do that. Even when our bench was loud, calling balls in and out, that's when we were doing better."

For the Red Raiders, Isabelle Flaherty led the effort, nearly posting a triple-double with 20 digs, 10 kills and nine points serving. Sharon Yiang finished second on the team with 14 digs. Kaleigh Manton had a team-best 16 assists and Samantha Caldwell, who also had 10 serving points, was second on the team with 12 assists. Rebecca Thorne had 13 block assists and Jennifer Butka added another 10. Remy Aucoin had seven digs, six kills and eight serving points. Jessica Caldwell had eight digs and Julia Klincewicz added six kills.

Red Raiders Can't Take Bite Out Of Bulldogs, Fall 27-13

By BILL GRIFFIN

When the cold winds of late October make their visit, it is basic football – running the ball – that frequently dominates the games.

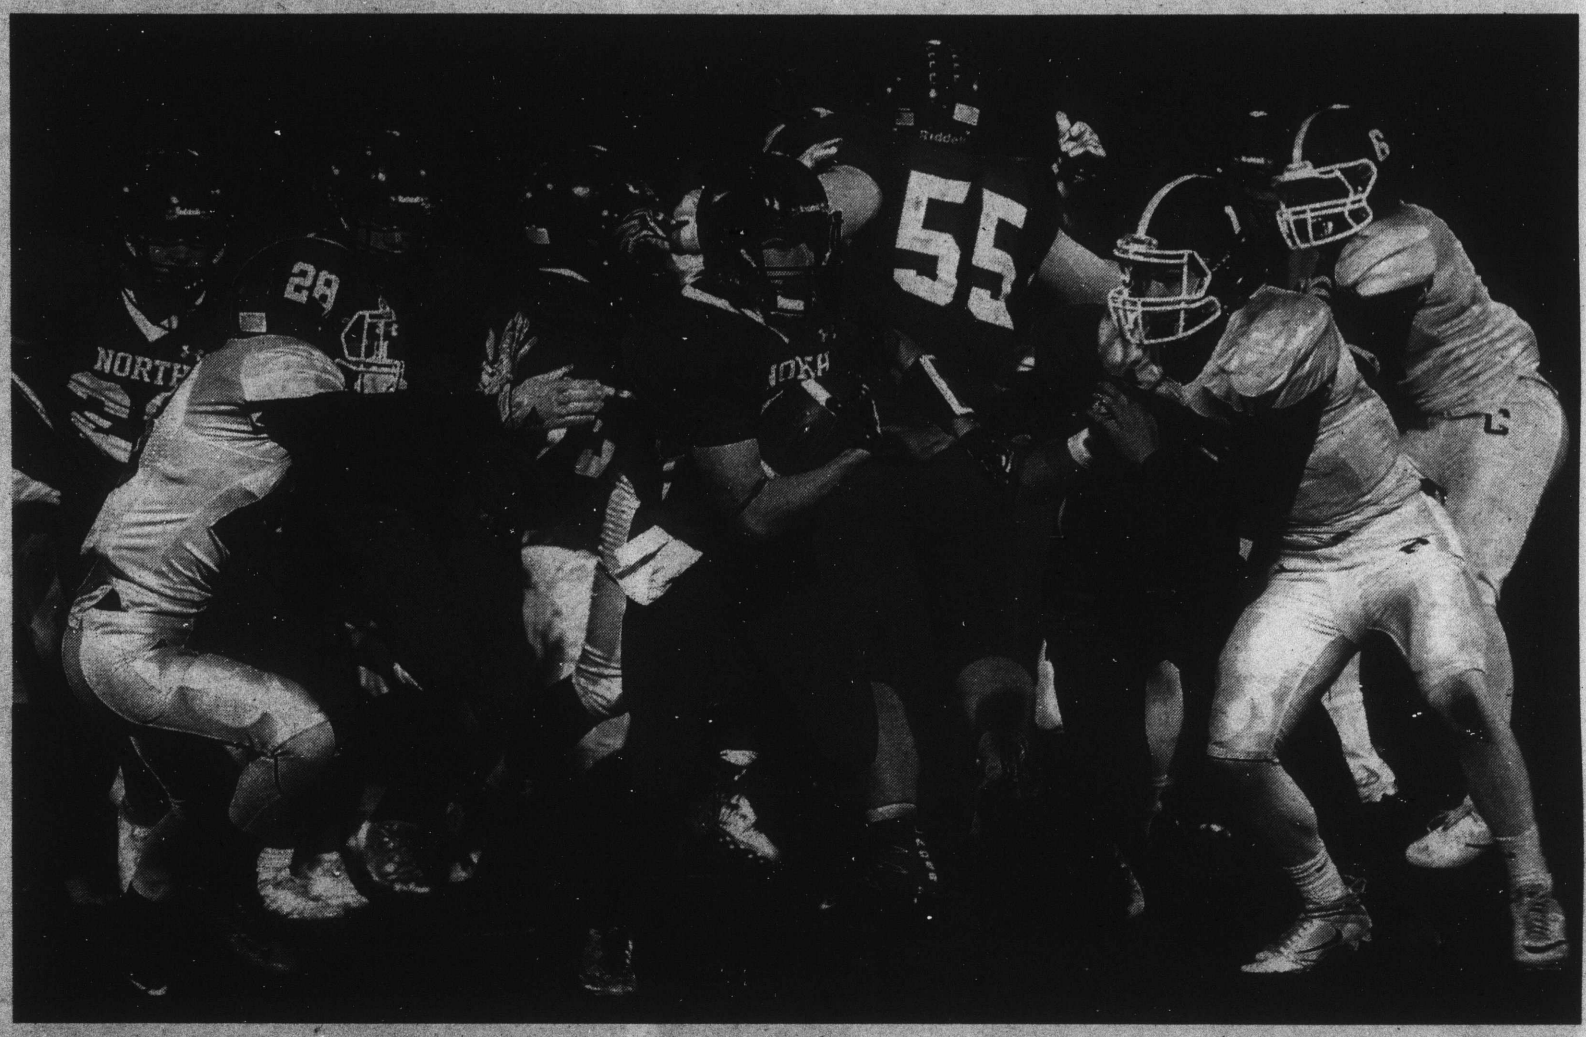
Canton used its triple-option attack to rush for 312 yards, 208 in the second half, to negate a fine effort from North Quincy's sophomore quarterback Tim Layden and drop the Red Raiders, 27-13 in a non-league game at a windy, rainy Veterans' Memorial Stadium Friday night.

"We played tough football, but we made mistakes against the triple option, and the mistakes hurt us," said North Quincy coach Mark Nutley. "It's a tough offense to prepare for. You only see it once a year, and you have to be disciplined against it. We only had three days of practice to work against it, and they ran it well."

After Canton quarterback Dan Dillon raced 56 yards on a keeper off the option for a 7-0 lead, Layden hit Liam O'Connor on beautiful touch throw for a 51-yard pass-and-run TD to draw North within one, 7-6.

The Bulldogs upped it to 13-6 midway through the third on a five-yard run by Joe Mullkay, but North answered on a perfectly-blocked 33-yard bolt on fourth-and-three by sophomore Nathan Sleiman, and Kieran O'Driscoll's kick tied it at 13-13 in the final minute of the third quarter.

Canton went ahead for good on a 23-yard by Dillon with 7:00 left and finished it off on a 16-yard pass from Dillon to Tony Harris in the final minute. The dominant theme of the second half was Canton's run game. The Bulldogs were able to chew up yardage and time along with scoring three times to win the game.



SOPHOMORE RUNNING BACK Nathan Sleiman (center) splits two Canton defenders after breaking tackles on a fourth and three and races 33 yards for a North Quincy touchdown against the Bulldogs. Liam O'Connor also caught a 51-yard touchdown pass but the Red Raiders bowed to Canton, 27-13 Oct. 28 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. North visits Dedham Friday night.

"They made a good adjustment at the half and went to the outside toss more," said Nutley.

North could have scored three times in the first half. Fumble recoveries by Alex Pham and Devin Ganno twice set up North inside the Canton 35. The Red Raiders moved to the five and the 10, but could not score. If they push them in and have the lead, perhaps Canton can't go with strictly the run game in the second half.

"We have to capitalize on mistakes. We had chances to score two more touchdowns in the first half," said Nutley.

games with a concussion. In the first half, he was 4-4 for 73 yards and a touchdown, all four to O'Connor who has the quickness and the hands of a dangerous receiver who can get open against most secondaries. Andrew Airosus had a 15-yard reception from Layden in the fourth quarter.

The 51-yard TD belongs in the yearbook. On third-and-six, Layden lofted a perfect floater just over the reaching fingertips of a defensive back onto O'Connor's hands, and O'Connor easily won the footrace down the right sideline for the score.

Layden (63 yards, nine carries) also did a good job running the ball, cutting back and finding the open holes when Canton rushed and over-pursued him. He runs with the quickness and strength of a halfback.

"Timmy has a good arm, and his passing can soften up the defense for us. He has speed, and he ran the ball well," said Nutley. "Liam was outstanding. He has quickness and sure hands."

Middle linebacker and fullback Tommy Koch returned after missing a week with a shoulder injury. He played disciplined defense, stayed with his man, and was able to control the fullback going up the middle out of the triple option.

"Tommy played good assignment football. Against the triple option, you have to stay with your assignment, and he did a good job," said Nutley.

Sleiman's TD run which tied it at 13-13 late in the third was a combination of Sleiman's quickness, wipeout blocking, and the element of surprise. On fourth-and-three from the 33, Nutley went with a power play off tackle with Canton looking for the pass. Pham, Ryan Manning and Ty Finn cleared a gaping hole, Sleiman flashed through the opening, and he is simply too quick to catch from behind.

"We thought they might expect the pass, so we went with the power-I. We blocked it well and Sleiman is quick. He's only a sophomore, and he has a chance to be a real good back," said Nutley.

Defensively, Jacob Roos made an open-field tackle to save a touchdown in the third period. Jeff Sullivan, Finn, Manning, Ganno, Pham and Koch played well up front especially when they were fresh in the first half before Canton's run game wore down the North defense, which is full with two-way players, over the final two quarters.

North's seniors were honored before the game on Senior Night. Koch, O'Connor, Manning, Brandon Chen, Kelvin Devarie, Brendan Ganno, Michael Oldham, Anthony Thornhill and their families were introduced and walked onto to the field.

Before the introductions, North Athletic Director Michael Joyce read a letter from the seniors thanking the fans, the coaches, and, especially, their families for their support.

Presidents Show Effort, Host New Bedford Friday

By JOE REARDON

Quincy could very well come away with its first win tomorrow night against a struggling New Bedford team (7 p.m., Veterans' Memorial Stadium). The contest is well within reach for Bill Reardon's squad.

If the Presidents do chalk up win No. 1 of the fall season, it would go a long way in helping erase the disappointment of last Friday's error-filled defeat at the hands of Sandwich.

The Presidents were left shaking their heads after turnovers all but killed their chances for a win on the road.

Playing against a struggling, one-win Blue Knights squad, the Presidents coughed up the ball five times on a cold, windy evening on the Cape in a frustrating 26-6 loss.

Reardon refuses to get down on the young Presidents' squad because the team, for all its miscues and lost opportunities, continues to play hard. A lesser team would surely have given up on the season, but Quincy's younger players have continued to show plenty of character and poise. And no practice is going to give the sophomores the invaluable experience of live action on Friday nights.

"I know this sounds crazy because we lost 26-6, but I'm proud of the effort, I really am," said Reardon. "These kids are playing hard and we haven't had a lot of success. They're trying. They're trying their hardest. We get to the point where there's a play to be made and they don't make it. The turnovers killed us. We play so many sophomores. I feel bad for them because they are trying and they're incapable right now of making those plays."

Sandwich went to work quickly and put the Presidents in a hole early.

The Blue Knights moved the ball well on their first possession, driving 65 yards on six plays to go up 7-0 when Joseph Boudrow pounded his way into the end zone from six yards out.

Quincy had the ball for one play on its first offensive series and it proved costly as James Stack intercepted a Robert Stevenson pass. Starting at the Presidents' 15-yard line, Sandwich scored four plays later on a keep by quarterback Cameron Lopes.

The Presidents' offense began to click on their next possession after a 22-yard kick return by Brenden Ward. Quincy back Shorn Hawthorne, who had a monster game on offense with 143 rushing yards, picked up 17 yards on three carries to help move the Presidents' to the Blue Knights' 30. That drive was wiped out, though, when Stack added a second interception on a deflected pass.

Quincy's lone score of the game came with 8:23 left in the second quarter and it was a beauty. Hawthorne took the handoff from quarterback Colin Keaveny and made a quick move outside and sprinted 59 yards for the touchdown, cutting the lead to 13-6.

"I thought offensively we've been as efficient as we've been all season," said Reardon. "Maybe moreso."

Sandwich continued to pound the ball against Quincy and it didn't get any easier for the Presidents. Sandwich culminatd a four-play, 85-yard drive with a 65-yard Boudrow score for a 20-6 cushion with 5:40 to play in the half.

The Presidents continued to move the ball well with Keaveny completing a 13-yard pass to Dominic Laptiste and breaking an 11-yard gain on a keep for a first down at the Blue Knights' 41. Turnovers hit once again, though, as Sandwich recovered a fumble to end the drive. Four plays later, the Blue Knights were on the board again, courtesy of a 21-yard scoring reception for a 26-6 lead with 51 seconds left in the half.

Quincy came up with several big plays on defense in the second half to keep Sandwich off the scoreboard. Sandwich was in the midst of a solid drive late in the third quarter, but defensive back Mike Lomano put an end to it when he stepped in front of a Lopes pass for an interception at the Quincy 8-yard line.

Quincy's talented defensive lineman Jamal Williams pounced on Lopes when Sandwich threatened deep in President territory for a 15-yard loss on the sack and then came right back two plays later for another sack to end the scoring threat.

The Presidents have a prime opportunity to turn the tides in their next two games. "We're all in the same kind of round robin down at the bottom," said Reardon. "I told the kids and I firmly believe in my heart of hearts that if we get rid of those miscuses and stupid penalties, if we clean that up, we're going to win."

With each game and every hard knock, the sophomores are gaining priceless experience that will serve them well down the line. "You don't get it (experience) in practice," said Reardon. "You have to play in the games to get it. We're learning the hard way, but we're learning."

Quincy Boys Soccer Win 3 Of 4; Clinch Tourney Bid

By BILL GRIFFIN

The last game was a disappointment, but the final week was a rewarding one for Quincy's soccer team which won three of its last four matches to qualify for the state tournament for the second consecutive season.

On a breezy, rain-swept afternoon, Silver Lake capitalized on the wind beneath its wings for three goals in the first half for a 4-0 win over Quincy in the regular-season finale for the Presidents Friday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

The win clinched the Patriot League Keenan Division title for the Lakers (16-3) while Quincy finished at 9-6-3 after making a second straight impressive closing run to earn a tourney berth.

"We could have played better, but I told the kids after the match that if someone had said before the season began that we would finish at 9-6-3 and make the tourney, they would have taken it in instant. This is a tough league and a tough division to come out of and make the tourney," said Quincy coach Mark Spendlove.

After rolling past cross-town rival North Quincy, 6-1, Quincy played terrific soccer in wins over Plymouth North (2-1) and Whitman-Hanson (1-0) to clinch a ride to the tourney. Tourney seedings and pairings will be announced Wednesday.

In the Plymouth game, Quincy took the lead on a goal by Mohamed Gouriche. After Plymouth tied it, Benito Carvalho won it on a well-placed free kick with just over 10 minutes left in the match.

Quincy dominated the play against Whitman-Hanson's defensive shell, and finally broke through on a trademark passing play for the game-winner. Paulo Soares sent a spot-on pass along the ground through the Panthers' defense to Leandro Batista for a clean breakaway, and Batista finished the crisp passing play for a goal and the 1-0 victory. Keeper Brendan Corbett played a solid match to earn the shutout.

"In both games, we faced an excellent keeper, but we kept plugging and got the goals we needed," said Spendlove. "Whitman really packed it in, but Paulo made a beautiful pass to set up the winning goal."

The answer was blowing in the wind against Silver Lake. The wind whipped from the closed to the open end of the stadium. The flag was straight out in the gale which bent branches of trees. With the wind, the ball traveled the length of the field. Against the wind, it floated in the air, drifted to the ground, and died an easy death.

The Lakers had the wind for the first half. If Quincy could have survived the first half tied or within a goal, the Presidents would have had a chance against the league champs. However, the Lakers scored on a breakaway, a penalty kick and a hard shot from point-blank range for a 3-0 lead at halftime which was enough to lock down the victory.

"We didn't adjust to the conditions, and it hurt us," said Spendlove. "I thought the wind played a part in the first two goals. I would have been happy to be down one or two at the half when we got the wind but the third goal really set us back."

When the Lakers went up with an early lead, they simply played defense, frequently clogging the scoring area with nine players in front of the goal. The Presidents had several nice passing plays, but couldn't crack the platoon of defenders.

Soares, Batista, Gouriche, Owen Smyth, Tristan McCormick, Kevin O'Shea, Joseph Oduro, Clayton Rodrigues, and Kennedy Ramos all moved and passed the ball smartly, but with Silver Lake packed in tightly with multiple defenders, it was difficult to find an open crease. Smyth had Quincy's best chance of the match when he rifled a free kick just over the crossbar midway through the first half.

"They went into defensive mode with the lead, and it was tough to get a good chance," said Spendlove. "We did pass the ball well, but I would have liked to see us swing it wide and move down the wings a little more. That might have opened it up a little."

Soares played a wonderful game in defeat, clearing the ball from end-to-end, and starting passing plays which moved the ball through center into the attack zone. The fullback line of Rodrigues, Ali Mokalled, and Melvin Gonzales was strong against the Lakers' attack. Yannick Gomes cleared away what would have been a certain goal from an open corner of the net in the first half.

"The fullbacks played decent soccer. Clayton ran his heart out for the entire match," said Spendlove.

Quincy was missing Carvahlo, Christian Toscanini, and Henrique Costa for the match, and it hampered the Presidents' efforts on the forward line.

"Benito is one of our best players. Christian and Henrique are strong forwards who can hold off a defender. They would have helped against Silver Lake's defense," said Spendlove.

APACHES - 36
MUSTANGS - 0

The Apaches honored "Breast Cancer Awareness" Month by wearing special pink uniforms in Sunday's playoff game against the Milton Mustangs.

The Apaches mounted a long drive on their first possession. Apache RB Tyler Le capped the drive with a 3-yard TD run, to take a 6-0 lead. Colm Geary stripped the ball on the ensuing kickoff, setting up a 28-yard TD run by QB Danny Scolaro. Scolaro added the 2-point kick as the Apaches took a 14-0 lead.

On the ensuing series, Apache DT Clayton Corley hit the Mustang QB as he threw, forcing a fumble. LB Tyler Le picked up the fumble and returned it 47 yards, for a TD. OBITUARIES

Ralph R. Fabrizio

Ralph R. Fabrizio of Quincy passed away Oct. 26

Ralph was born in Quincy and was a longtime resident. He proudly served in the United States Army in Germany and later the National Guard. Ralph worked for Boston Gear for many years and was a trustee in the Boston Gear Retiree Association in the later years. He was also a part of the Top Three Military Retired Association.

Family was the cornerstone of Ralph's life. He enjoyed spending time with his granddaughters, children and his loving wife. Ralph had a great sense of humor and was a witty man. He will be missed by everyone who had the pleasure of knowing him.

Son of the late Carmelo and Georgianna (Seroni) Fabrizio. Loving husband of Janet R. (Roy) Fabrizio of Quincy. Cherished father to Ralph Fabrizio, Jr. and Tina of NH, Rhonda Fabrizio and her husband Gary MacWilliams of Pembroke and Ryan Fabrizio of Whitman. Dear brother to Sandra Camello of Easton, Lorraine Fabrizio of Quincy and Richard Fabrizio of Quincy. Caring grandfather to Isabella and Gabriella MacWilliams and Jennifer Pollock. Also survived by his mother-in-law Simone Roy of Peabody and ex-wife Roberta Fabrizio of Weymouth.

Visiting hours were Sunday in the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. A Celebration of Life Service was held there Monday prior to the Funeral Mass in St. Joseph's Church, Quincy.

Burial in Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne, was Tuesday.

Donations in memory of Ralph may be made to the American Heart Association, P.O. Box 417005, Boston, MA 02241-7005.

See Keohane.com or call 1-800-Keohane for directions and online condolences.

Keohane

Roy M. Olsen, 88

Roy Marvin Olsen, age 88, formerly of Quincy, MA, passed away on Oct. 16 in Ocala, FL, after a brief illness.

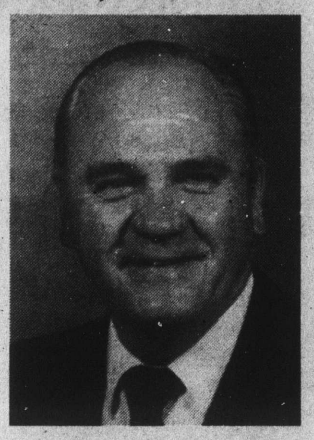
Roy was born in Albany, New York, on Jan. 23, 1928, to Roy F. and Mildred Olsen and spent much of his childhood in Muskegon, Michigan. Due to a heart defect, Roy was unable to serve in the military as he had hoped. He graduated from Braintree High School, MA, in 1946 and attended night classes at Northeastern University, Boston. In 1951, he married the love of his life, Evamaie Hedman at Central Baptist Church in Quincy and they were blessed with 65 years together.

Roy was employed as assistant parts manager at Carriker Motors and Stonberg Motors of Quincy, and parts manager at Wolfe-Sullivan in Hingham. He worked for Bethlehem Steel at the Fore River Shipyard, Quincy, heading up inventory control, and was eventually sent to their Brooklyn 56th St. Yard, New York, as supervisor of spare parts. Nuclear ships that he worked on were the USS Long Beach and the USS Bainbridge.

In 1964, General Dynamics Co. hired Roy as warehouse supervisor for their Quincy Yard (formerly Fore River). He obtained top secret clearance and worked in support of the submarine and Apollo programs.

Roy and Eva moved to Clearwater, Florida, where he was service manager at Clearwater Nissan and Highlands Chrysler. After moving to Ocala, Roy and Eva both worked for the cruise ship port authority in Tampa, Roy as head of security. Roy and Eva were active members of the Tampa Railroaders and enjoyed participating in fundraisers and other community events.

Roy loved major league baseball, puzzles, games of all kinds, and was especially ruthless at Skip-Bo! His nieces and nephews have fond memories of special times spent together with Uncle Roy.



ROY M. OLSEN

Roy was predeceased by his brothers Jack Olsen and Carl Olsen. He is survived by his beloved wife Evamaie and numerous nieces and nephews: Kenneth Brown, Santa Clarita, CA; Donald Hedman, Titusville, FL; Jonathan Hedman, Gray, ME; Ruth Tucker, Lake Stevens, WA; David Hedman, Lompoc, CA; Eben Hedman, Burlington, WA; Robert Brown, Marshfield, MA; Kevin Brown, Aloha, OR; Karen St. Clair, New Boston, NH; Roy Brown, Lander, WY.

Special thanks to the wonderful staff at Munroe Regional Hospital and Legacy House Hospice for their care and kindness toward Roy and Eva. Final arrangements were made through "A Direct Cremation" of Summerfield, FL. Interment will be at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree, MA.

Roy was a member of Heritage Baptist Church in Ocala, FL and his hope and trust was in Jesus as his savior. A memorial service will be held at the church at 642 NE 20th Street on Saturday, Nov. 5, at 1 p.m.

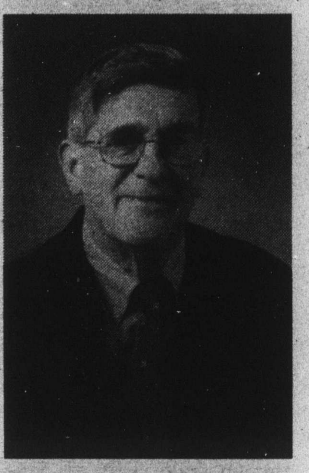
Please visit his memorial website at Roy.Olsen.muchloved.com to leave your condolences, memories, stories and/or pictures to share with the family.

Richard G. Sherman

Richard Graham Sherman of Quincy passed away on Thursday, Oct. 27, after a long illness.

Richard is the beloved husband of Marsha Sherman (Peoples) of Quincy, father of Richard and Mimi of Troutman, North Carolina; Alexandra and John Leitaker of Sacramento, California; Maureen of Nashua New Hampshire; Kent and Julie of Sterling, Alaska; five grandchildren, three great-grandchildren; step-dad to Janette Archer of Phoenix, Arizona, and Holly Archer of Boulder, Colorado. Richard was the only child born to the late Marion (Graham) and Raymond Sherman.

Richard was born in Schenectady, New York, in 1931. He graduated from the University of Colorado, and was in the military during the Korean War. Stationed in Alaska, he subsequently settled there. He was employed as a surveyor and later as chief geologist for the Highway Department in Alaska. After the 1964 Alaska Earthquake he was recruited by a local firm and moved to the Boston area where he was employed for many years by Metcalf & Eddy Engineers, retiring in 2004 from his position as chief of the geotechnical department. He was active in his professional organizations, and took great pride in his many accomplishments.



RICHARD G. SHERMAN

After his retirement he enjoyed travelling to visit his family and visiting new places. He enjoyed being outdoors, camping and hiking. He loved music and dance, he liked to putter around the house, dig in the garden and play with his cat.

Donations in Richard's memory may be made to the Hancock Park Adult Day Health Program, 164 Parkingway, Quincy, MA 02169, or to the charity of your choice.

Assisting the family is: Hamel, Wickens & Troupe, hamelfuneralcare.com.

Douglas P. 'Bonsey' Shaw, 84

Douglas Paul "Bonsey" Shaw of Houghs Neck, Quincy, died at the age of 84 on Oct. 26.

Douglas served his country with honor in the US Army during the Korean War, and was a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion and the Quincy Yacht Club.

He is survived by his children Cheryl of Watertown, Douglas and his wife Kathy of Pembroke, Diane of Falmouth, Pamela Wallace and her husband Kevin of Quincy, and Paula DiCarlo and her husband Paul of Raynham. He was the proud grandfather of Lee, Stacy, Joshua, Lindsey, Matthew, Jessica, Alyssa and Dylan and great-grandfather of Patrick, Nicholas and Abigail. Also survived by his brothers Richard Shaw and Lawrence Shaw, many nieces and nephews and extended family members. He was predeceased by his daughter Nancy Lee and her partner, Robert Goodrich, in 1997.

Visiting hours were Tuesday at the Hamel, Wickens and Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy Center.

Funeral and Interment service at the Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne, will be private.

In lieu of flowers donations in memory of Doug may be made to Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club, 8 Harvey's Lane, Quincy, MA 02169.

The study's findings will be used as a framework for major intersection improvements, signal enhancements, and new concepts for traffic patterns, parking and bicycle and pedestrian access at points throughout the City. It will address how traffic moves through major intersections, how feeder roads affect patterns, and what large- and small-scale projects could improve that flow for cars, bicycles and people.

Mayor Koch pointed to a number of infrastructure projects in recent years with an eye toward improving traffic – including the overhaul of the Hancock and Squantum streets intersection, one that was among the worst in the City for years. The idea, he said, is to build off the work to date in a comprehensive way.

"We've made progress with individual projects, but it's time for a wholesale look at transportation issues throughout the City," Koch said, adding that he does not believe the city has conducted a comprehensive citywide traffic study since at least the 1980s. "The ultimate goals here are the kinds of projects and policies that will have a tangible benefit to our neighborhoods. It's going to require a lot of creative thinking, the input of the community, and the collaboration from just about every department in the City."

Koch said the study won't shy away from long-standing issues that have been historically contentious – including neighborhood parking rules and the fate of the closed gate on the Independence Avenue side of the Quincy Adams MBTA station.

Ward 3 City Councilor Ian Cain, who introduced a resolution in March 2016 calling for the city to develop a pedestrian master plan, calls this a step in the right direction. "As the city changes in its physical composition, and as we are in the midst of demographic shifts and in population, we need to be able to adequately manage how people travel - whether on foot, on a bicycle, or in a car. We need to account for all methods of travel, and for all groups, including seniors. I'm excited to work with Mayor Koch and his team, and with residents across the city in making the city work for them."

The master plan will also move the City toward the creation of a Complete Streets policy framework. Complete Streets is a design approach and transportation policy that requires streets to be planned, operated, and maintained for safe travel by those walking, cycling, driving automobiles, or riding public transit, treating each mode with equal importance. Complete Streets are promoted as delivering improved safety, health, economic, and environmental outcomes for communities that implement them.

When proposals are received, a selection committee from the Koch administration will review them and make a recommendation. A formal request to the City Council for an appropriation to fund the study will follow.

School Bus Driver Cited

Medical Center. All parties were treated for minor injuries and released, police said.

The remaining students on the bus were taken to the Sons of Italy on Quarry Street, where parents were able to pick them up.

The bus was traveling southbound on Quarry Street when it left the roadway and struck a fire hydrant, telephone pole, fence, stonewall, and a Nissan Pathfinder attempting to exit Fallon Court, before hitting the house at 62 Quarry St., according to police.

The house was damaged but the city's building inspector determined it to be structurally sound, and the driver of the pathfinder was uninjured.

DeCristofaro said he was thankful the students and bus driver were not more seriously injured in the crash.

"We are very, very thankful people were not seriously hurt – the students were not more seriously hurt and the bus driver was not more seriously hurt," he stated.

"The other thing we should be thankful for in the city is the professionalism of the Quincy Police Department, Quincy Fire Department, Brewster Ambulance and [director of transportation Michael] Draicchio… There are so many people that made the enormity of the situation bearable for students."

Bernazzani Principal Peter Dionne and Assistant Principal Phil Diana have been riding on the bus with students each morning and afternoon following the crash to help reassure students. DeCristofaro said they would continue to ride the bus until they feel it is no longer necessary.

Quincy's school buses do not have seat belts for students, which are not required under state law. DeCristofaro said there had been no discussion of adding seat belts in the days following the crash, and said there are two schools of research regarding seat belts on buses – the first is that they are appropriate for preventing injuries, while the second says they confine students in serious emergencies and make evacuating the bus more difficult.

The superintendent said there are also no plans to alter the bus route to avoid Quarry Street. Buses from Bernazzani and Lincoln-Hancock have both used the road for many years without incident, he stated.

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
MASSACHUSETTS DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION – HIGHWAY DIVISION
NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING
Project File No. 608013

A Design Public Hearing will be held by MassDOT to discuss the proposed Sea Street/Quincy Shore Drive Intersection Improvements Project project in Quincy, MA.

WHERE: Broad Meadows Middle School
50 Calvin Road,
Quincy, MA 02169

WHEN: Wednesday November 16, 2016 at 7:00PM

PURPOSE: The purpose of this hearing is to provide the public with the opportunity to become fully acquainted with the proposed Sea Street / Quincy Shore Drive Intersection Improvement project. All views and comments made at the hearing will be reviewed and considered to the maximum extent possible.

PROPOSAL: The proposed project consists of roadway and related drainage improvements, reconstruction of sidewalks with ADA compliant ramps, provision of bicycle accommodations, construction of median islands, as well as geometric modifications and an upgraded traffic signal system. Bicycle accommodations consisting of a usable shoulder have been provided in accordance with applicable design guides.

A secure right-of-way is necessary for this project. Acquisitions in fee and permanent or temporary easements may be required. The City of Quincy is responsible for acquiring all needed rights in private or public lands. MassDOT's policy concerning land acquisitions will be discussed at this hearing.

Written views received by MassDOT subsequent to the date of this notice and up to five (5) days prior to the date of the hearing shall be displayed for public inspection and copying at the time and date listed above. Plans will be on display one-half hour before the hearing begins, with an engineer in attendance to answer questions regarding this project. A project handout will be made available on the MassDOT website listed below.

Written statements and other exhibits in place of, or in addition to, oral statements made at the Public Hearing regarding the proposed undertaking are to be submitted to Patricia A. Leavenworth, P.E., Chief Engineer, MassDOT, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, MA 02116, Attention: Tom Currier, P.E., Roadway Project Management, Project File No. 608013. Such submissions will also be accepted at the hearing. Mailed statements and exhibits intended for inclusion in the public hearing transcript must be postmarked within ten (10) business days of this Public Hearing. Project inquiries may be emailed to dot.feedback.highway@state.ma.us

This location is accessible to people with disabilities. MassDOT provides reasonable accommodations and/or language assistance free of charge upon request (including but not limited to interpreters in American Sign Language and languages other than English, open or closed captioning for videos, assistive listening devices and alternate material formats, such as audio tapes, Braille and large print), as available. For accommodation or language assistance, please contact MassDOT's Chief Diversity and Civil Rights Officer by phone (857-368-8580), fax (857-368-0602), TTD/TTY (857-368-0603) or by email (MassDOT.CivilRights@dot.state.ma.us). Requests should be made as soon as possible prior to the meeting, and for more difficult to arrange services including sign-language, CART or language translation or interpretation, requests should be made at least ten (10) business days before the meeting.

In case of inclement weather, hearing cancellation announcements will be posted on the internet at http://www.massdot.state.ma.us/HIGHWAY/

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Some changes might seem confusing at first, especially to an Aries whose impatience levels are pretty shaky this week. Take it one step at a time, Lamb, and soon all will be made clear.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That difficult situation you've been dealing with continues to call for careful handling. Avoid quickly made choices that might not stand up when they're finally put to the test.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You still have lots of evaluating to do before you can consider making a commitment. It's better to move cautiously than to risk stumbling into a major misunderstanding.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A previously peevish partner offers to be more helpful with your problems. But remember: The final choice is yours. Be guided by what you feel is the right thing to do.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) As the Big Cat, you sometimes can be pretty rough on those you suspect of betrayal. The best advice is to pull in those claws and listen to the explanation. It might surprise you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your inner voice usually guides you well. But a note of caution: This is a period of mixed signals for you, so be careful that you don't misunderstand the messages you're getting.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Cupid's call beckons both single Librans looking for a new love, as well as couples hoping to strengthen their relationships. A workplace problem is quickly resolved.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It's been a hectic time for you, and you might want to take a break to restore both body and soul. You'll then be set to face new challenges later this month.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It's a good idea to take a more conservative approach to your financial situation right now. Some plans made earlier this year might need readjusting.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This is a fine time to move boldly into those new opportunities I promised would open up for you. Check them over, and then choose the best one for you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Congratulations. Your self-assurance is growing stronger, and you should now feel more confident about making that long-deferred decision about a possible commitment.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You're very close to reaching your goal. But be wary of distractions that can lure you off-course and leave you stranded far away from where you really want to be.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an inner sight that helps you see into people's hearts. You would be an excellent psychologist or social worker.

Quincy Revolutionary War Patriot, Captain Thomas Newcomb was recently honored with a wreath laying ceremony at historic Hancock Cemetery, Quincy Center.

The event was hosted by the Massachusetts Society, Sons of the American Revolution. This year the organization is celebrating the 235th anniversary of the American victory at Yorktown, VA.

The SAR's Col. Henry Knox Regimental Color Guard mustered at the Quincy Historical Society and then led a small procession to the Hancock Cemetery for the Captain Thomas Newcomb remembrance ceremony.

Capt. Newcomb was born in Quincy on June 15, 1730. He was a veteran of the French-Indian War and the American Revolution.

From 1775 to 1777, he served as a lieutenant in Capt. Seth Turner's independent company during the Revolutionary War. In 1780, he was promoted to captain of a company detached from the militia to reinforce the Continental Army. He was promoted to captain of the company in 1780.

The Massachusetts Society, Sons of the American Revolution, is a historical, educational, and patriotic non-profit that seeks to maintain and extend the institutions of American freedom, an appreciation for patriotism, a respect for our national symbols, and the value of American citizenship. Communicating With Alzheimer's Program At Kennedy Center Nov. 15

Communication is more than just talking and listening - it's also about sending and receiving messages through attitude, tone of voice, facial expressions and body language.

As people with Alzheimer's disease and other dementias progress in their journey and the ability to use words is lost, families need new ways to connect.

Join Jennifer Hoadley of the Alzheimer's Association at the Kennedy Center on Tuesday, Nov. 15th at 10:30 a.m. Explore how communication takes place when someone has Alzheimer's, learn to decode the verbal and behavioral messages delivered by someone with dementia and identify strategies to help you connect and communicate at each stage of the disease. This is another workshop offered as part of Mayor Koch's initiative to make Quincy a Dementia Friendly Community.

Registration is required for this presentation as space is limited. To register call the Kennedy Center at (617) 376-1506.

Trump-Clinton Locked In Battleground States In March To 270 Electoral Votes

By SCOTT JACKSON and ROBERT BOSWORTH

One of the closest Presidential elections in modern time dragged into Wednesday morning as votes in key battleground states were still being counted. Those outcomes would eventually tip the hard-hitting and acrimonious race for the White House in favor of Democrat Hillary Rodham Clinton or Republican Donald Trump.

As the Sun went to press at 11:50 p.m. on Election Night Tuesday, Clinton and Trump were locked in tight race for the required 270 electoral votes to be elected President.

Trump had won 19 states – including two GOP musts in Florida and Ohio – for 232 electoral votes – just 38 shy of the magic 270. Florida with its 29 electoral votes was considered a key to a Trump victory and no Republican candidate has won the White House without winning the Buckeye State's 18 electoral votes.

Clinton had won 14 states – including New York (29 electoral votes) and California (55 electoral votes) – to rack up 209 electoral votes – just 61 shy of the required

14 Percent Of Quincy Voters Cast Ballots Early

By SCOTT JACKSON

More than 14 percent of Quincy's registered voters cast ballots in the two weeks leading up Election Day as Massachusetts allowed early voting for the first time.

City Clerk Nicole Crispo on Monday said the city had a total of 8,496 early voters cast ballots – 14.25 percent of the city's 59,639 registered voters. Leading up to the early-voting period, she had anticipated about 10 percent of all registered voters casting ballots during that time.

Crispo said she believes so many residents decided to cast ballots during the early-voting window because it was convenient for them to do so given their schedules and parking was readily available at City Hall, where most early voting took place.

Russell Erikson Guest Speaker At Ceremony Following Parade

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy's Veterans Day parade will start at 10:30 a.m. Friday and make its way through Quincy Center, followed by a ceremony at the Doughboy Statue in front of the Adams Academy.

Russell G. Erikson, a decorated World War II Army Air Forces pilot, will be the guest speaker at the observance.

The parade will begin at the intersection of Quincy Avenue and Scammell Street and run north along Hancock Street to the Adams Academy, located at 8 Adams St. This year, the parade will briefly travel along Temple and Washington Streets around the United First Parish Church because of the ongoing work on the now-closed section of Hancock Street in front of the church and City Hall.

Units marching in the parade will form up in the Quincy Credit Union parking lot at the intersection of Quincy Avenue and Scammel Street beginning at 10 a.m.

In the event of inclement weather, the observance would take place in the Quincy High School gymnasium at 100 Coddington St. beginning at 11 a.m. Guests are asked to use the Russell Street entrance to access the school. For updates, call the Veterans Services Department at 617-376-1194.

Erikson, a 94-year-old Quincy native, served with the U.S. Army's 8th Air Force in Europe during World War II. He piloted a B-24 Liberator bomber during the war, flying 33 combat missions over Germany and Europe. For his service, Erikson received the Air Medal with five Oak Leaf Clusters, three Distinguished Flying Crosses, and the French Legion of Honor.

Erikson attended Quincy High School where he was a standout athlete in cross-country and hockey. He worked at the Quincy Shipyard and Boston Gear Works before his service in the war.

Upon completion of his service, Erikson returned with his wife, Beverly, who would remain at his side for 62 years, built their home in Quincy and raised five sons and a daughter. Erikson resumed his career as a carpenter and construction contractor until his retirement. He still maintains a myriad of interests and an active lifestyle.

Also scheduled to speak at the observance are: Mayor Thomas

Quincy Veterans Honored At Flags For Veterans Island

Service, Sacrifice Remembered At Sons Of American Legion Annual Observance

By TOM GORMAN

The sacrifices of Quincy's veterans were remembered during a pre-Veterans Day ceremony at the Flags for Veterans Island at Fort Square.

City officials and residents joined veterans for the ceremony on Sunday at the traffic-island-turned-veterans-memorial at School and Pleasant Streets. The grassy island is graced with 400 American flags and a walkway lined with 416 inscribed bricks leading to a flagpole.

The fluttering flags served as the backdrop for the gathering of veterans while a large flag, suspended from a crane, flew overhead.

"The flags and bricks on this island represent those who have served, are still serving, and those who paid the ultimate sacrifice to keep America free," said Squadron 294 of the Sons of the American Legion Commander Paul Moody. "Always remember, if there were no vets, there would be no America. Freedom is not free."

Moody noted that this year marks the 50th anniversary of the Vietnam War, the 75th anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor and the 241st anniversary of the Marine Corps.

Transit-Oriented Zoning Districts Meeting Thursday

Public Can Comment On Mayor's Proposal

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors will consider Mayor Thomas Koch's request to re-zone three of the four MBTA stations in Quincy to promote transit-oriented development during a special session Thursday, and the public will have a chance to comment on the proposal.

Koch in October introduced an amendment to the city's zoning code that would create transit-oriented zoning districts at the North Quincy, Wollaston and Quincy Adams stations. The transit-oriented districts would allow for taller buildings – up to 10 stories in height – at the stations with less required parking than necessary under current zoning rules, and allow developers to take advantage of shared parking arrangements.

The new transit-oriented zoning districts would be overlay districts, giving a developer the option of following the zoning rules for the new districts or for the underlying zoning district. The North Quincy and Wollaston stations are in Business C zoning districts presently, while the Quincy Adams station is zoned Industrial A.

The Quincy Center station would not be rezoned under the mayor's proposal. It is, however, already in one of the special zoning districts for Quincy Center.

Developers hoping to build in the new transit-oriented districts would go before the Planning Board for a certificate of consistency. The board would be required to determine whether or not a proposal conforms to design guidelines for transit-oriented districts, which the city's Planning Department would create.

Fire Damages Parker Street Home

By SCOTT JACKSON

A gas floor heater is being blamed for a single-alarm fire that damaged a house on Parker Street Sunday.

Firefighters responded to the fire at 71 Parker St., a 1.5-story bungalow-style home near Quincy Center, at 11:53 a.m. Sunday and remained on scene until 1:42 p.m., Deputy Fire Chief Ed Fenby said Monday.

Fenby said the firefighters who arrived first on scene went into the basement to attack the fire, which was in the ceiling of the basement. The fire had started in a gas floor heater installed in the floor above the basement, and firefighters were able to cut the heater out of the floor and remove it from the home, Fenby said; firefighters also checked walls and floors to make sure the fire had not spread.

"The firefighters who responded did a great job," Fire Chief Joseph Barron said.

Fire damage was limited to the heater and the floor immediately next to it, Fenby said. Smoke damage was spread throughout the house, and there was also water damage on the first floor. There was no estimate for total damage.

One firefighter was injured while battling the blaze, but Fenby said he remained on scene. No one was home when the fire began.

Fenby said the residents of 71 Parker St. were allowed to return to the home Sunday, but was unsure if they had done so.

DETERMINING DIAMOND QUALITY

When selecting a diamond, pay particular attention to its cut, the most important of the 4 C's (Cut, Color, Clarity, and Carat). A good cut allows the maximum amount of light to pass through the gemstone, creating brilliance. As for color, when the term is applied to white diamonds, it actually refers to the absence of color. The best diamonds are colorless, or nearly so, without any tints of yellow or brown. Clarity is an index of imperfections. The best diamonds are "flawless" (no irregularity under 10-power magnification). Finally, carat is related to weight, with one carat equal to 200 milligrams. The more you know about diamonds, the better able you will be to find one that fits your budget and taste.

Diamonds are the traditional choice for engagement rings. Classic and timeless, they are the most popular kind of center gem, as well as the most durable and lasting. The finest quality diamonds and precious stones have been a hallmark of our tradition. For more information, please call 617-773-3636. Our store is located at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. Our prices have always been more than competitive with no fake markups in order to offer huge discounts.

Son Beams

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A Veterans Day Message

Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth was invited by the Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 294, to be the keynote speaker at last Sunday's Veterans Day Observance at Flags for Veterans Island.

Bosworth, a member of Squadron 294, is the son of the late Henry Bosworth, a decorated U.S. Navy combat veteran of World War II.

The following are his remarks shared on Sunday.

It is a pleasure and a privilege to be with all of you today as we salute our Veterans.

I should first tell you that I am not a veteran.

But I am the son of a veteran.

And I am very proud of that.

My father Henry was a decorated combat veteran of World War II.

He served aboard the destroyer USS Cogswell in the Pacific with the aircraft carrier task forces.

Henry was part of the "Greatest Generation" – a term that was popularized by journalist Tom Brokaw.

The term describes the generation who grew up during the Great Depression and who later served during World War II – whether in the uniforms of the armed services or in other important capacities like shipbuilding.

They were men and women who found themselves in harm's way for not days or weeks but years fighting on land and at sea to preserve our freedom.

Many did not return home.

Among the 400,000 killed fighting in World War II, 225 were from Quincy.

Those who did survive returned to a grateful nation and thankful city.

And those veterans continued to serve becoming pillars of the community.

Names like Koch and Gills – Trubiano and Papile – Noble and Malvesti – Beston and Moody – and so many more.

They became police officers and firefighters – government leaders and small business owners – teachers and entrepreneurs – strong threads in the fabric of our city.

Their service to Quincy has shaped our community not only during their generation but also future generations.

We are the beneficiaries of their service and sacrifice.

We would not be where we are today – both literally and figuratively – without them.

When I started to think about what I would like to say today, I tried to imagine my father as a very young man – a teenager really – three quarters of a century ago.

In the fall of 1941, Henry was a 17-year-old senior at Quincy High School.

He had his future all mapped out after high school.

He would become a reporter. He was already covering school sports for The Quincy Patriot Ledger and probably looked forward to graduating in the spring and writing full time soon after.

But Henry's plans – and his life – like so many others – changed on Dec. 7, 1941.

Pearl Harbor was one of the darkest hours in our nation's history.

And instead of embarking on career paths or furthering their education, the Greatest Generation answered the call of duty and joined the armed services.

That group included two Bosworth brothers from Quincy Point.

After graduating Quincy High in 1942, Henry enlisted in the U.S. Navy.

So too did his brother, Richie, who actually left high school early before graduation.

Richie would later, after the war ended, return to Quincy High during the day and take classes to earn his diploma.

We lost Richie – who also served in the Navy during the Korean War – a few weeks ago at the age of 90.

Why the Navy?

I think it's because the Bosworth brothers grew up in Quincy Point in the shadow of the Fore River Shipyard – one of the most productive yards anywhere.

During the height of the war – 1943 - more than 32,000 workers – including 1,200 women – were employed there. Together they built some of the mightiest ships like the Lexington and Massachusetts – ships that helped win the war.

After high school graduation in June 1942, Henry attended Naval training school in Champagne, Illinois.

His commanding officer was Hugh Rodham.

A familiar last name perhaps?

You are correct.

Years later, Hugh's daughter – Hillary Rodham Clinton – would become First Lady – and in two days, perhaps our first woman President.

In 1996, when Hillary visited Quincy as the First Lady, Henry met her at the Crane Library and showed her the photo of his Navy graduation class.

Henry had wondered if her father and his commanding officer were one in the same.

She confirmed it was her father who had taught Henry before he left Illinois for the Pacific.

By design or coincidence, both Henry and Richie were assigned to destroyers.

Henry was a signalman on the USS Cogswell – Richie served aboard the USS Knapp.

For some of the war, both ships were part of Air Craft Carrier Task Force 58 – the main striking force of the U.S. Navy in the Pacific from January 1944 to the end of the war in August, 1945.

The Cogswell participated in a myriad of battles during the war, including the Marshall Islands, Battle of the Philippine Sea and the Battle of Surigo Straight among many others.

She also joined Task Force 38 for the final series of raids against the Japanese home islands until the end of the war.

As a footnote – among the Cogswell's crew was gunnery officer Alan Shepherd – the future astronaut.

The two ships the Bosworth Brothers served on received 17 battle stars for World War II service – the Knapp 8 and the Cogswell 9.

The Cogswell was also given the honor of being the first U.S. ship in Toyko Bay for the Japanese surrender.

My father's time in the service lasted about three years.

But it remained with him for a lifetime.

Today, when I hear the word veteran, I feel the word hero.

Those who have served in harm's way to protect our freedoms.

They lead by example and hold a very special place in our hearts.

Behind me are 400 American flags and 416 bricks that honor the service and sacrifice of our veterans.

They are testaments to our veterans' bravery and their selfless acts.

In closing I would like to salute Paul Moody and his wife Karen, the Sons of the American Legion and all of the volunteers who together have made this small piece of land into such a meaningful place to pause and reflect, remember and cherish.

And I would also like to praise all of our city leaders and veterans who work together to remember our veterans not only on Veterans Day but on other observances including Memorial Day, Pearl Harbor Day, Korean War Day, Vietnam Veterans Day and other occasions.

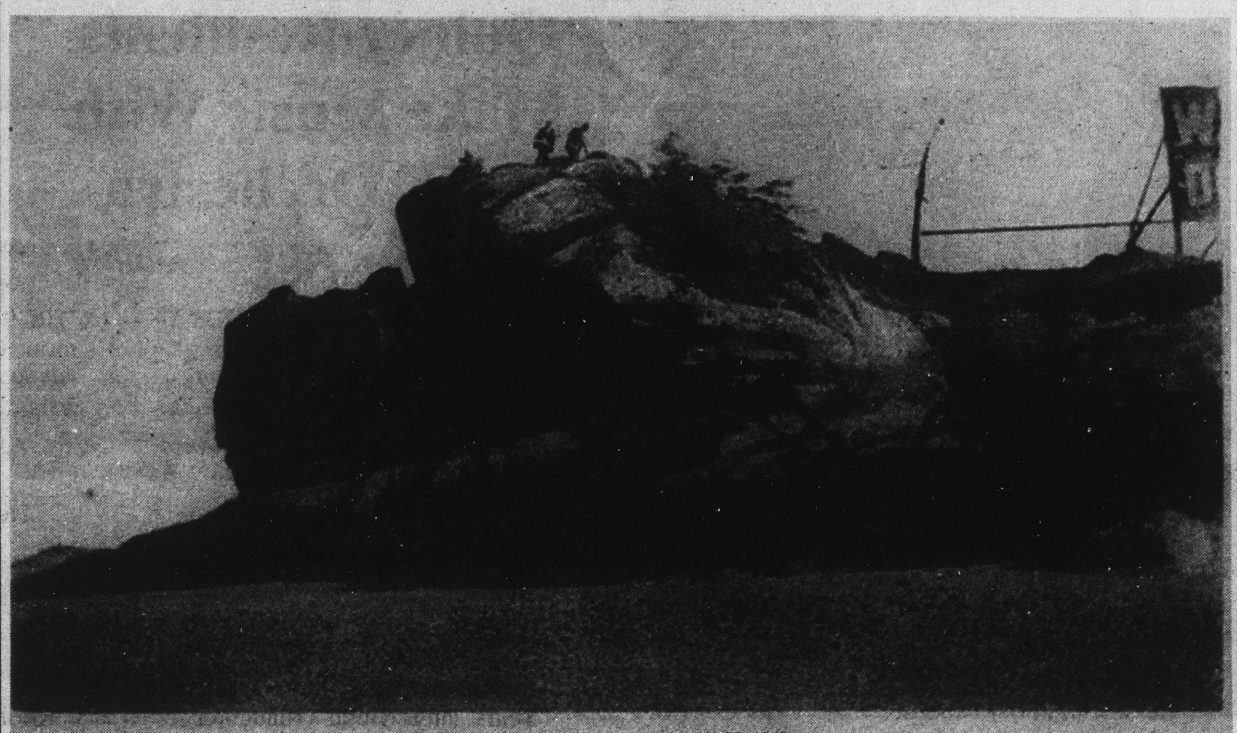
Happy Veterans Day to all our Veterans from all wars, conflicts and peacetime.

Thank you for your service.

Thank you for preserving our democracy.

And thank you for keeping our nation free.

Scenes From Yesterday



SQUAW ROCK, SQUANTUM, MASS.

THIS 1918 scenic postcard is a view of Squaw Rock that is located at the northern tip of Squantum in Dorchester Bay. Squaw Rock is a conglomerate of various types of rocks sometimes called tillite. It was formed into shape by a glacier thousands of years ago and by wind and tides ever since. It protrudes 40 feet above sea level. Popular Indian lore has it that it was named for an Indian maiden who leapt to her death from here into the sea below, although other legends tell of different origins of the name. Myles Standish, the first European recorded to have set foot in Quincy, landed near here between this rock and the adjacent Chapel Rocks in September 1621, three hundred and ninety-five years ago. In this old postcard scene the sign on the right was facing Dorchester Bay and advertised water view dining at the Squantum Inn that was nearby. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Youth Mental Health First Aid Training For Parents

Learn the unique risk factors and warning signs of mental health problems in adolescents during Youth Mental Health First Aid USA, offered by South Shore Mental Health.

The free, two-part program will be held Monday, Nov. 28 and Monday, Dec. 5 from 6 to 9 p.m. at South Shore Mental Health's Marina Bay location at 500 Victory Rd. in Quincy.

The program is designed to build understanding of the importance of early intervention and demonstrate how to help an adolescent in crisis. Through role playing and simulations, parents will learn how to assess a mental health crisis; select interventions and provide initial help; and connect young people to professional, peer, social, and self-help care.

For more information or to register, call Lisa Lloyd at 617-847-1955 or e-mail Llloyd@ssmh.org.

National Family Caregivers Month

While more than 850,000 Massachusetts residents look after an elderly or disabled loved one, they may not immediately label themselves as family caregivers. Not strongly identifying oneself in this role may delay the search for guidance. And not getting advice and support puts the health and well-being of both the loved one and the caregiver at risk.

"We see it all the time: a family member is helping their mom, dad, grandparent, or family member remain in their home. They're managing the situation OK. Then, suddenly, this person is unable to drive, or experiences a fall and breaks their hip, or is diagnosed with a chronic disease or incurable cancer, or develops dementia or Alzheimer's, or loses a spouse," explains Best of Care Inc. President and COO Kevin Smith. "From that point on, the caregiver's time commitment and stress level climb exponentially."

Smith knows that many caregivers are not ready (or don't have the financial resources) to bring a professional home care aide into their loved ones' home. He understands that many times, they simply need to talk with an experienced home care expert to sort through their caregiving issues, connect with resources they may not be aware of and make the best decisions for their family's situation.

This November – designated annually as National Family Caregivers Month – Smith is offering no-cost phone or email consultations with Massachusetts families who want to discuss their caregiving dilemmas. Families may call Smith directly from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, at (781) 929-6628 or email kevin@bestofcareinc.com to set up a call. They may also request a call or other information at http://www.bestofcareinc.com/national-family-caregivers-month-2016/

Smith's home care expertise comes from his leadership of the Quincy-based, 35-year-old, 300-plus employee home care agency founded by his father, Stephen, in 1981. Kevin's empathy for caregivers also stems from his family's caring for his grandparents at the end of their lives. "All of us, but especially my mom, my dad, and my aunts dedicated countless hours to caring for them while running businesses, working in demanding healthcare careers, and managing their own personal and family responsibilities. I can help families think through their loved one's needs, connect them to resources and manage their loved one's plan of care. I can also help them think about ways they may address family dynamics and juggle their other obligations, issues that can help or hinder the loved one receiving support."

Caregiving families in Massachusetts may also turn to the Massachusetts Office of Elder Affairs' caregiver support page (http://www.mass.gov/elders/caregiver-support/) and home care page (http://www.mass.gov/elders/homecare/). On a national level, The National Family Caregivers Association (http://caregiveraction.org/) offers numerous resources for family caregivers.

Mayor Della Chiesa Calls Meeting On Transportation

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa today called a meeting of South Shore officials for Saturday morning at City Hall to discuss the transportation issue.

Being invited to the meeting to be held in the Council Chamber, are members of the Quincy City Council, the boards of selectmen from Braintree, Weymouth and Hingham, the two state senators and eight state representatives from the area. The meeting was to be open to the public.

A request for such a meeting was made by Rep. James McIntyre (D-Quincy) as a result of last Tuesday's referendum on which the voters favored Budd Car service 13,315 to 11,533 and opposed rapid transit more than four to one and express buses by nearly two to one.

The mayor said the meeting would be a prelude to a meeting with Governor John A. Volpe, which was requested by Senator Thomas S. Burgin.

MAYOR WHITON AT RITES FOR 43RD STRAIGHT YEAR

Joseph L. Whiton, 88, Quincy's World War I Mayor who never missed an Armistice Day, now Veterans' Day, and citywide observance in Quincy since its inception 43 years ago, was again at the exercises at the Adams Academy grounds.

Mr. Whiton carried a cane dated 1857, which belonged to an uncle of his. With former Mayor Whiton was Senator Thomas S. Burgin, a World War II mayor, who later resigned the office to join the Navy as an officer.

Quincy Residents Make Music With ENC Orchestra

Student/Community Ensemble Performs Winter Concert Dec. 2

Eastern Nazarene College's Symphonic Winds ensemble has grown considerably in recent years.

Originally formed in 2002 to support ENC's music education and performance majors, the ensemble now counts among its members both adults and talented high school students from more than 10 surrounding communities – including 13 members who live in Quincy and join with ENC students and other community musicians to rehearse each Wednesday evening in the college's Cove Fine Arts Center.

Some of the current ensemble members, in fact, participated in the ensemble when they were high school students and have returned after attending college. From homemakers and teachers to nurses, technicians, businessmen and retirees, the Symphonic Winds community performers come from all walks of life, said Prof. Stephen Bell, the group's director.

"It has been very rewarding to see how the community has supported the music students here at ENC," said Bell, an ENC alumnus who served as Rockland High School's band director for 33 years. "It is especially rewarding to see former students return to this group after they have graduated from college."

Bell said the ensemble's weekly, two-hour rehearsals are filled with learning opportunities for young and old alike. ENC senior Lauren Hammer, for example, is working on her conducting skills by leading the Symphonic Winds through pieces such as Clare Grundman's "The Blue and the Gray," which will be presented as part of the ensemble's winter concert on Friday, Dec. 2 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cove Fine Arts Center on Wendell Ave.

In addition to performing, community musicians help music education majors enjoy a first-class ensemble experience, Bell said, thereby better preparing them for their future roles as teachers.

"The orchestra's community members have provided an invaluable service to ENC and the students who come here to receive a quality music education," he said. "Without their continued support, our students would not have the opportunities they need to be successful in their own teaching careers."

Eastern Nazarene College's Symphonic Winds Ensemble includes 13 Quincy residents who rehearse and perform with college musicians. They are: Caitlin O'Regan, Ruth Levitsky, Johanna McGroarty, Emily O'Regan, Amy O'Regan, Lori Hagborg, Beth Skulnik, Dan Hamburg, Kathy Brink, Richard Hagborg, Chad Reid, Carolyn McDonagh and Tony Vento.

Palaver Strings Orchestra Free Concert Nov. 19 At St. Chrysostom's Church

Palaver Strings, a new professional orchestra based in Boston, will present a free concert at St. Chrysostom's Church, 1 Linden St., Quincy, on Saturday, Nov. 19 at 8 p.m.

The concert will feature music by Mendelssohn, Purcell, and Britten. St. Chrysostom's Church is fully accessible. More information may be found at www.stcquincy.org or by calling 617-472-0737.

Palaver Strings, a musician-led string orchestra, is dedicated to the collaborative interpretation of classical masterworks. Each member of Palaver Strings is passionate about taking classical music beyond the concert hall to engage with diverse and new audiences. It is in this personal and unconventional setting that Palaver Strings is able to use music to aid the discussion of social issues, promote education and healing, and inspire our peers and community to support the arts.

In addition to the concert at St. Chrysostom's, Palaver Strings will be giving a free concert for children at the Thomas Crane Public Library on Saturday, Nov. 19 at 10:30 a.m.

They will also be performing at Merrymount Elementary School the day before.

Masons Donate $3,000 To QHS Science Department

The Quincy Rural Masonic Lodge recently made a donation of $3,000 to the Quincy High School Science Department.

The donation was facilitated by retired QHS Science Teacher, David Smith. Funds will go towards science fair student grants to directly assist students purchasing supplies and equipment, annual scholarships for science students, and classroom science/technology purchases for a biotechnology engineering program and conversion of an earth science classroom into a biology lab. All of which enhances the science and technology curriculum in over seventy science course offerings at Quincy High School.

This year, Quincy High School will have over 100 students, from grades 9-12, presenting their research at the tenth annual STEM (Science Technology Engineering and Mathematics) Fair on Wednesday, Feb. 15. The event will be held on the third and fourth floor of Quincy High School's A-Wing from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Each year Quincy High School shows a great diversity of projects and the student's enthusiasm carries the evening as they celebrate their accomplishments with the community.

Quarry Museum Meets Nov. 17

The public is invited to attend the Quincy Quarry & Granite Workers Museum meeting Thursday, Nov. 17 at 7 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

The program will feature the showing of several interesting videos on stone working tools, stone cutting and sculpturing. A short presentation on activities and plans of the Museum will be presented.

Questions and comments from members and the public will be addressed.

QHS Class Of 1991 25th Reunion Nov. 26

Quincy High School's Class of 1991 will host its 25th Class Reunion on Saturday, Nov. 26th at 7 p.m. at Maggy's Lounge, 609 Washington St., in Quincy Point.

City Council Recognizes Festival Of Diwali

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council recently recognized the festival of Diwali, and honored the local woman who helped lead the charge to give the holiday its own U.S. Postal Service stamp.

Diwali is the festival of lights celebrated worldwide by followers of Hinduism, Jainism and Sikhism, and signifies the victory of light over darkness and good over evil. Diwali started Oct. 30 this year.

Councillor Joseph Finn opened the council's Oct. 17 meeting by recognizing the upcoming holiday.

"The symbols of light and darkness are some of the most ancient religious symbols that go across all religious faiths. They tend to symbolize the ultimate human hope and belief in good over evil," he said. "I think those sentiments, given everything going on in the world, are very strong and powerful sentiments to have."

Finn, who grew up in the western part of Massachusetts, said he was always amazed by the religious diversity seen in Quincy and how followers of different faiths can work together.

"In one city you have so many different religious cultures and traditions and communities coming together and living not based on the things that they disagree about, not based on their various theologies, but based on the things they agree upon," Finn said.

"They agree it's good to have a safe, inviting community in which to raise their community, that it's good to have a place where one can pursue liberty, the pursuit of happiness, to develop comfortable living and hope that they might be able to pass on to their children a life that is better than their own."

Finn also recognized the work of Quincy resident Kumu Gupta, presenting her a citation for the work she did in getting the USPS to issue a Diwali stamp earlier this month and thanked her efforts in promoting religious understanding in the community.

"In recognition of your work in the Hindu community, creating interfaith dialogues throughout the city of Quincy and promoting the U.S. Postal Service commemorating the festival of Diwali, the Hindu festival of lights, with a forever stamp, thank you," Finn said, reading the citation.

Gupta said it was no small feat to get the stamp created – the USPS receives 40,000 stamp suggestions annually, and a special committee choses about 25 for approval by the postmaster general.

"It's been many, many years the Indian community has been trying [to get] the U.S. Postal Service to issue a stamp. They have stamps for Kwanzaa, Hanukkah, Christmas, Eid – we didn't have one for Diwali," Gupta said. "Finally, we have a stamp.

"They unveiled the stamp Oct. 5 at the Indian consulate in New York and I was there. Within the day of issuing, a hundred thousand stamps had already been sold in the United States, so you can see how eagerly people were waiting for the stamp."

Beef Barley Soup

By MARIE

On these cooler days there is nothing like the smell of soup bubbling away on the stove. And one of my families favorites is today's recipe for Beef Barley Soup.

At times when I watch a cooking show or see a recipe for soup I must say there are so many steps and ingredients when in fact making soup can be so much simpler than that.

Anyway, I made this soup from a recipe that my daughter Nancy makes all of the time. The combination of barley and beef (with the bone on) is amazing and you don't need much to go with it since the taste of the beef is so intense it almost needs nothing else.

You can buy beef with bone-on in some markets and you need to remember that the bones should have meat on them as bones with meat makes for a very tasty soup.

RECIPE:

8 pieces of bone with meat
1 and 1/2 tablespoons of Better than Bullion (you can use bouillon cubes but Better than Bullion is much better
1 cup of barley
1 small onion chopped
2 stocks of carrots sliced - not to be put in until the soup is half done.

In a large pan place bones with meat and cover with water; add onion, cover and then add Better than Bullion. Cook and stir occasionally for 2 to 2 and ½ hours or until meat is very tender. Half way through add sliced carrots.

Once soup is bubbling and meat is tender add one cup of barley. On low heat stir and cook until barley is tender, this takes 20 or 30 minutes.

Enjoy!

Millet Fritters

By SUSIE

Have you ever cooked with millet?

Millet is a very small, round grain with a history that traces back thousands of years. It was the chief grain in China before rice became popular and continues to sustain people in Africa, China, Russia, and India, among other places.

Millet is an extremely nutritious and hardy crop that grows well under harsh or dry conditions, both of which contribute to its widespread use and popularity around the world.

Millet can be used in porridges, cereal, soups and breads. It is a delicious wheat free substitution for couscous because of its consistency. Always rinse before cooking, and use 1 part Millet to 2 parts liquid. It is that easy! You can find it in the bulk section of the health food store.

I like to cook it in broth, and add a bunch of fresh herbs then put a pat of butter on it with some pecorino romano cheese as a side dish. But here is a recipe for Millet Fritters that I hope you will enjoy.

1/3 cup millet cooked according to package directions (I cook mine in salted broth for more flavor, and cook it a little extra to help to get it "Mushy" so it is a good consistency to make the fritters.)

1/4 cup onion, chopped fine
1/4 cup red bell pepper, chopped fine
1 garlic clove, minced
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 teaspoon dried basil
2 tablespoons or so of fresh parsley
1 egg, beaten
1 teaspoon sea salt, 1/2 teaspoon pepper
3 or so tablespoons romano or parmesan cheese

Simply mix all ingredients together (when millet is cooled) well with wooden spoon until nicely incorporated. Form into patties (a couple of tablespoons is a good size) and cook in heated skillet in some olive oil. Do not flip until edges are browned, but not burned. Flip over and cook until the other side is done. Drain on paper towel lined plate. This recipe is great with a spoonful of tomato sauce and a sprinkling of cheese! Enjoy!

State House Hosts NQHS Photography Students

Students from North Quincy High School's Photography class had an opportunity to display their artwork in the east wing of the Massachusetts State House over the summer.

The photographs – from students Cora Cluett, Victoria Huang, Abigail Koch, Charles O'Brien, and Quynh Vu – were displayed in the State House's East Wing, a hall that encompasses the offices of state Sen. John F. Keenan (D – Quincy) and four other state senators from Andover, Arlington, Pittsfield, and Salem.

Last week Keenan invited the students of the photography classes to visit the State House, and to view the artwork on display, including their own photographs. He said the photographs are part of a rotating display, showcasing artwork from the districts represented by each of the five Senators who share the wing.

"We're each proud of the districts we represent, and we try to find opportunities to promote individuals and institutions from our communities," Keenan said. "In this case we have some excellent work that highlights not only the caliber of our students, but also the quality of Quincy's public schools and the diverse extra-curricular programs they offer."

The students were accompanied by their teacher, Michael Hanson.

The photographs currently on display will be rotated in the next few weeks. Past displays assembled by Keenan's office have featured local amateur artists, and a service provider in Quincy that uses art for therapy purposes. Keenan said that South Shore artwork has been featured in other areas of the State House as well, including paintings from the Braintree Art Association that were exhibited in the Senate Chamber last winter.

Ayers Visits Squantum To Support Literacy

State Rep. Bruce Ayers recently visited Squantum Elementary School to deliver a new bike to second grade student Raylee Gunter as part of an annual literacy contest at the school.

Raylee was one of many students that participated in the annual Race to Read Summer Reading Contest encouraging students to read during the summer months. Squantum students were asked to track the number of books they read over the summer as part of the school's summer reading program. Rep. Ayers generously donates a bike every year as the top prize and incentive for students to read over the summer.

"We are very fortunate to have Representative Ayers supporting this program and literacy at our school," said Principal Stephen Sylvia. "I am so proud of all our students participating in this program and more importantly reading over the summer."

Know Your Blood Sugar Numbers: Use Them To Manage Your Diabetes

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

RUTH JONES

Checking your blood sugar, also called blood glucose, is an imperative part of diabetes care.

Your blood sugar numbers indicate how well your diabetes is controlled. Successfully managing your diabetes means that you have less chance of having serious health complications, such as kidney disease, vision loss, and nerve and blood vessel damage.

Verifying your blood sugar levels, enables you to see what causes your numbers to rise and fall. For instance, you might see an elevation in your blood sugar when you are stressed or eat certain foods. On the other hand, you may see that when you take your medicine and are active, your numbers improve. This information allows you to distinguish what is successfully working for you and what needs to be modified.

There are several ways to measure blood sugar, two very common methods are:

• Finger stick blood sugar checks that you perform on yourself. These inform you what your blood sugar level is at the time you test.

•The A1C (glycosylated hemoglobin), a test done in a lab or at your provider's office. The A1C test tells you and your health care team your average blood sugar level over the past 2 to 3 months.

The device you use to check your blood sugar is a blood glucose meter. There are many varied types of glucose meters. Most use a small drop of blood from your finger to measure your blood sugar level. You can acquire the meter and necessary supplies in a drug store or by mail.

Be sure to read the directions that accompany your meter to learn how to properly check your blood sugar. Your health care team or pharmacist can also instruct you how to use your meter. It is important to log your blood sugar readings and take your blood sugar record and meter to each visit and talk about your results with your provider.

For optimal control, people with diabetes have blood sugar targets that they try to reach at different times of the day. These targets are:

• Right before your meal: 80 to 130

• Two hours after the start of the meal: Below 180

The amount of times that you check your blood sugar will depend on the type of diabetes that you have and the types of medicine you take to treat your diabetes.

For example, people who take insulin may need to check more often than people who do not take insulin. Your health care team should assist you in devising a plan regarding how often and when to check your blood sugar. The common times for checking your blood sugar are when you first wake up (fasting), before a meal, 2 hours after a meal (postprandial) and at bedtime.

For many people with diabetes, the A1C goal is below 7. This number is different from the blood sugar numbers that you check each day. It also helps you and your team to decide on the type and amount of diabetes medicine you need. You and your health care team will decide on an A1C goal that is right for you.

You need to get an A1C test at least 2 times a year. You need it more often if:

•your number is higher than your goal number

•your diabetes treatment changes.

High blood sugar is also called hyperglycemia. It denotes that your blood sugar level is higher than your target level or over 180. Having high blood sugar levels over an extended period of time can lead to long-term, serious health problems.

If you experience symptoms of extreme fatigue, thirst, blurred vision, or feel the need to urinate more often than usual, your blood sugar may be elevated. Test your blood sugar and see if it is above your target level or over 180. If it is too high, one way to lower it is to exercise by taking a brisk walk. If your blood sugar is consistently running high or you don't know why it is elevated, contact your doctor.

Low blood sugar is also called hypoglycemia. This typically means your blood sugar level drops below 70.

Having low blood sugar is dangerous and needs to be treated immediately. Anyone with diabetes can experience a low blood sugar. Your chances of having low blood sugar escalate if you are taking insulin or certain pills for diabetes.

Skipping meals can also precipitate a hypoglycemic reaction. If you experience shaking, sweating, or extreme hunger, check your blood sugar. Even if you feel none of these symptoms, but think you may be suffering from a low blood sugar, check it.

It is essential for diabetics who are on any medicine for their blood sugar to carry supplies that can treat a hypoglycemic reaction. If your meter shows that your blood sugar is lower than 70, consider initiating one of the following remedies right away:

• chew 4 glucose tablets

• drink 4 ounces of fruit juice

• drink 4 ounces of regular soda, not diet soda

• chew 4 pieces of hard candy

After taking one of these treatments, wait for 15 minutes then re-check your blood sugar. Repeat these steps until your blood sugar is 70 or above.

After your blood sugar returns to 70 or higher, eat a snack if your next meal is more than 1 hour away. If you are experiencing low blood sugars frequently, you may need to discuss modifications in your medicines or changes in your diet with your provider.

Medicare, Medicaid and most private insurance plans pay for the A1C test and a portion of the cost of supplies for checking your blood sugar. Check your plan or ask your health care team for help finding low cost or free supplies.

Taking action will help you be healthy today and stay healthy in the future.

Why I Walked

By PELLY CHANG DMD

PELLY CHANG

As a busy dentist who also teaches at dental school, I don't have a lot of free time to volunteer. But I will make one exception: cancer. It's a cause I can't ignore.

Cancer got me walking on a recent Sunday with 9,000 colleagues, survivors, families, friends, doctors, nurses, researchers in the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk presented by Hyundai.

It was a crisp, cloudless day at the start of New England's best season, and I could see the maples along the route just beginning to turn. Dressed in the brightest colors we had, some of us walked the full Boston Marathon course – yes, 26.2 miles. I chose the 5K route option and raised $2,900. Together, we are on our way to raising more than $8.3 million for cancer research and patient care at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

I had fun walking and laughing with my colleagues and friends from the women in dentistry committee of the Massachusetts Dental Society (MDS). Nevertheless, my thoughts were never far from my patients. Unfortunately, I see a lot of cancer in my work.

Nearly 50,000 people in the United States will be newly diagnosed with oral cancer this year, according to the Oral Cancer Foundation. A person dies from oral cancer every hour of every day, and some of it's avoidable. The causes include alcohol, tobacco and the HPV-16 virus, which also causes cervical cancer.

As my friends and I enjoyed one another's company on the course, my thoughts privately returned to a patient who recently passed away from cancer. He was grateful for his treatment at Dana-Farber and in hospice care. So I walked in his memory.

I also walked in memory of a beloved colleague at BU who passed away from cancer last August. And I walked in honor of our team's official Walk Hero, 5-year-old Gavin Strand, who has been diagnosed with acute lymphoblastic leukemia. He loves to play baseball and soccer and go to the beach. When Gavin grows up, he wants to be a fire chief. I want that for him.

I thought of a neighbor here in Quincy who is battling cancer, and I thought of myself and my loved ones who someday may be saved by Dana-Farber's care or research. About half of all men and one-third of all women in the US will develop cancer during their lifetimes.

I walked for all of these people while making sure to savor my life and health on such a beautiful Sunday in some of the nicest parts of the city. And it was easy to appreciate the day when I had the honor to meet so many fun new friends, especially the courageous survivors like Gavin.

My Walk team raised more than $60,000 this year. It's my first year for the team that has raised more than $214,000 for Dana-Farber since 2011.

I'm glad so much is going to cancer care and research. It's badly needed. I hope you never need it. That's why I walked.

Pelly Chang, DMD, is a Quincy dentist and a clinical associate professor at the Boston University School of Dental Medicine. She is a member of the MDS Miles and Smiles team for the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk presented by Hyundai.

Woodward School Students Reinterpret Susan B. Anthony's Historic Speech

The Woodward School, a 122-year-old independent college preparatory school for girls in the heart of Quincy Center, recognized this election season with an inspiring, dramatic reinterpretation of Susan B. Anthony's historic speech, after her arrest for casting an illegal vote in the presidential election of 1872.

Susan B. Anthony was a suffragist, Women's Rights Campaigner, Temperance Worker, Labor Activist, Educational Reformer, and Abolitionist. For her act of voting, Anthony was tried and fined $100, which she refused to pay.

Students and faculty were in attendance, as students Zoe Strassel (Quincy), Fiona Ozyurt-Powers (Dedham), and Hailey Peckham (Canton) served as readers, while students Angel Okeibunor (Quincy), Ronia Peterson (Randolph), and Jordan Cedrone (Braintree) served as movers creating tableaus, in this dramatic reinterpretation.

"We the people of the United States…we the whole people… not to the half of ourselves and the half of our posterity, but to the whole people - women as well as men… are women not persons? I hardly believe any of our opponents will have the hardihood to say they are not."

"She campaigned all across the country declaring Men their rights, and nothing more; women, their rights, and nothing less," recited the students.

Following the dramatic read, Headmaster Walter Hubley addressed the students asking, "By a show of hands, is the environment important to you? Are human rights important to you? Are animal rights important to you? Is the future of education important to you…"

The litany of questions was responded to with overwhelming agreement from students. Hubley then asked, "By a show of hands, do you feel government represents your values?", and almost every hand stayed down.

Hubley then requested a small group of students to stand apart from their fellow students and stated, "I do not have the solutions to all these concerns, but I do have an answer to why you may not feel government represents your values. This small group of your classmates beside me represents the 38.9% of 18-24 year-old citizens who will exercise their right to vote in this election." Hubley continued, "Fewer than half of that small group (15.9%) will vote in local city elections, where citizens receive most of their services from government.

"The good news is, the future has not happened yet, and what's past is not prologue. It is incumbent upon you to honor Susan B. Anthony's fight and change what happens next. Ms. Anthony's call to action is a call to vote" Hubley stated.

Civic engagement is a centerpiece of Woodward's mission of leadership. The Woodward School was teaching young women about public activism and civics 30 years before women had the right to vote.

Woodward's Theater Program compliments the school's strong college preparatory program for students in grades 6-12. Its next production will be The Crucible, open to the public, on Dec. 9 th and 10th at 7:30 pm at Woodward's Wesner Hall Art Center at 20 Greenleaf St., just around the corner from Woodward's 122-year-old original schoolhouse.

Admission is free to attendees of Woodward's Admissions Information Session on Friday Dec. 9th at 6 p.m. featuring a panel of students and faculty describing what makes The Woodward School unique.

Quincy Center Convenience Store Gets Beer, Wine License

By SCOTT JACKSON

City officials granted a retail beer and wine license to a convenience store inside the Munroe Building in Quincy Center over the objection of several residents and nearby business owners.

At their Nov. 1 meeting, the Board of License Commissioners unanimously approved a transfer of the retail beer and wine license previously held by Franklin Beer & Wine, 55 Franklin St., to Richdale Convenience at 1205 Hancock St.

The approval means Richdale Convenience, which is already open inside the Munroe Building, will soon be able to sell beer and wine on site. Sales of alcohol there will be permitted between 10 a.m. and 10 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and from noon to 6 p.m. on Sundays. Additional license board approval would be needed if the store's owner, Paritosh Patel, wished to sell beer and wine starting at 10 a.m. on Sundays.

Patel owns several Richdale stores on the North Shore, and also owns a liquor store at 380 Granite St. in Brewers Corner.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, the chairman of the license board, read six letters opposing the license transfer. Among those opposed were the owners of two other businesses in the Munroe Building.

Lisa Lamme, owner of Gypsy Kitchen at 1241 Hancock St., was one of those opposed. She said the immediate area in Quincy Center already has enough stores selling beer and wine – her shop sells wine and craft beer, and Goodies Minimart inside Presidents Place at 1250 Hancock St. does as well – and more unique retail is needed to improve the downtown.

"What is so revolutionary about another convenience store having a wine and malt license that is going to improve Quincy Center? Moving forward with this license transfer does not benefit the city that is creating unique shopping experiences for customers," Lamme said.

"Quincy needs to attract shopping boutiques, gift stores, clothing shops and other unique retail."

Lesley Tzanetos, owner of Gunther Tooties at 1253 Hancock St., said the area around the Quincy Center MBTA station is beset with vandalism, drug dealing, begging, and "unconscious drunk people laying around."

"We should work together to keep those bad behaviors out of the area [and] not encourage them by having another liquor store outside of the T station," Tzanetos said,

Squantum resident Faye Anderson also opposed the transfer in a letter to the board, saying Quincy should focus on other business types – a high-quality Thai restaurant or movie theater, for example – to boost the downtown.

"Another liquor license to a convenience store in the center of Quincy is redundant. Let's think of other types of businesses and services to revitalize the City of Presidents," Anderson said.

Rob Fleming, the attorney representing Patel, said the applicant has been proactive in addressing concerns regarding the Brewers Corner location and would be at the Quincy Center store as well – and said beer and wine would just be another product for Richdale's customers.

"It really has to be thought of as not just an entity or a store that sells beer and wine. This is a store of convenience. He services the residents of Munroe Place as well as others in the area. This is just another product he will be selling," Fleming said.

"He's been operating on Granite Street for the last 10 months. He's been proactive in doing things there to address any concerns that that area has had…I feel he'll do that here as well."

Patel said he plans to install additional surveillance cameras inside the store, and will use a special ID scanner to card all patrons under the age of 35.

Police Chief Paul Keenan said the beer and wine license would neither add to nor detract from the area, and would simply give Patel permission to sell additional items in his store.

"What he's looking to do is just sell two more products – essentially –beer and wine. We wouldn't be having this discussion if he was talking about milk and bread. He sells convenience items, beer and wine are a convenience item, so I don't have any real objection to it," Keenan said.

"I don't think it's going to add to the area, but I don't think it's going to detract from the area either."

In other business Nov. 1, the Board of License Commissioners:

Approved a common victualler license for Five Guys Burgers & Fries, which is set to open inside Presidents Place at 1250 Hancock St., in the storefront previously home to Weight Watchers. Owner Sean Olson said he hopes to open by the end of December and the Quincy Center location will offer the burgers, fries, shakes and free peanuts, which the chain is known for.

Returned the all alcohol license previously transferred to Beachcomber Bounty Inc. back to Boulevard Haven Inc., the operator of the now closed Beachcomber on Quincy Shore Drive. The two entities had reached an agreement to sell the Beachcomber that fell through once a man who collected $1.3 million from investors failed to show up at the closing earlier this fall. The man, who called himself Eugene Grathwohl, is wanted by police and believed to be behind fraud cases in New York and Florida.

Approved a one-day beer and wine license for the Houghs Neck Chili Fest, Jan. 28, 2017, at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave.

Continued to a future meeting the request of George Athanasopoulos for a common victualler license for the 1054 Hancock St., currently the Early American. The hearing was continued because the applicant was not present.

Lead Levels Force More Water Fountains Shut Off

By SCOTT JACKSON

Five water fountains at two school buildings have been shut off and will be replaced after testing found lead concentrations exceeding state limits.

School officials on Nov. 2 released the results of water testing undertaken earlier this fall at six schools: Clifford Marshall, Merrymount, Snug Harbor and Squantum elementaries, as well as Central and Point Middle Schools.

Three water fountains at Merrymount were shut off as a result of those tests. School officials said the fountains had lead concentrations of 17, 21 and 330 parts per billion (ppb) – the action level for lead in water is 15 ppb. The latter fountain also had a copper concentration of 2,800 ppb, more than twice the 1,300 ppb action level for that heavy metal.

Two fountains at Squantum have been disconnected as well. Those fountains had lead levels of 37 and 74 ppb.

In addition to the water fountains, eight sinks at Merrymount, 10 at Squantum and 11 at Snug Harbor had lead or copper concentrations above the action level. Those sinks have been labeled for hand washing only; officials have said neither lead nor copper is absorbed by the skin, so hand washing poses no health risk to students or staff.

None of the fountains or sinks at Clifford Marshall, Point Webster or Central had lead or copper levels above action levels.

The results posted Nov. 2 came one week after school officials released the first set of results, which included 10 schools. In that batch of results, four fountains at three schools were found to have lead levels exceeding state limits: Two at Bernazzani (37 and 74 ppb), one at Parker (29 ppb) and one at Atlantic (45 ppb).

Along with the four water fountains, hand-washing sinks at eight school in the first set of results had lead or copper concentrations exceeding the state limit – eight at Beechwood Knoll, 11 at Bernazzani, five at Montclair, one at Parker, seven at Wollaston, three at Atlantic, two at Broad Meadows and five at Sterling.

All the fountains and sinks at Atherton Hough and the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center checked out OK.

Results of testing at four buildings – Lincoln-Hancock, both high schools and the goals building – have yet to be released.

Officials in August announced every fountain and sink in the the city's schools would be tested for lead and copper as part of a $2 million state initiative. The samples were collected over several weeks in September and October.

DEP regulations only require communities to test for lead at two school buildings annually, and at two locations in those schools.

While Quincy's water supply does not contain lead, the heavy metal can be found in some buildings because of its use in pipes and solder. The use of lead in plumbing materials was banned in 1986.

City and school officials expected lead concentrations in excess of the action level at some fountains and sinks, given the age of some of the buildings and the number of fixtures sampled.

Suzanne Condon, a retired associate commissioner and director of environmental health for the state Department of Public Health, is assisting the city with the sampling program. She said the goal of health officials is always to eliminate any source of lead exposure to children, but noted the action levels are set very low purposely to provide a framework for response, not to indicate any immediate threat. Drinking water action levels are based on chronic, long-term exposure.

The most serious exposure route and health concern is children under the age of 6 being exposed to lead paint in their homes, Condon said.

The testing program at the 20 school buildings is part of a wider effort by the city to reduce and eliminate even minimal levels of lead through in the Quincy water system.

In addition to the expanded school testing program, Koch directed the Quincy Water and Sewer Department to more broadly identify residences in the city that may still have lead water service lines – the privately owned pipe that runs from the city system to faucets at homes.

The City Council on Oct. 3 approved Koch's request to spend up to $1.5 million – financed through an interest free loan from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority – to replace the remaining lead service lines in the city next year. Officials believe 141 lead service lines are still in use.

Offshore Wind Prospects Lecture Nov. 15

The Commonwealth's omnibus energy law, enacted last summer, will likely pave the way for three big offshore wind projects that promise to supply a total of 1,600 megawatts of electricity, or about 15 percent of the total Massachusetts load, according to Amber Hewett, regional campaign coordinator for the National Wildlife Fund.

Hewett will lecture on the energy law and offshore wind projects Tuesday, Nov. 15 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Quincy Climate Action Network is cosponsoring the lecture with the library

Offshore wind will bring major economic gains to the state, as well as huge gains in clean energy, said Hewett, who helped lead the NWF's campaign in support of the new law, which requires utilities to buy competitively priced electric power from wind projects in three federal lease areas off the Massachusetts coast.

Why would a wildlife organization get involved in an issue like energy production?

"It's really about climate change," Hewett said. "The NWF sees climate change as among the greatest threats to wildlife. We need to dramatically reduce our use of fossil fuels, and offshore wind is clearly part of the answer."

Transportation costs and the sheer size of the offshore wind projects will dictate that the turbines be built locally, fueling the growth of a new industry here, she added. Offshore wind, she said, is already booming in Western Europe, supporting some 75,000 jobs there.

As to the timing of the Massachusetts projects, she said, "As long as the bill is implemented on time, we could have offshore wind up and running by 2021 or 2022." The offshore wind developers, she said, "are ready to get started and place bids to be the developer that gets to do the first project. Now that the energy bill has been passed, we clean energy supporters need not to go away....We need to thank Governor Baker for his leadership on offshore wind and let him know we're excited to see it moving forward."

Winter Clothing Drive At Beth Shalom Blue Hills

As part of its "Third Thursday Community Service Mitzvah Program," Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills will join with Interfaith Social Services of Quincy to conduct a Winter Clothing Drive on Thursday, Nov. 17th.

The synagogue's Mitzvah Program, operating under the Jewish tenet that "performing good deeds is an obligation," hopefully will provide service to the community by both congregants and community members, and will include and involve others, including schools, houses of worship and organizations.

New and gently used winter clothes can be brought to Congregation Beth Shalom at 18 Shoolman Way (off Lodge Street) in Milton between 1 and 8:30 p.m. on Nov. 17. All types of clothing are needed for children, teenagers and adults: winter coats/jackets, tops, bottoms, shoes, boots, hats, gloves, etc., and all donations are greatly appreciated.

Those taking part are asked to bring donations in plastic bags and, if possible, sort the clothing before packing. Clothing will be delivered to Interfaith Social Services in Quincy on Friday, Nov. 18. Interfaith Social Services is a multi-service center helping South Shore families and individuals in need since 1947.

For more information about the Winter Clothing Drive or the synagogue's "Third Thursday Community Service Mitzvah Program," call 617-698-3394, email office@BethShalomBlueHills.org, or visit www.BethShalomBlueHills.org.

Seaside Gardeners Tree Lighting Nov. 27

The Seaside Gardeners of Squantum invite the community to their 17th annual Christmas tree lighting ceremony on Sunday, Nov. 27.

The ceremony begins at 4:30 p.m. and the tree lighting is at 5 p.m. Santa arrives at 5 p.m. as well.

The event takes place at the Daniel Gilbert Memorial Park at Dorchester Street and East Squantum Street. Free cookies and hot chocolate will be served by the Garden Club members.

If the Quincy Christmas Parade is cancelled due to inclement weather Nov. 27, then the tree lighting ceremony is also cancelled.

All are welcome.

NFPA Chamber Partner

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce announces the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) headquartered in Quincy, has been named a Director's Partner.

The NFPA, a global, nonprofit organization devoted to eliminating death, injury, property and economic loss due to fire, electrical and related hazards, is one of approximately 60 businesses to hold this position with the South Shore Chamber. Partners take a leading role in promoting the Chamber's regional development, advocating for the South Shore and supporting many of the programs enjoyed by the Chamber's members.

Founded in 1896, NFPA delivers information and knowledge through more than 300 consensus codes and standards, research, training, education, outreach and advocacy; and by partnering with others who share an interest in furthering the NFPA mission.

Peter Forman, CEO of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, said, "We're happy to announce the NFPA as a new Director's Partner. The association has maintained a long and strong reputation in this region; we look forward to the NFPA contributing to our efforts to make the South Shore an even better place to live and work."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE DIABETES FACTOR

Diabetes has been associated with numerous wide-ranging health risks, and tooth loss may be one of them. When researchers reviewed data collected from more than 37,000 adults aged 25 years and older, they found that diabetics lost their teeth at twice the rate of non-diabetics. In addition, the study revealed that people with periodontal (gum) disease were more likely to have diabetes than people with healthy gums. While researchers could not pinpoint a specific causal link between diabetes and tooth loss, they emphasized that their findings were consistent with other chronic diseases (such as heart disease, respiratory disease, and cognitive disease) that are also associated with poor oral health. Regular dental visits are as important as exams by other doctors.

People with diabetes have special needs, and your dentist and hygienist are equipped to meet those needs - with your help. Keep us informed of any changes in your condition and any medication you are taking. If you would like further information or to schedule an appointment, please call us at 617 479-6220. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where comfort, care, and convenience make the difference. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist.

P.S. Previous studies have found that people with diabetes are less likely to floss and brush as often as people without diabetes. They are also more likely to skip annual dental exams.

City Receives $441,000 For Seawall Project

By SCOTT JACKSON

A state grant will provide Quincy with funds to design and permit more than a mile of seawall repairs and improvements along the Adams Neck and Houghs Neck coastline to make the barrier more resilient as the city prepares for climate change.

Matthew Beaton, the state's energy and environmental affairs secretary, announced the $441,000 grant Nov. 2. The money is from the state's Dam and Seawall Repair or Removal Fund.

The funds Quincy received will be used for the design and permitting of repairs and replacement of 6,000 linear feet of seawall in Adams Shore and Houghs Neck, facing Quincy Bay. The seawalls in place there protect the shoreline, residential homes, public utilities, and critical transportation and evacuation routes, state officials said.

The seawalls will be repaired and raised to accommodate future sea-level rise and impacts from the changing climate, including increased frequency and intensity of storms, according to state officials. One of the greatest threats to the project area is coastal flooding from a storm surge. The potential for storm surge flooding extends well inland over much of the project area. Only a small section of Houghs Neck and Adams Shore have sufficient elevation to avoid flooding during a category 1-4 hurricane. For the majority of this area, the seawall provides a first line of defense during these powerful storm events.

"This program is another true testament of the Baker administration's commitment to working together with cities and towns across the Commonwealth to protect and improve vital infrastructure," Mayor Thomas Koch said in a statement.

"This is a model for how state and local partnerships should work, providing the design and engineering funding that we can now leverage with our own local investment to repair seawalls in some of our most vulnerable coastal neighborhoods."

Chris Walker, a spokesman for Koch, said the design of the repairs and improvements should be finished by the end of the current fiscal year on June 30, 2017. Work on the seawalls would then take place later in 2017 or 2018. There is no estimate for how much the work would cost, though it is expected to be a multi-million dollar project, Walker said. The project will be included as part of the mayor's new capital plan.

The mayor included an assessment of the city's seawalls as part of his 2011 capital plan, and seawall projects elsewhere in the city were completed under that program. The city, Walker said, is now looking to address other projects that will require a larger investment.

In total, Gov. Charlie Baker's administration awarded more than $10 million in grants and loans to communities Nov. 2 for seawall and dam projects, including money for seawall projects in Marshfield, Plymouth and Scituate and dams in Holbrook and Weymouth.

"Through the Dam and Seawall Repair or Removal Fund, we hope to protect our communities and natural resources from the effects of strong storms and ensure dams and seawalls across the state are not a threat to public safety," Baker said.

"Our administration is focused on proactively increasing the resiliency of the commonwealth's infrastructure and helping cities and towns prepare for the impacts of climate change."

"Collaboration with cities and towns across the commonwealth is a key component of the Baker-Polito administration's efforts to combat and prepare for the impacts of climate change, improve ecological conditions, and protect our natural resources," Beaton added.

"The funds awarded from the dam and seawall program will allow municipalities to take crucial measures to both prepare for extreme weather scenarios, as well as improve the resiliency of vital infrastructure."

Members of Quincy's delegation on Beacon Hill welcomed the announcement.

"I've seen the devastating impact of storm events on our communities," said Rep. Ron Mariano, the House majority leader. "This funding is critical in helping to protect our coastal cities and towns and the safety of our local residents. Dam and seawall repair are important strategies to help our municipalities prepare for the impacts of climate change."

"With my hometown being a coastal city, I know firsthand how damaging tough weather and flooding can be to those living and working nearby," Sen. John Kecnan said. "Dam and seawall repairs are critical infrastructure needs in Quincy and Holbrook, two communities I represent, and were priorities we focused on in the 2014 environmental bond bill.

"I'm pleased the governor has committed to investing in these priorities. These funds go a long way to help reconstruct a vital seawall in Quincy, and repair a weakened dam that is posing risk to homes and businesses in Holbrook. It is vital that we work together at the state level to keep meeting such needs, and I look forward to continuing our work with the administration in this area."

"Living my entire life in a coastal community, sea walls are essential in protecting our community during major storm events," Rep. Tackey Chan said. "This funding will help protect a key access point between Adams Shore and Houghs Neck."

STATE GRANT of $441,000 will pay for the design and permitting of 6,000 linear feet of seawall repair and replacement work along the coast of Adams Shore and Houghs Neck. The design should be completed by the start of the new fiscal year in July, with construction taking place in 2017 or 2018. Pictured (from left) are: Matthew Beaton, the state's energy and environmental affairs secretary; Rep. Tackey Chan; Ward 1 City Councillor Margaret Laforest; Mayor Thomas Koch; and Sen. John Keenan in front of a portion of the seawall that will be repaired.

ENC Grant To Explore Gender-Based Violence

Eastern Nazarene College was among a select group of colleges to receive a national grant to explore and address issues of campus gender-based violence, the Christian liberal arts college announces.

Awarded by the Avon Foundation for Women, the "Changing the Narrative on Campus Gender-based Violence" grant enabled ENC faculty, administrators and security personnel to attend a two-day National Leadership Institute conference in Boston designed to help colleges develop plans for preventing and addressing gender-based violence and sexual assaults on campus. ENC was one of just 20 colleges nationwide selected to receive the grant.

BID Hospital – Milton Earns 'A' Grade For Patient Safety

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton (BID-Milton) has been recognized for its commitment to patient safety with an "A" grade in the Leapfrog Group's Fall 2016 Hospital Safety Score, which rates how well hospitals protect patients from preventable medical errors, injuries and infections.

This is the third consecutive Leapfrog report that BID-Milton has earned an "A" grade.

An "A" grade is one of the most significant honors a hospital can achieve and one of the most important indicators of patient safety. Developed under the guidance of an expert panel, the Leapfrog Hospital Safety Grade uses 30 measures of publicly available hospital safety data to assign A, B, C, D and F grades to more than 2,600 U.S. hospitals twice per year. It is calculated by top patient safety experts, peer-reviewed and fully transparent.

"At BID-Milton, patient safety is at the core of everything we do as we strive to deliver the highest quality care while providing an extraordinary patient experience," said Ashley Yeats, MD, vice president of healthcare quality and clinical integration and chief medical officer. "This award is a direct result of our staff's daily commitment to patient safety and excellent clinical care."

Added Leah Binder, president and CEO of the Leapfrog Group: "Protecting patients from harm is the most important charge for any hospital. We recognize and appreciate Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital – Milton's vigilance and continued dedication to keeping its patients safe."

In addition to the "A" grade from the Leapfrog Group, BID-Milton was recognized last August with a 4 star rating, on a scale of one to five, by Hospital Compare, a federal government, consumer-oriented website created by Medicare and the Hospital Quality Alliance. BID-Milton was the only hospital in the greater South Shore area to earn four stars. No hospital in the area achieved five stars.

To see BID-Milton's full score and to access consumer-friendly tips for patients and loved ones visiting the hospital, visit www.hospitalsafetyscore.org.

CHARLETTE HINES

Three Join Manet Health Staff

Manet Community Health Center announces three new members of its staff.

They are:

Shiun-ru Jessica Chen, MD; Tanya Bibby, PA-C; and Charlette Hines, FNP-BC.

Dr. Chen specializes in internal medicine and sees adult patients at Manet's practice sites in Taunton and North Quincy.

Dr. Chen earned her medical degree at the University of Tennessee Health Sciences Center in Memphis, Tennessee, where she was a Dr. WH Pistole Scholarship recipient. She completed her internship and residency in internal medicine at the University of Massachusetts Memorial Medical Center.

Dr. Chen speaks fluent Mandarin and is proficient in French. In her spare time, she enjoys cooking, photography, playing basketball and singing in her church choir.

Bibby is a certified physician assistant (PA-C) and sees family medicine patients of all ages at Manet's practice site in Hull.

A native of Hingham and current resident of Hull, Bibby earned her Master of Science in Physician Assistant studies at the New York Institute of Technology in Old Westbury, New York, where she received a Graduate Scholar Award.

She completed her clinical rotations at hospitals in and around New York City. She received her Bachelor Science in Exercise and Health Science from the University of Massachusetts, Boston.

Bibby is a member of the American Academy of Physician Assistants and the Massachusetts Association of Physician Assistants. She also is certified by the American Heart Association in Advanced Cardiac Life support and Pediatric Advance Life Support and she is an ACSM Certified Personal trainer.

Bibby was a competitive figure skater before entering graduate school and continues to skate for fun.

Hines is a certified family nurse practitioner and she will see patients of all ages at Manet's practice sites in Taunton and Houghs Neck.

Hines has a strong background in community health, working as a project coordinator for the Tufts University Friedman School of Nutrition Science and Policy and a health educator at the Dana Farber Cancer Institute on a number of community-based research programs. Her work there brought her to community health centers and sparked her interest in nursing.

Hines earned both her Bachelor of Science and Master of Science degrees in Nursing at Regis College. She also holds a Bachelor of Arts in Psychology and Neuroscience from Williams College. She is certified by the American Nurses Credentialing Center.

She lives in Brockton, and is the mother of two children – nine year old Shauna and 19 month old Cameron

'Kids Substance Use' Topic Sunday

Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills continues its Sunday Brunch Speaker Series Nov. 13 with the topic "Substance Use Prevention, Trends and Treatments: Why and What Even Elementary School Parents Need to Know."

Main speaker will be Dr. Margie Skeer, assistant professor of Public Health and Community Medicine at Tufts University School of Medicine, and Beth Shalom-Blue Hills congregant. Dr. Skeer's current research focuses on substance misuse and prevention, and the role of the family in misuse prevention among adolescents.

Also available to answer questions will be Deborah Milbauer, a Public Health Prevention Professional with a specialty in behavioral health, and a consultant for the Milton Substance Abuse Prevention Coalition. She is also a long-time Temple member.

Another contributor will be Dr. Jon Pincus, M.D., who will offer a physician's perspective. Dr. Pincus is the Internal Medicine Medical Director at Codman Sq. Health Center, and he ran the center's Office Based Opioid Treatment Program from 2002-16. He is also the Temple's VP of Education.

Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills invites the public to its Brunch Speaker Series which begins at 10:15 a.m., with the speaker starting at approximately 11 a.m.

A $5 donation for the brunch is requested to defray food costs, and a call or email to the congregation office is appreciated for planning. The speaker portion can be attended for free.

The synagogue is at 18 Shoolman Way (off Lodge Street) in Milton. The limited parking is suggested for handicapped and elderly, with overflow parking on Pleasant Street and Edge Hill Road. No parking on Lodge or Maitland Streets.

For more information, call 617-698-3394, email office@BethShalomBlueHills.org, or visit www.BethShalomBlueHills.org.

Ecumenical Thanksgiving Service Nov. 22

The annual Quincy Point Ecumenical Thanksgiving Service will take place at Quincy Point Congregational Church (QPCC), on Tuesday, Nov. 22nd at 7:30 p.m.

St. Joseph's Parish will co-host with QPCC and special music of the season will be sung during the service by choirs of both Churches. The homilist will be Rev. Dr. Stan Duncan, Interim Pastor at QPCC. The collection taken will go to St. Joseph's Food Pantry, as they serve the needy of the Quincy Point area.

As is the tradition, a Community Service Award is presented to an individual who has been of great service to the community. This year's award recipient is Rev. Ann Suzedell in recognition of her dedication to Quincy Point Congregational Church and her generous volunteer efforts to the community.

Refreshments will be served, in the church hall, following the service. All are welcome.

There will be bus service provided for residents of 1000 Southern Artery.

Bus service will be as follows:

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

SUSTAINING PERFORMANCE

The relationship between chiropractic and fitness has been redefined. Although most chiropractors still focus on helping people prevent and recover from back and joint injuries and misalignments, more attention is being focused on preventing injuries among exercisers and athletes who want to preserve their fitness. This trend is born of greater interest in exercise and healthy lifestyles. Exercise-minded individuals are likely to find that they can learn a lot about their bodies' structure from a chiropractor, who has a great deal of knowledge and experience with biomechanics. A chiropractor can assess problems and weaknesses as well as design a detailed program to meet active people's needs. Along with good nutrition, exercise is a key factor in maintaining health.

Let the staff of professionals at FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC help you achieve optimum health. We promote a drugless, non-invasive form of health care that addresses your lifestyle and any physical issues affecting your joints and spine through procedures such as custom exercise routines. Call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. Make regular chiropractic care your first choice, not a last resort. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we're currently accepting new patients. We offer computerized spinal scans.

P.S. A chiropractor can provide runners and gym goers with valuable insights into their musculoskeletal systems that can improve their performance.

The MBTA has already announced plans to redevelop the North Quincy station's parking lot. The MBTA Fiscal and Management Control Board in April awarded lease rights to the firms Bozzuto Development and Atlantic Development. The developers are backing a $205 million proposal to bring 579 residential units and 40,000 square feet of retail space to the station.

The MBTA is expected to reach similar agreements for development at the Wollaston and Quincy Adams stations in the next three to five years, mayoral spokesman Chris Walker told the council in October.

The MBTA owns the property at the three stations, and is responsible for finding would-be developers for that land. Special legislation approved in 1967 mandates that any construction over the air rights at the four stations in Quincy must be approved by both the mayor and City Council, and those developments must conform to city regulations, including zoning, building and fire codes.

Walker said the City Council's role in approving developments over the air rights would not be changed by the proposed new zoning rules.

The public hearing on the proposed new transit-oriented districts is set for 6:15 p.m. Thursday in the Great Hall of the James R. McIntyre Government Center (Old City Hall) at 1305 Hancock St.

Before the public hearing on the zoning proposal starts, a public hearing on an amendment to the special state legislation meant to bolster the redevelopment of Quincy Center will be held. That public hearing starts at 6 p.m.

Koch introduced a home rule petition to the City Council in October that seeks a series of edits to the 2011 special act, known as the Act Facilitating Urban Redevelopment in the City of Quincy.

The amendment to the 2011 act is necessary because it was written to reflect the city's plan at the time, which included a single master developer – Street-Works – responsible for the entirety of the Quincy Center project. The new plan for the downtown includes multiple developers, and the proposed changes to the act are intended to reflect that.

Following the two public hearings, the council's ordinance committee and downtown and economic growth committees will hold a joint meeting to review both items. At the joint committee meeting, councillors will also review an order that would authorize the MBTA to lease air rights to Bozzuto Development and Atlantic Development for their project at the North Quincy station.

The full council will then meet in a special session, set to begin at 7:30 p.m., to review all three items.

Toys For Tots Drive At Registry Of Deeds

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell announces the Registry will be sponsoring its 10th Annual U.S. Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots drive.

"The Registry of Deeds is truly honored to partner with a longstanding charity like the Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots drive. The program dates back to 1947 and has helped children all over the country. In 2015, Toys for Tots collected 18 million gifts and distributed them to 7 million children. Throughout the past decade the Registry has been extremely grateful to play a tiny role in their success," O'Donnell said.

The U.S. Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots program's mission is to help less fortunate children throughout the United States experience the joy and happiness associated with Christmas. The program was established in 1947 when the wife of a Marine major wanted to donate a Raggedy Ann doll for Christmas and couldn't find an organization to take it. Since then nearly a half billion gifts have been donated through the program.

To this end, donations of new toys and games for toddlers and children up to age ten can be brought directly to the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds Building located at 649 High St. in Dedham from Monday, Nov. 21 until noon on Wednesday, Dec. 14.

A marked donation bin will be set-up in the lobby which is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

"We all have the power to make a child's Christmas something special by just dropping off one present. And that might make it the best Christmas gift you gave yourself this holiday season," O'Donnell said.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County.

Residents in need of assistance can contact the Registry of Deeds Customer Service Center at (781) 461-6101, or email us at registerodonnell@norfolkdeeds.org.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Tuesday, Oct. 25, at approximately 2 p.m., Officers Donnelly and Brandolini were dispatched to the area of the Thomas Crane Library at 40 Washington St. for a report of a disorder.

Upon arrival, the Officers' attention were drawn to a woman exiting her vehicle on Washington Street. She said she called the Police because her ex-boyfriend started an argument with her, even though she was there solely to drop off a winter coat for him. She pointed him out so Officer Brandolini went over to get his account of what transpired.

She told Officer Donnelly that her ex boyfriend immediately began yelling at her that the vehicle that she was driving was his and not hers. The caller said it was at this time that the ex-boyfriend's sister came off of the side walk, went over to the driver's side door and started to punch her on the left side of her face multiple times. The sister then reached into the passenger door of the vehicle and attempted to take the keys to the vehicle.

As the sister was doing this, the ex-boyfriend approached the front passenger door window and broke the vent shade. The ex boyfriend then opened the front passenger door and elbowed her in the right cheek area as he attempted to take the keys. It was at this time that they stopped their attack and the sister fled the area.

Officer Donnelly then interviewed the ex-boyfriend, who said that she did bring him a winter coat and they did argue about who owned the car. According to the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles, the caller is the owner of the vehicle. There were two witnesses who approached the officers and confirmed that the ex-boyfriend and his sister both assaulted the caller.

The ex-boyfriend was placed under arrest and checked for weapons after being handcuffed. He told the officers he had 2 1/2 Seroquel pills in his left front pocket and had a prescription for the pills but does not know where it is. The caller/ victim was advised of her rights to get a restraining order.

LT. DAN MINTON

The sister was not located, however, the ex-boyfriend, a 51-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with assault and battery on a family/ household member, malicious destruction of a motor vehicle and possession of Class E drug. The sister, a 37-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with Assault and Battery and will be summonsed into court.

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE On Saturday, Oct. 29, a BOLO (be on look out) was given out to all police units for a 1999 blue Jeep Grand Cherokee operated by a male for his involvement in a robbery in Boston the night before.

At 12:23 p.m., a second BOLO was given out for the same vehicle and same operator and this time the male just committed an unarmed robbery in Braintree at the Home Goods. While making a check of the area, Officer Ryan Donnelly passed by the Parkway Mobil Gas station on Furnace Brook Parkway and spotted the suspect vehicle parked near the air compressor in the parking lot. He could see the suspect putting air into a tire, so he advised Quincy Police Communications and requested additional units.

The suspect then moved his vehicle to the gas pump, got out and walked into the gas station office. It was at this time that State Trooper Morris arrived on scene. The two officers entered the gas station office and saw the suspect swiping a Citizens Bank Visa Debit card in the machine. The officers took possession of the card and saw the name of the victim of the unarmed robbery in Braintree on the card. The suspect was placed under arrest and turned over to the Braintree Police.

An inventory search of the Jeep uncovered the Braintree victim's purse on the driver's seat. In addition to criminal charges in Braintree and Boston, Officer Donnelly charged the suspect with receiving stolen property under $250, improper use of a credit/ debit card under $250 and false impersonation/identity theft.

Nice Work!

NEW SCAM: A citizen received a letter claiming to be from the U.S. Department of State requesting that the recipient either call or sign in at passportplanning.com to participate in a study to improve passport services. She was given a code to sign in, so I attempted to sign in but was not allowed.

It is unknown if this site is legitimate but with a ".com" ending it is not a government site. It is unknown what information this site is looking for but most likely it will involve your passport number, name and date of birth, so avoid helping out the State Department by participating in the survey. It could be the first step to identity fraud!

Trump - Clinton WH Race Down To Wire

270.

There were about another half dozen key states that were too close to call Tuesday night.

Trump was leading in New Hampshire, Wisconsin, and Michigan while Clinton was leading in Pennsylvania and Nevada.

One of the state's that Clinton carried was Massachusetts. The former senator from New York received 60 percent of the vote here while Trump received 34 percent.

Other states in Clinton's column included Vermont, Illinois, New Jersey, Maryland, Rhode Island, Delaware, Virginia, Colorado and Hawaii.

States in Trump's win column included Kentucky, Indiana, West Virginia, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Alabama and Louisiana.

Vote totals from Quincy were not available at press time.

However, Cong. Stephen Lynch, a South Boston Democrat, was a projected winner in his bid for a seventh term over Republican William Burke.

Sen. John Keenan, a Quincy Democrat, was also a projected winner in his bid for a fourth term over Independent challenger Alexander Mendez.

Besides the Presidential race, voters were drawn to the polls for the four ballot questions.

Question 1 was defeated at the polls 61 percent to 39 percent. A yes vote would have allowed the state to issue another slots parlor license near Suffolk Downs in Revere.

Question 2 was defeated at the polls – 63 percent to 37 percent. A yes vote would have lifted the cap on the number of charter schools in the state.

Question 3 was approved by a vote of 78 percent 22 percent. The vote means Massachusetts farmers will be prohibited from confining breeding pigs, calves raised for veal and egg-laying hens in a way that prevents them from lying down, standing up, extending their limbs or turning around freely.

Question 4 – which would legalize recreational marijuana and create a new cannibus control commission as well as set a 12 percent tax on marijuana sales – was narrowly in favor as the Sun went to press.

The YES vote on Question 4 was 53 percent and the NO vote was 47 percent with 62 percent of the state vote counted.

Regardless of the outcome the 2016 presidential race will be historic. Clinton, if victorious, would become the first woman elected President. Trump, the billionaire businessman, has never held elective office.

Nov. 8 also holds a historical footnote in U.S. Presidential history. John F. Kennedy, then age 43, was elected this nation's 35th president on Nov. 8, 1960 becoming the youngest man and first and only Roman Catholic to win the White House.

This story will be updated on The Sun's website Wednesday: www.TheQuincySun.com.

Last Call For Parade Float Entries

The Quincy Christmas Festival Committee announces the final call for floats to be entered in the 64th annual Christmas parade which will be held on Sunday, Nov. 27th.

School groups, nonprofit organizations are the backbone of float builders who create floats for the delight of the thousands of spectators and compete for cash prizes awarded to the best entries each year. The floats must adhere to the Parade Theme which for 2016 is "The Traditions of Christmas" selected from a contest held by the committee each year.

This year's theme was submitted by Quincy resident Lorraine Rooney. The winning prize for the best overall float is $2,000 followed by $1,500 for first place, $1,000 second, $750 for third, with fourth and fifth place taking $500 each.

Commercial floats may also be entered and are judged for awards in several categories but do not receive cash awards. They also pay a parade entry fee. Float applications can be obtained at the Christmas Parade committee at One Merrymount Parkway, or by calling 1-617 376 1394.

Disdain For Clinton, Trump On Top Of Voters' Minds

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy voters on Tuesday said their disdain of one of the major candidates running for president – Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump – was what brought them to the polls.

A steady stream of voters arrived at the Thomas Crane Public Library on Washington Street Tuesday morning, where residents of Ward 1, Precinct 3, cast their ballots. A majority of those interviewed by a reporter said mistrust of either Clinton or Trump was their top concern as they voted.

Tessa Murray, who was joined by her two young children, was voting in her first presidential election after becoming a U.S. citizen in 2014. Murray is from Aberdeen, Scotland, where Trump owns a golf course, and she said the locals' experience with Trump formed the basis for her vote.

"I'm originally from Scotland – Aberdeen – where Trump built his golf course and there has been a falling out with the local community," Murray said. "There was no way I was going to vote for him."

Theresa Stevens, who voted with two others Tuesday, said women's rights and the Affordable Care Act – in particular its protections for those with pre-existing conditions – were important to her. Stevens also said she wanted "anyone but Trump" in the Oval Office.

"It's about having someone who is stable and qualified in office versus someone who is unqualified and unstable," she said.

One man, who declined to give his name, said he voted for Clinton because he was "horrified" at the prospect of Trump becoming president.

"The current election is a threat to our country," he said. "The system has failed in putting forth a candidate who is singularly unqualified."

Evie Shore said she went to the polls Tuesday "to get Hillary out and get Trump in."

"I want to do just what he said – clean up and dig out," Shore said. "I lost faith in the system."

Sandra Flanagan, another Trump supporter, was concerned about the prospect of Clinton winning.

"Let's start with corruption, the safety of the country, and building up the military," Flanagan replied when asked what the major issues were for her. "You have no idea how much the world will implode if [Clinton] gets in."

Other residents said they were concerned about the ballot questions, particularly Question 4, which would legalize recreational use of marijuana if approved.

14 Percent Of Quincy Voters Cast Ballots Early

Government Center (Old City Hall) was open for early voting on ten weekdays from Oct. 25 to Nov. 4. On Mondays and Wednesdays during that stretch, early voting took place between 8:30 a.m. and 7 p.m., and on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays it took place between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Crispo said she had been concerned about the poll workers there getting burned out given the number of hours the location was open. To avoid that, she divided the workers into two five-hour shifts on the shorter days and two six-hour shifts on the longer days.

"Turnout was great and the poll workers didn't get burned out," Crispo said. "That was a goal – not to get them burned out."

Additionally, North Quincy High School was open for early voting on Saturday, Oct. 29. Voting there took place in the school's atrium.

In the future, Crispo said she would prefer to use a bigger space in the school – such as the gymnasium – to accommodate longer lines. The gym was unavailable this time because two basketball games were scheduled for Oct. 29 before the city decided to utilize the building for early voting.

Quincy and other Massachusetts communities were not required to open a polling place on Oct. 29, but Crispo said she wanted to in order to boost turnout. North Quincy High was chosen because of its proximity to the North Quincy MBTA station.

Oct. 29 was the biggest day for early voting in the city, as 1,633 residents cast ballots at North. Crispo said the second biggest day was Nov. 4, the final day, when 1,200 voters turned out at City Hall.

Crispo said the turnout was pretty consistent across Quincy's 30 precincts, with most having between 180 and 210 early voters.

Early voting will most likely be offered next during the 2018 statewide election, Crispo said, though that is not set in stone. That year will feature a race for governor and other constitutional offices, the U.S. Senate seat currently held by Elizabeth Warren, U.S. House contests, and state legislative races.

ENVELOPES CONTAINING ballots cast during early voting were unsealed and tabulated on Election Day Tuesday. These ballots are from registered voters in Ward 1 Precinct 3. Some 14 percent of the city's electorate - 8,496 voters - cast ballots during the two-week early voting period that ended last Friday.

SALUTING THE Walk of Honor at Flags for Veterans Island are state American Legion Vice Commander, Fred White, Quincy Veterans Services Director George Nicholson, Quincy Veterans Council Commander Robert Lewis, Squadron 294 Commander Paul Moody and National American Legion Past Commander Jake Comer. The island is decorated with 400 American flags and 416 commemorative bricks in honor of veterans who served, are still serving or were killed in action.

Friends Of Wollaston Beach Meeting, Awards Night Nov. 17

The Friends of Wollaston Beach will hold their annual meeting and awards night Thursday, Nov. 17th at 7 p.m. at The Nickerson Post in Squantum.

The event is free and open to the public.

A brief meeting will be held highlighting the accomplishments of the group over the past 10 years followed by the presentation of awards and a complimentary buffet and cash bar.

This year marked the group's 10th beach season and was highlighted by three events.

The 10th Annual Kids-Fest was attended by over 1,000 people in June followed by the return of Arts in The Park with a Book & Boogie dance party in July and a Finding Nemo movie night in August.

Arts in The Park was held at the tot lot across from the beach and also served as a used book, DVD, and toy drive drive for children. All items collected and/or provided by FWB were donated to the Houghs Neck Community Center in August.

FWB also announce their award recipients for 2016.

The Friend of The Year Award is being presented to Bob Bosworth and The Quincy Sun staff for their commitment to helping grow and promote the over 100 FWB events, clean ups, and meetings that have been held over the past 10 years.

The Member of The Year Award is being presented to Robert "Bob" Verney from Squantum for his years of dedication as secretary of FWB and for his tireless commitment to a clean waterfront.

The FWB Spirit Award is being presented to Sally Owen of Quincy Environmental Treasures for her years of dedication to conserving and promoting Quincy's environmental gems, including Wollaston Beach.

Past FWB award recipients include: city historian Tom Galvin, Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey, former Councillors Brian McNamee, Leo Kelly, and Doug Gutro – the group's founder; former Cong. William Delahunt, Mayor Thomas Koch and former Mayor Frank McCauley; Save The Harbor/Save The Bay President Patricia Foley, FWB members Carla Moran, Richard Joyce, Karen Djerf of Tony's Clam Shop, and Tom O'Brien just to name a few.

"We are very excited to recognize our award recipients in our 10th year. It is a special milestone for a small non-profit group to reach," said FWB President Neil McCole. "The group's longevity would not have been possible without the help and support of so many people over the years."

McCole also said he is stepping down as president of the group after one year as event coordinator and the past nine years as president.

"We are hoping for a great turnout at our annual meeting and are thankful to the Nickerson Post for once again donating their space to FWB," McCole added.

Quincy Scout Completes Braintree Outdoor Classroom

By SCOTT JACKSON

An outdoor classroom was recently dedicated at Braintree's Monatiquot School Kindergarten Center – a project completed by a Boy Scout from Quincy.

Frank Reich, a junior at Quincy High School and a member of Boy Scout Troop 6, Houghs Neck, oversaw the construction of the new outdoor classroom at the Monatiquot School. Reich, 16, undertook the construction of the classroom as his Eagle Scout project; he also needs to earn additional merit badge to make him eligible for scouting's highest honor, at which point he would go before a board of review.

The outdoor space was dedicated Oct. 23 in memory of the late Carmella Farina, who taught at the school from 1958 to 1999. The 50-foot by 80-foot space includes benches for students, a table for students to work and play at, a bench and desk for a teacher, and a flagpole. The space is enclosed with planters.

"It was a good project – a success," Reich said. "[The teachers] were very excited for the outdoor classroom. They were ready to bring out their kids so they can go and learn outside, instead of just sitting on the grass.

"They really enjoyed it."

Reich's mother, Carolanne, is part of the custodial staff at Monatiquot and he felt there would be no better place to complete his Eagle Scout project.

"My mom works at that school and I was coming up for Eagle and I needed to do a project, so what better way to do a project than at a kindergarten school," he said.

Reich began working on the project in late June, and was assisted by fellow mem-

Thanksgiving Food Drive Nov. 20

Each November, Quincy Community United Methodist Church conducts an annual Thanksgivings In-Gathering of Food. This year's in-gathering will be held Sunday, Nov. 20.

"Every year the goal is to fill a parishioner's van full of food," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of the church. "So far, we've succeeded every year."

The in-gathering is in addition to the church's monthly food drives for Interfaith Social Services Food Pantry. Those who would like to contribute to the food drive but cannot bring donations on Sundays can call the church office at 617-773-3319 and arrangements will be made.

Arbella Raises Over $46,000 For Breast Cancer Screening

For the eighth year, Arbella Insurance Group employees have teamed up with the Arbella Insurance Foundation to raise funds for the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

At this year's annual Pink Day on Oct. 18, Arbella employees' donations were matched by the Arbella Insurance Foundation for a total gift of more than $46,000. Dana-Farber will use the funds to reduce cancer risks for medically underserved populations through screenings and education.

Founded in 2009, Pink Day was created by Arbella employee Dot Olson after she was diagnosed with breast cancer and underwent treatment at Dana-Farber. The event has been instrumental in furthering Dana-Farber's mission to garner support for breast cancer awareness and research. Pink Day is coordinated by Arbella's Activities Committee (AAC), a group of employees committed to promoting a culture of fun and camaraderie through corporate citizenship and teamwork.

During the Pink Day event, Arbella employees wear pink to work, purchase Dana-Farber bracelets, contribute money to dress casually, and participate in departmental gift basket raffles. This year, employee contributions will support Dana-Farber's Mammography Van community visits in 2017, Dana-Farber's Blum Family Resource Center Van, which offers skin and prostate cancer screenings and education. To date, Arbella's Pink Day fundraisers have raised more than $229,500 for cancer awareness and screening.

Breast cancer touches the lives of so many people in our communities, and as a local company, Arbella is proud to support Dana-Farber," said John Donohue, chairman, president, and CEO of the Arbella Insurance Group and chairman of Arbella's Foundation. "We're privileged to have access to a world class cancer institute, and through our Pink Day event, we can aid in Dana-Farber's efforts to help women in need throughout New England."

As the only mobile mammography program in Massachusetts, Dana-Farber's Mammography Van provides free mammograms and breast health education to medically-eligible women aged 40 years and older. The Mammography Van partners with community-based organizations and neighborhood health centers in its mission to decrease breast cancer among medically-underserved women while increasing survival rates for those diagnosed with breast cancer.

Quincy Scout Completes Braintree Outdoor Classroom

bers of Troop 6 and friends. As part of the project, the team made scale models of the benches and other items in the classroom out of cardboard so the school's teachers could position them before holes were dug.

The team dug 22 footings, and then concrete was poured into sonotubes to support the benches and desks.

"It was hard, starting to plan it. Eventually we got an idea. We had three options. We chose one that was the best for us," Reich said. "We made a detailed plan out of cardboard, laid it all out where we would dig holes."

The project was completed earlier in October, and Reich spent more than 300 hours working on it.

Reich received donations from local businesses to help complete the outdoor classroom, and also undertook a 10-mile hike in the Blue Hills in August to raise funds for the project, joined by a handful of fellow scouts.

Reich hopes to enter the carpenters' union after high school, and currently takes carpentry classes at Quincy High. Reich's grandfather, Carl Reich, has been a union carpenter for 43 years, and two of his uncles are also members.

Reich said the construction of the outdoor classroom was a learning experience for him.

Reich has been involved in scouting since he was six years old.

"I remember there was a newspaper my grandfather was reading and I saw something about the scouts," Reich said. "He looked over at me and asked if I want to join the scouts, and I say yeah."

Reich said he has enjoyed the past 10 years he has spent with the scouts.

"It's fun," he said.

Over the years, Reich has helped his fellow scouts on their Eagle projects such as Osprey nests, food drives, and a walking trail at Merrymount Park.

Carl Reich has volunteered with his grandson's group for the past decade – six years as an assistant cubmaster and the last four as an assistant scoutmaster.

"He's met a good group of people," Carl Reich said. "I'm proud of him for making it this far."

North Quincy Sails To 2nd Round After Convincing Win Over Chelsea

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was an ideal introduction to the brave, new world of tournament play.

North Quincy showed talent and balance. Everybody played. Everybody contributed. The Red Raiders served aggressively, frequently ending points before they started. They played good defense. The setters moved the ball around, and the hitters finished points with power and touch.

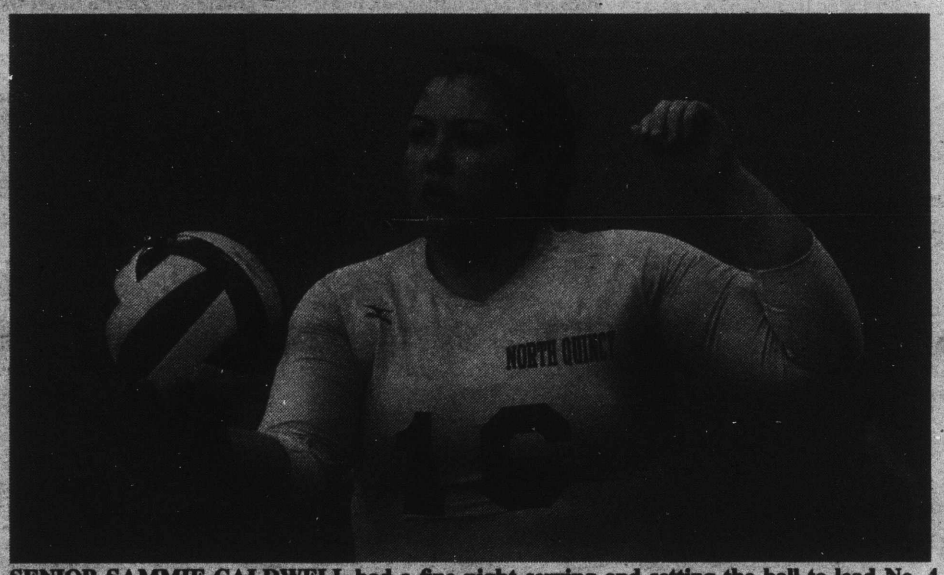
Senior Sammie Caldwell had a fine night serving and setting the ball to lead No. 4 seeded North past No. 13 Chelsea, 3-0 in the opening round of the Division 1 Central-East Volleyball Sectionals at the North Quincy High gym Friday night.

North hosted No. 12 Cambridge Rindge and Latin Tuesday night in the second round of the tourney.

"It was a good start for us. I was glad we had a chance to play tonight rather than having a bye," said North coach Kerry Ginty after her team upped its record to 14-5 with a convincing 25-14, 25-16, 25-7 victory. "What I liked best was our energy, and we were able to get everyone involved with a taste of tournament volleyball."

The most impressive part of North's win was its balance. It was best shown in the opening game when 12 different players converted scoring plays out of the 25 points. There were aces, service winners, volleys, digs, slams and touch shots at the net. Many different players scored in many different ways. A coach's dream.

"I think you have to give the setters (Caldwell and Kaleigh Manton) a lot of the credit," said Ginty. "By the nature of the position, I think what they do goes unrecognized. They've played well for us all season, and they were good tonight. They mixed things up and moved the ball around. They were the reason everyone got involved."



SENIOR SAMMIE CALDWELL had a fine night serving and setting the ball to lead No. 4 seeded North past No. 13 Chelsea, 3-0 in the opening round of the Division 1 Central-East Volleyball Sectionals Friday night. Caldwell had five aces in the win.

North served well. The Red Raiders had 20 aces and at least as many serves which were not solidly returned. They controlled the match with more than 40 of 75 points coming directly off serve. Caldwell was especially impressive with five aces on a hard, low, flat serve which pinned back the Chelsea defense for the entire match.

"We served aggressively which I liked. We missed too many serves which is something we'll work on, but sometimes that happens when you are aggressive," said Ginty.

Caldwell and North were at their best in the second game which was the most competitive of the three. Caldwell began by running eight straight points on her serve, five of which were not returned over the net. Chelsea responded and stayed within, 14-12. Caldwell then served three winning points thanks to a pair of big-time finishes from Izzie Flaherty.

Sharon Yang followed with a three-point run on serve which she ended with a beautiful dig and volley for a 20-12 lead which was not seriously threatened.

"Sammie and Jessie Caldwell have been our best servers all year, and they served well tonight," said Ginty.

There was good point distribution on the front line. Flaherty was her usual brilliant, all-around self with seven kills, five assists and three digs. Remy Aucoin (three digs, three kills), Julia Klincewicz (three digs, three kills), and Ivy Chiu (two kills) were consistent and efficient at net.

The point of the night came early in the third game and lasted longer than most movies. Sammie and Jessie Caldwell, Klincewicz, Flaherty, and Chiu made digs and diving saves to keep it alive. Sammie Caldwell teed up the clincher with a good set, and Aucoin drove it home for the winner which brought the large crowd to its feet.

Senior Rebecca Thorne had a pair of kills and played a solid, complete match at net. She moved and blocked well. She also had the two softest finishes of the night with precise touch shots which found a thin sliver of court just over the net and inside the sideline for points in the second game.

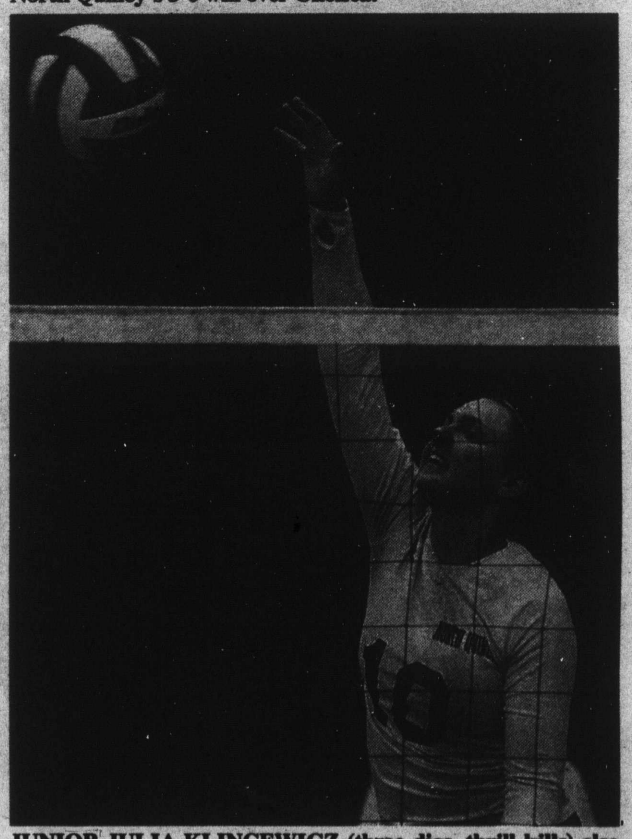
"Rebecca improved in matches late in the season with her blocking against Quincy and Brookline. She's had a nice touch at the net all season. She's become a force for us," said Ginty.

Yang, once again, played terrific defense. She also had plenty of help from Jessica Zou, Jennifer Zou and Amy Huang along the back line.

"The defense along the back row was excellent," said Ginty. "Sharon has been strong all season. Jennifer, Jessica and Amy all played good defense tonight."

Flaherty, Aucoin, Klincewicz and Yang were selected by the coaches to the Patriot League All Star team.

SENIOR REMY AUCOIN had three digs and three kills in North Quincy's 3-0 win over Chelsea.



JUNIOR JULIA KLINCEWICZ (three digs, thrill kills) also contributed to North Quincy's 3-0 win over Chelsea.

Quincy Volleyball Knocks Off Needham To Advance

By TOM JOYCE

Phase one is complete.

The No. 3 Quincy High School girls volleyball team's first playoff task was defeating the No. 6 Needham Rockets. And they did just that at home on Monday night, topping the Rockets, 3-1 (25-14, 25-27, 25-20, 25-18) in the MIAA Division 1 Central/East Quarterfinals.

In the past few years, the Presidents (18-3) had not faced the Rockets. So heading in, it was tough for them to know what to expect from their foes.

"We were hoping we would win," Presidents head coach Jacqui Niosi said. "We just wanted to play well. Needham is a really good team. They were super aggressive. That's a really good win for us."

To prepare for a team they were not familiar with, Niosi said she and her team went to the Rockets game against No. 11 Revere on Thursday, Nov. 3 to see what kind of teams they could be facing.

"We saw how they served and what their defense had," she said. "Sometimes it's hard when they play a different team to see how they match up when they play you. But they swung hard and served well, that was was a good win for us."

The first set was tightly contested in the beginning. But with it tied at seven apiece, the Presidents gained an edge, going on a 6-0 run that forced their opponent to call a timeout.

"I think when we're positive, have an aggressive mindset, are talking and communicating well, we end up playing better," Niosi said.

The timeout hushed the Presidents' momentum, but they forced another timeout as they took a 21-14 lead. The timeout did not do much, however, as they would go on to win the set, 25-14.

It was hard to tell who would win the second set as it truly did go back-and-forth nearly the entire time. The Presidents held an 18-17 edge and then scored back-to-back points which forced a Needham timeout. The timeout was effective this time as the Presidents fell behind, 25-26, before calling a timeout of their own. But Needham would score the next point to take the set.

The Presidents had no issue taking the third set as they led 13-7 again, forcing a Rockets timeout. From there, the contest was a stalemate which worked for the Presidents as they took the set 25-20.

In the final set, the Presidents fell behind early, 1-5. An 8-1 run gave them the edge and for the rest of the way, they outplayed the Rockets. They went on to take the final set, 25-18.

Although it was the most important game they had played this year, the Presidents did not try to revamp their game in order to prepare.

"We tried to keep it the same," Niosi said. "We're doing a lot of the same drills in practice. It's still all about basics although it's tournament time. If you don't take care of the little things, you're not going to win."

Shannon Foley led the team with 26 digs and had 11 points serving. Jessie Lei's 20 kills were a team-best, as were here 13 serving points. She also had 19 digs. Hillary Valenzuela added 16 digs and 10 points serving. Camryn Burgio had 14 kills and seven digs and Ro Molina finished the day with 10 kills. Danielle Perry had 10 digs and eight points serving. Jackie Ryan had nine digs and Reagan Hutchins added another seven.

The Presidents face the winner of the No. 2 King Philip/No. 7 Newton South game on Thursday, Nov. 10.

Two Quincy volleyball players have been selected to the Patriot League All-Star team.

Jessie Lei was named the Most Valuable Player for the Keenan Division and Danielle Parry was also selected by the league coaches to the All-Star squad.

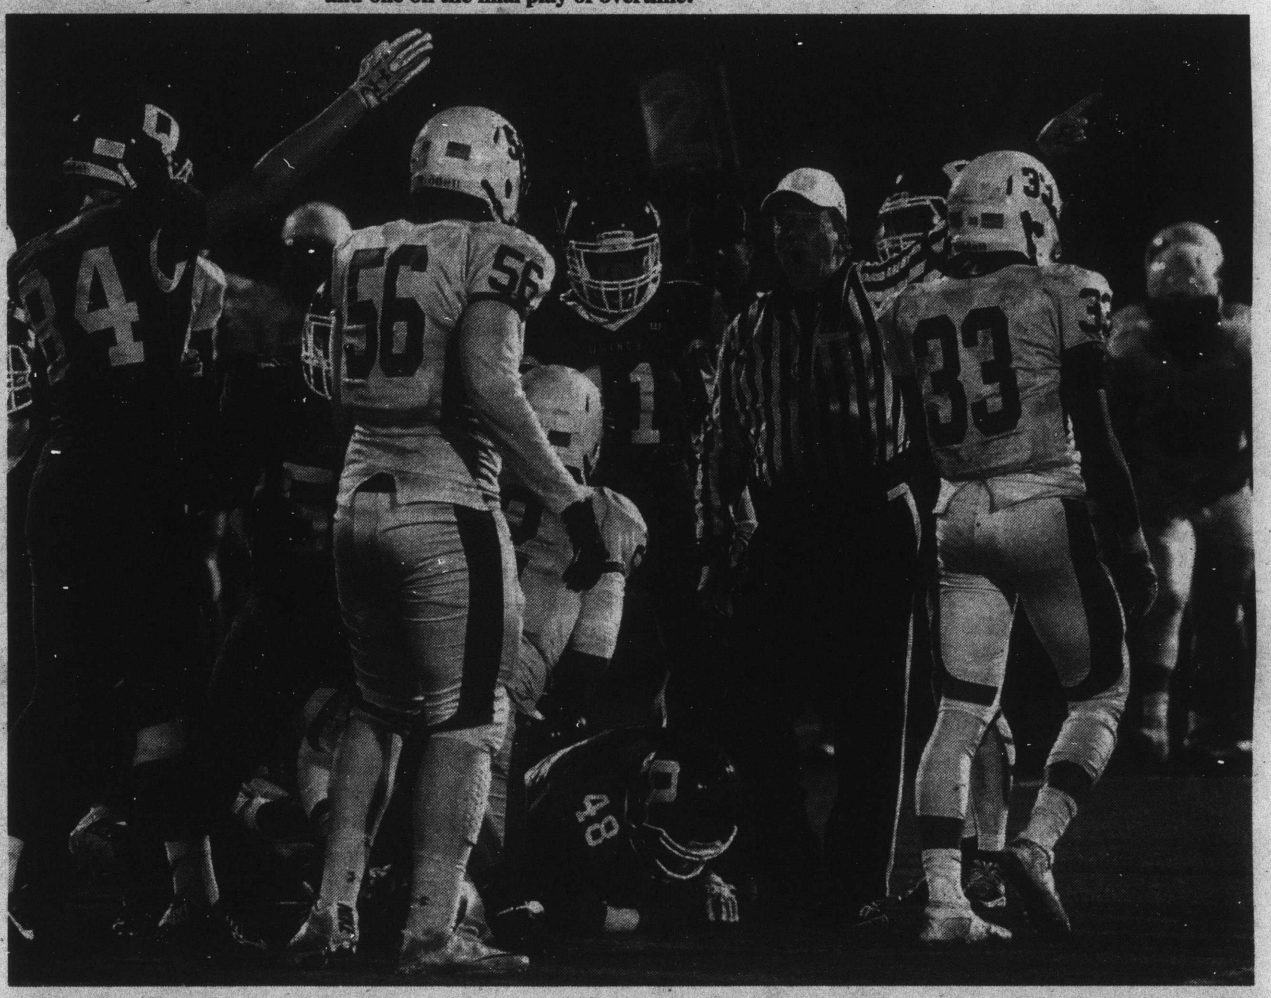
JUNIOR WIDE RECEIVER Brenden Ward picks up some yardage after a Quincy reception in the Presidents' overtime loss to New Bedford. The game ended on a controversial play at the goal line as officials ruled Dominic Laptiste had been stopped at the one-inch line on a fourth and-one on the final play of overtime.

Quincy Bows To NB In OT



QUINCY'S DEFENSE played a strong game against New Bedford, forcing several turnovers including this fumble recovery by senior linebacker Joshua Rodriguez (#48).

By JOE REARDON

Bill Reardon was adamant when he said he would be seeking out any video or photos of Quincy's final play in last Friday's contest against New Bedford at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Make no mistake about it. Quincy was going up against a team that it mirrored with no wins and starting a talented, but inexperienced, sophomore quarterback. The Presidents made several big plays on the field and that could include the final play of what was easily the most entertaining game of the year.

Trailing 18-12 in overtime with the ball on the 1-yard line, the referees hesitated then ruled that back Dominic Laptiste, who torched the New Bedford defense with 137 rushing yards, didn't break the plane at the goal line, when it was clear from many angles that he was indeed in. The controversial call clinched the victory for New Bedford, giving the Whalers their first win of the season and dropping the Presidents to a frustrating 0-9.

Reardon ran onto the field to confer with the referees at the end of the play. "They (the referees) were talking about it so there had to be some second guessing out there," he said. "From my angle it looked like his whole body was across the line. In my mind we got the W tonight. They went out there and they earned it. We'll check the tape. I think they executed at the end to get themselves the W. When times are tough, these types of things seem to happen."

Everyone sitting on the Quincy side in the chill of the stadium knew that this was the game that got away. The Presidents moved the ball well on offense all game and forced three turnovers in a desperate attempt to put at least one crooked number in the win column this season.

The game started like most everyone this season for the Presidents: They trailed from the start. The Whalers wound up in the end zone on the ninth play of a 56-yard drive when sophomore quarterback Tru Williams connected on a five-yard slant for the 6-0 lead just 5:07 into the first.

That's the way it stayed until Shorn Hawthorne broke the biggest play of the season for Quincy when he cut inside and accelerated away from New Bedford's defenders to return a punt 68 yards to tie the score 6-6.

An interception of a Colin Keaveny pass gave the Whalers prime field position at the Quincy 12 and Williams threw his second touchdown pass, this time a five-yard strike to Chandler Kuehne for a 12-6 lead. The conversion play failed when Brian Nguyen chased down Williams for a sack.

Quincy came right back as the half was winding down and got all the way to the New Bedford 35 when Keaveny was picked off for the second time.

The Presidents defense went to work on the Whalers' first possession in the third quarter and didn't allow New Bedford to open a lead. Linebacker Joshua Rodriguez dropped Whaler running back Baron Hilton for a loss and Quincy recovered a fumble three plays later.

The Whalers added a third interception in the turnover-filled game and Quincy did its job on defense when Josh Coughlin recovered a fumble at the 44. The Presidents capitalized on their next fumble recovery, this one by Adam Vu to give Quincy a first down at the New Bedford 27.

Laptiste picked up 32 yards on five carries in the series, the last being an 11-yard push up the middle. The extra-point kick was short, leaving the score at 12-12 with 3:36 left to play.

Rock solid kicker Mikhayla Foley came up short on the point-after kick, but Reardon wasn't second guessing his decision not to go for two points. "Mikhayla has been steady all season and I have complete faith in her," said Reardon.

Quincy had one last shot beginning with 2:22 remaining as Laptiste broke an 18-yard gain on a sweep and Keaveny connected on passes of eight and six yards to the New Bedford 27. Two incomplete passes as time ran out and the teams headed to overtime.

Williams hooked up with a wide open Edgar Semedo on the first play from the 10-yard line for the score and an 18-12 lead. The Quincy defense stopped the conversion rush and the Presidents had their shot that led to the controversial finish.

"It was an opportunity missed or an opportunity taken away from us," said Reardon. "I'm going to watch the film and find out. This was tough. Hopefully it brings us closer together. We'll rally around this.

"Defensively we created a lot of turnovers tonight. I thought we tackled a lot better. It's just a shame it ended that way."

When it was over, Quincy's players fell to the turf in poses of disbelief.

One player lay on his back with arms and legs outstretched looking to the heavens as if for an explanation. Another sat and pulled his jersey over his head almost to avoid the reality of it all. A third sat with his head between his knees, gazing at the field where it just happened. A fourth fell flat on stomach and lay motionless for minutes.

It was that tough. For nearly 100 minutes of soccer, Quincy had played powerful BC High to more than a standoff. Quincy had been better. If not for a fluke handball call in the penalty area, the Presidents would surely have won in regulation time.

But they did not. The tournament is a cruel master. Allesandro Oggiano headed home a cross from Demetri Seremetis with 4:13 left in the second overtime to nudge No. 9 seeded BC High past No. 8 Quincy, 2-1 in a soccer match which will forever live in the memory of those who saw it in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectionals at Veterans' Memorial Stadium Saturday night.

"I may have had teams that played better in a match, but I have never had a team which gave more effort. Never," said Quincy coach Mark Spendlove. "You could not as for more. Our principal, Mr. (Lawrence) Taglieri, came into the locker room after the match and told the kids he had never seen a better effort."

Begin with Paulo Soares. The senior captain scored Quincy's goal on a laser of a free kick in the first half, but that tells nothing of how good he was. He lit up the stadium and graced the field with his play. He rushed from end-to-end, he dribbled, passed, drilled corner kicks, dropped back on defense to turn away threats, and sent his forwards through creases in the attack zone with spot-on thru passes. He took multiple hits and played on. He did all this with his motor on full throttle. An athlete cannot play harder or better.

"Paulo was great. He and Tristan (McCormick) are the engine of our team, the engine that could from the midfield," said Spendlove.

Soares' goal came with 15:55 left in the first half. Henrique Costa set it up the free kick with a tackle and steal. Soares teed it up from just outside the 35-yard line. He rifled a frozen rope of a shot which cleared the first row of defenders and flew into the top, far corner almost before BC High goalie Mike Ball could move. It was hard and precise, the shot of a lifetime for a 1-0 lead on the big stage.

"It was just a perfect shot. It belongs on a highlight reel," said Spendlove.

Quincy (9-7-3) began the second half with a 1-0 lead and controlled it with its defense. But. There was a freak play which gave BC High the equalizer. The Eagles made a harmless throw-in into the penalty area. The ball bounced crazily and grazed the hand of a Quincy defender. This gave the Eagles a penalty kick, and Manny Pestano buried it for a 1-1 tie with 28:24 left which is where it stayed until Oggiano's game-winner.

"It was just a fluke. It took a bad bounce. It was inches, inches either way and it's nothing," said Spendlove.

Quincy's fullback line of Ali Mokalled, Melvin Gonzalez, Owen Smyth, and Yannick Gomes played stonewall defense. They had blocks, and booming clears, and tackles. They ran and ran and ran despite getting little rest over the 100 minutes. Gonzalez had the best play, late in the first half, when he won a one-on-one battle in the goal mouth and flicked away an airborne shot which was ticketed for the open net.

Keeper Brendan Corbett was steady and, at times, exceptional. He made a kick save on a clean break bu Diaruid McGonagle early in the first half. In extra time before intermission, he stoned McGonagle who was in clear for a shot from point-blank range.

Clayton Rodrigues ruled the midfield with McCormick and Soares for the final 50 minutes and gave the speedy Eagles very little. Leandro Batista flashed an almost endless selection of of skills, dribbling, controlling the ball, pin-balling through defenders and sending crisp, accurate passes to Mohamed Gouriche, Kevin O'Shea, Soares and McCormick for fine chances, especially in the first half. Costa, Christian Toscanini, and Youseff Khamis were terrific off the bench.

O'Shea and Batista had the best chances of the overtime. As the minutes died away and the tension grew, there was a sense that it would end on a fluke, a perfect play, or penalty kicks. BC High made the perfect play with the cross which covered nearly half the width of the field to the exact spot where Oggiano could move at full speed and head it home for the winner.

After the game, the players asked for a players-only moment while the coaches stood outside the locker room. There was silence, tears, quiet talk, and a finally a shout of encouragement which joined them as partners in a moment that would always unite them. Spendlove waited, shook hands, and embraced each of his players. It was a fine scene.

"We have a lot of different cultures on our team, and we work to jell together. That's what I saw tonight. A team." said Spendlove. "It was not the ending they wanted, but they played a great game against a great team under the lights before hundreds of people. When the hurt starts to heal a little, they'll realize they were part of something special."

They played at least that. They played out the reason we have tournaments, the reason we play sports.

Courtney Campo On Soccer All Star Squad

Former North Quincy star Courtney Campo, a sophomore midfielder for Stonehill College, was selected to third team All Northeast 10 Conference All Star squad recently.

Campo also helped Stonehill in its drive to the league soccer championship last weekend. She scored her first career goal in a 2-1 victory over the College of St. Rose in the quarterfinals.

Stonehill defeated top-seeded Adelphi, 1-0 and Pace, 2-1 to capture the title.

Stonehill was seeded fourth in the league and 10th nationally before the tourney. Stonehill awaits a bid to the NCAA tournament this week.

NQHS Alumni Soccer Game Nov. 25

The 2016 North Quincy High School Alumni soccer game will be held Friday, Nov. 25 at 4 p.m. Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

A good number of alumni have already signed up, so this should prove to be the best turnout in years.

A donation of $20 is asked to help offset the cost of alumni long sleeve game jerseys and fund the Greg Hawes Scholarship. Greg was a former NQHS soccer captain and Firefighter who tragically lost his life this year.

Apaches - Manets Ready For Title Game

QYFL Championship Preview

By SEAN HALPIN

QYFL VARSITY CHAMPIONSHIP LXVI
NORTH QUINCY APACHES
Vs. HOUGHS NECK MANETS

The Apaches (7-2) and Manets (7-1) will face each other for the third time this season, this time for the QYFL's Founders Cup.

Each team will enter Sunday's ball game coming off impressive playoff victories.

The Apaches defeated the Myers division champion, West Quincy Elks (6-2) 22-0 and the Manets defeated the Quincy Point Panthers 28-12. The Manets won the regular season Desmond Division title and faced the Apaches twice. Manets won the Week 4 matchup, 14-13 and Apaches won the regular season finale, 8-0.

Houghs Neck will feature Isaiah Steinberg at Tailback and Zach Luggelle at Fullback. The Manets have a Franchise Quarterback in Campbell Tierney. Tierney will look to get the ball to Receivers Ryan LaRoche, Devin Desmond and TE Peter Ugwu. They will run behind the blocking of big Lineman Jake Mutch (185lbs), Max Van Tassell (170lbs), Aidan O'Donoughue (205lbs) and Center Kevin Gomez.

The North Quincy arsenal is stocked as well. The Apaches on offense by franchise Quarterback Danny Scolaro and feature the trio of Tyler Le, Matt Kelly and Brian Gutro at running back. Scolaro will look to get the ball downfield to Receivers James Ward, Jamal Maximillien and Tight End Colm Geary. The Apaches will move the ball behind big Lineman Declan Geary (178), John Bell (193), Clayton Corley (150), Harry Gaudiano (181).

Both teams feature stingy defenses. The Apaches have allowed only 47 points in 9 games (5.2ppg) including consecutive shutouts in their last three games. The Manets have allowed only 65 points in 8 games (8.1ppg).

MANETS FRANCHISE QUARTERBACK Campbell Tierney (#24) has led his team to the QYFL Championship Game Sunday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Tierney is seen here getting a play from Head Coach Mike Flavin.

The 66th Annual Quincy Youth Championship Game looks to be one of the well matched contests in championship history. Kickoff is Sunday, Nov. 13 at 2:30 p.m.

Quincy Youth Football Playoffs - Recap

By PATRICK McDERMOTT

VARSITY
APACHES - 22
ELKS - 0

The Apaches put on an impressive performance Saturday night, defeating the Defending QYFL champion, West Quincy Elks 22-0.

Safety Danny Scolaro had two first-half takeaways with an interception and a fumble. Apache Safety Alex Demerit recovered an Elk fumble late in a scoreless first half. The Apaches capitalized as QB Danny Scolaro hit WR Jamal Maximillein on a 17-yard TD pass. Scolaro kicked the 2 point conversion and the Apaches lead 8-0 at halftime.

Elk defender Ciro Moura recovered an onside kick to open the second half but failed to capitalize. Apaches CB Jamal Maximillien intercepted the Elks, halting the drive. The Apaches took the ball and Scolaro hit Maximillien again on a 33-yard TD pass to extend their lead to 14-0. The Apaches got the ball back late in the game and mounted a long drive capped off by a 5-yard TD run by RB Brian Gutro. Scolaro added the 2-point kick as the Apaches defeated the West Quincy Elks 22-0.

MANETS - 28
PANTHERS - 12

Isiah Steinberg led the Manets with 3 first half TD runs of 27, 55 and 40 yards. The Panthers scored 2 TDs in the first half with Michael Coote scoring on an 8-yard run followed by Jaden Remy pulling in a 35-yard TD pass from Coote. Manets' Dana Gagne had an interception on failed two-point conversion for Panthers.

The Manets' Peter Agu open the second half with a 20- yard touchdown run. Manets defensive play saw Zack Luggle with a fumble recovery and Ryan LaRoche snagging 2 interceptions. The Manets varsity will go to their third straight championship game.

The North Quincy Apaches will face the Hough's Neck Manets this Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the 66th Annual QYFL Championship at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

JUNIOR VARSITY
PANTHERS - 42
APACHES - 8

Panthers LB Ruben Charles recovered a fumble on the opening drive. Quincy Point capitalized as RB Michael Potter broke free on a 55-yard TD Run to make it 6-0.

Panther Safety intercepted an Apache pass on the next series, setting up a 49-yard TD Run by Jaden Fields. Eric Lommano rushed for the conversion as the Panthers took a 14-0 lead at halftime.

The Panthers opened the second half with a 24-yard run by Jaden Fields. Lommano added the conversion to extend their lead to 22-0. The Apaches mounted a long drive with some nice throwing by QB, JC Petrongolo. Petrongolo capped the drive with a 37-yard TD pass to WR Scott Gutro. Petrongolo passed to Gutro for the conversion to make it 22-8.

The Panthers answered with a 46 yard TD run by Jaden Fields to extend their lead to 28-8. Fullback Jarod Walker scored 2 touchdowns late in the game on runs on 2 yards and 18yards. Aaron Gravelle added the conversion after the final score, as the Panthers defeated the Apaches 42-8.

ELKS - 24
MANETS - 12

The Houghs Neck Manets were unable to fend off an aggressive West Quincy Elks team.

Manets got on the board with touchdowns by Mike Cascarano and Andrew Engren. Great efforts by Stephen Gallant, Willie Ploof and Joey Manton.

The Quincy Point Panthers move on to the QYFL Junior Varsity Championship game this Sunday, Nov. 13 at Veterans Stadium. They will face the West Quincy Elks at 10:30 a.m.

FRESHMEN
ELKS - 6
MANETS - 0

The WQ Elks defeated the favored Houghs Neck Manets 6-0 in the freshmen semifinal. This game was an epic defensive battle with both teams trading blows back and forth throughout the contest.

With 1:46 to go and 4th and goal from the 8 yard line for the elks, Ivan Yhomby hit Ben Hudach on an option pass for a touchdown that was the difference maker.

Shane Wright intercepted a Manet pass to seal the win for the Elks. Enhea Panarati, John Toland, Jordan Mahoney and Dan Hudach gave big defensive efforts for the Elks.

Impressive battling in the defeat by Manets players Ryan Gomez, Brandon Toomer, Teddy Lynch and Mike Galligan.

MUSTANGS - 22
STORM - 8

Despite a valiant effort, the freshmen Squantum Storm fell to the Milton Mustangs.

The lone score for the Storm was a stunning 40-yard TD pass from Charlie Baker to Charlie Ambroult.

Great defensive effort from Benjamin Walinjom, Michael Campbell, Dominic Perry, Michael Phinney, Michael Silverman and Paul Glynn. Great special teams effort from Noel Sanchez, Kevin Gillespie, Brian Wolowicz, Collin Waldron and Ryan Shuman.

The West Quincy Elks will face off against the Milton Mustangs in the freshmen championship game this Sunday at 8:30 a.m.

The teams have faced each other twice this year and have split victories, each winning on the road.

QYFL Cheerleading

Also featured this Sunday at 12:30 p.m. will be the annual QYFL Cheerleading competition.

Quincy residents and families are urged to attend this spectacular display of athletic talent as our cheerleaders compete for the championship.

flags, Past National American Legion Commander Jake Comer said he would continue his fight to amend the Constitution prohibiting the burning of the American flag.

"As I look at these beautiful flags, I can't help but think about the problems that we face throughout this country with the American flag," he said.

Comer explained that, 40 years ago the Supreme Court, in a 5 to 4 decision, ruled that burning the American flag was protected under the Constitution. Since then, Comer said the American Legion and 125 other groups formed the Citizens Flag Alliance in an effort to amend the Constitution outlawing the burning of the flag.

"To take a match to burn every one of these flags and that it would be alright under our Constitution? Hell, no," he said. "To amend the Constitution to protect this flag is something we should think about."

City Councillor Noel DiBona noted his father, Russ, and other family members are veterans.

"I thank everyone here who is a veteran for their service," he said.

Morrisette Post Squadron 294 of the Sons of the American Legion finance officer Guy Ferris noted the ceremony is the 11th in the past six years at the Flags for Veterans Island.

"We seek only to raise the level of reverence for our national symbol and bring increased recognition to our veterans by these efforts," he said.

Guest speaker Robert Bosworth, editor and publisher of The Quincy Sun, and a member of Squadron 294 of the Sons of the American Legion, noted that the flags and the brick walkway on the island "honor the service and sacrifice of our veterans."

"They are testaments of their bravery and their selfless acts," he said.

Bosworth told the gathering that he is not a veteran, "But, the son of a veteran. And, I am very proud of that."

He talked of his late father, Henry Bosworth, founder of The Quincy Sun, who was a decorated WWII Navy combat veteran. The younger Bosworth took the reins of publisher upon his father's passing in 2009.

Henry Bosworth's brother, Richie, who passed away a few weeks ago at age 90, was a Navy veteran of World War II and the Korean War.

Bosworth explained the likely reason the Quincy Point brothers joined the Navy was prompted by them "living in the shadow of the Fore River Shipyard."

"During the height of the (WWII) war – 1943 – more than 32,000 workers, including 1,200 women, were employed there," said Bosworth. "Together, they built some of the mightiest ships like the Lexington and Massachusetts - ships that helped win the war."

Bosworth said his father was part of the Greatest Generation, a term popularized by journalist Tom Brokaw.

"The term describes the generation who grew up during the Great Depression and who later served during World War II, whether in uniforms of the armed services or in other important capacities like shipbuilding," he said.

Henry Bosworth was a 17-year-old Quincy High School senior working part-time as a sports reporter for The Patriot Ledger when Japan bombed Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941. That day, he said, changed the future plans of his father and others.

"Instead of embarking on career paths or furthering their education, the Greatest Generation answered the call of duty and joined the armed services," he said.

Bosworth noted the bravery of those who served during that period.

"They were men and women who found themselves in harm's way for not days or weeks, but years, fighting on land and at sea to preserve our freedom," he said.

Henry Bosworth served on the USS Cogswell and his commanding officer at Naval Training School was Hugh Rodham, father of Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Rodham Clinton. Bosworth met his commanding officer's daughter when she visited Quincy as First Lady in 1996.

Like his father, Bosworth noted other Quincy families sent sons and daughters to serve during World War II - names like Koch, Gillis, Trubiano, Papile, Noble, Beston, Moody and Malvesti. After the war they returned home to serve their city.

"They became police officers and firefighters, government leaders and small business owners, teachers and entrepreneurs – strong threads in the fabric of our city," he said. "Their service to Quincy has shaped our community not only during their generations, but also future generations. We are the beneficiaries of their service and sacrifice."

Bosworth said veterans are true heroes.

"Today, when I hear the word veteran, I feel the word hero. Those who served in harm's way to protect our freedoms. They lead by example and hold a very special place in our hearts," he said.

Following remarks, Bosworth was joined by Moody in placing a memorial wreath at the main flagpole honoring all veterans. Another wreath was placed on the Walk of Honor by Veterans Council Commander Bob Lewis and Moody. Flags were placed on the island by

Kevin J. Roche, 84

KEVIN J. ROCHE

A memorial service for Kevin J. Roche, 84, of Quincy, formerly of Norwell, a highly respected educator, accomplished sailor, and world traveler will be held Saturday at 11 a.m. in Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy.

Mr. Roche died Oct. 29. He was the devoted husband of 57 years to Josephine (McGinnity) Roche.

Born in Brooklyn, NY, and raised in New Bedford, he was the son of the late Gerald and Margaret (Devine) Roche. He graduated Holy Family High School, class of 1950 and the College of the Holy Cross, class of 1954 with a BA in English literature. He served as valedictorian of both classes. Mr. Roche went on to receive his Master's in Education from Boston College, and began his teaching career at Boston English High School that same year. Shortly thereafter, he joined the Navy near the end of the Korean War, and served his country with honor for many years. He was discharged from active duty with the rank lieutenant junior grade.

Following his active duty service, he accepted a teaching position with Boston Latin School, where he taught for many years and had served as head of the English dept. He continued serving in the Navy Reserves, and in the summertime taught at the Navy's Officer Candidate School in Newport, RI. Mr. Roche was a Fulbright exchange teacher and, together with his good friend Bill Collins, was instrumental in expanding the sailing program throughout the public school system in the city of Boston before retiring in 1988.

He was a member of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick in New Bedford, and a member and past commodore of the Satuit Yacht Club in Scituate.

In addition to his beloved bride Josephine, he leaves behind his adult children: Gregory Roche of Haverhill NH, Megin Benassi and her husband Russell of Plympton, Garth Roche of Atlanta and Damon Roche and his wife Marjorie of Halifax. Cherished grandfather of Eric Roche, Robert, Vanessa & Kevin Balboni, and Brett and Andrea Roche. Also survived by his great-grandson Charlie Balboni, extended family and many good friends and former colleagues.

Visiting hours at the funeral home begin at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Interment with military honors will take place privately at the Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne, at a later date.

Memorial donations may be made to the Pine Street Inn, 444 Harrison Ave., Boston, MA 02118.

Barbara J. Ciardelli, 67

Memorial visiting hours for Barbara J. (Arnold) Ciardelli, 67, formerly of Quincy, were held Nov. 3 in the Smith & Heald Funeral Home, Milford, NH.

Mrs. Ciardelli died Oct. 28 at Southern New Hampshire Medical Center, Nashua, after a brief illness, surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in Manchester, NH on June 26, 1949, a daughter of the late Richard Arnold and Louise (Dostie) Arnold Dollard. She was raised and educated in Manchester and graduated from Manchester Central High School, Class of 1967. She earned her nursing degree from the New Hampshire Technical College in Claremont.

Mrs. Ciardelli made her home in Lyndeborough, NH for the past 22 years. She enjoyed going to the beach, spending time outside and all of nature's beauty and animals. Her greatest love was for her family and she cherished spending time with them.

She was predeceased by her son, Christopher R. Ciardelli, and a sister, Judith Soucy.

Family members include her husband of 33 years, Stephen M. Ciardelli of Lyndeborough, formerly of Quincy; a son, Matthew Ciardelli of Lyndeborough, formerly of Quincy; a sister and brother-in-law, Janice and Thomas Fleming of Manchester; several nieces and nephews and several cousins. She was the daughter-in-law of Winston and Florence Ciardelli of Quincy.

PROPOSAL: The proposed project consists of roadway and related drainage improvements, reconstruction of sidewalks with ADA compliant ramps, provision of bicycle accommodations, construction of median islands, as well as geometric modifications and an upgraded traffic signal system. Bicycle accommodations consisting of a usable shoulder have been provided in accordance with applicable design guides.

A secure right-of-way is necessary for this project. Acquisitions in fee and permanent or temporary easements may be required. The City of Quincy is responsible for acquiring all needed rights in private or public lands. MassDOT's policy concerning land acquisitions will be discussed at this hearing.

Written views received by MassDOT subsequent to the date of this notice and up to five (5) days prior to the date of the hearing shall be displayed for public inspection and copying at the time and date listed above. Plans will be on display one-half hour before the hearing begins, with an engineer in attendance to answer questions regarding this project. A project handout will be made available on the MassDOT website listed below.

Written statements and other exhibits in place of, or in addition to, oral statements made at the Public Hearing regarding the proposed undertaking are to be submitted to Patricia A. Leavenworth, P.E., Chief Engineer, MassDOT, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, MA 02116, Attention: Tom Currier, P.E., Roadway Project Management, Project File No. 608013. Such submissions will also be accepted at the hearing. Mailed statements and exhibits intended for inclusion in the public hearing transcript must be postmarked within ten (10) business days of this Public Hearing. Project inquiries may be emailed to dot.feedback.highway@state.ma.us

This location is accessible to people with disabilities. MassDOT provides reasonable accommodations and/or language assistance free of charge upon request (including but not limited to interpreters in American Sign Language and languages other than English, open or closed captioning for videos, assistive listening devices and alternate material formats, such as audio tapes, Braille and large print), as available. For accommodation or language assistance, please contact MassDOT's Chief Diversity and Civil Rights Officer by phone (857-368-8580), fax (857-368-0602), TTD/TTY (857-368-0603) or by email (MassDOT.CivilRights@dot.state.ma.us). Requests should be made as soon as possible prior to the meeting, and for more difficult to arrange services including sign-language, CART or language translation or interpretation, requests should be made at least ten (10) business days before the meeting.

In case of inclement weather, hearing cancellation announcements will be posted on the internet at http://www.massdot.state.ma.us/HIGHWAY/

RELIGION

Quincy Point Congregational

Quincy Point Congregational Church welcomes the "Island Grove Chorus" Sunday, Nov. 13.

The choral group will perform during 10 a.m. worship.

Island Grove Chorus is an "a cappella" chorus that sings in the barbershop style. They are members of Sweet Adeline's International and recently won the Audience Choice Award at their regional competition.

Peter Johnston will preach a sermon titled, "Parts is Parts." Alphonso Peters will be deacon of the day.

Refreshments will be served after worship in the fellowship Hall and will be accompanied by more melodies of the Island Grove Chorus.

The Missions committee will be having a SERRV Sale in the Social Hall on Sundays in November after worship. SERRV is a nonprofit, fair trade organization dedicated to lifting disadvantaged artisans, farmers and their families out of poverty. Many unique, hand crafted items will be available for purchase.

Nov. 13th is also the inaugural "Second Sunday Series" adult bible study class in the parlor after fellowship. The first session will be led by Jack Richardson and the discussion will be "Understanding the Old Testament."

All are welcome.

Hope For Quincy This Weekend

Hope for Quincy, a series of three Christian Renewal Services, will be held this week on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 11-13.

The event is sponsored by the South Shore Evangelical Clergy Association.

Renewal services will be held at three times in three locations over the weekend: on Wollaston Beach between the yacht clubs on Quincy Shore Drive at 2 p.m. on Friday, led by Matt O'Sullivan of Quincy Bay Church with music by Teen Challenge's Men's Choir; at the Atlantic Middle School on Saturday at 6:30 p.m. led by John Culp of Fort Square Presbyterian Church and Sunday at 5 p.m. at Union Congregational Church, led by Jack Swanson with music by local choirs.

For more information contact Union Congregational Church by email at uccwoll@verizon.net or by phone at 617-921-8706.

Houghs Neck Congregational

Sunday morning worship service begins at 10 a.m. at Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave.

Liturgist Laurel Wainwright will call to worship and read the scripture lesson. Pastor Felix Carrion will lead the service and preach "When Gratitude Becomes Praise."

Susan Stimpson and Jake Gordon will serve for the Diaconate. Steve Reed, minister of music, will lead the choir.

A fellowship coffee hour hosted by Nancy Jacobs will follow the service.

Yoga continues on Thursdays at 7 p.m. with Amy Ross.

Tuesday, Nov. 15 the Seaside Social Club is presenting a Pre-Holiday Shoppers Night from 7 to 9 p.m. in Fellowship Hall. Vendors will have a variety of items for gift giving.

Free admission and light refreshments will be served. Everyone is invited to attend.

Union Church Fair Nov. 19

Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd., Wollaston, will sponsor its annual fair celebrating Everything Christmas on Saturday, Nov. 19, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the church's gymnasium.

The fair will feature homemade baked sweets and treats, handcrafted gift items, and decorations.

There will also be a snack bar, silent auction that includes collectible ornaments, antiques, local services, restaurants, and entertainment.

Holiday Fair Saturday

Wollaston Congregational Church, 48 Winthrop Ave., will host its annual Holiday Fair Saturday, Nov. 12 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The fair features knitting, jewelry, canning, cookies, baking, cookies and homemade apple pies as well as holiday decorations and more.

The Wolly Cafe will begin serving lunch at 11 a.m. with hot dogs, hamburgers, hot chowder and other treats. Funds go to preserve the church.

Bethany Congregational

Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center will have a Communion Worship Service and Sunday School at 10:00 a.m. The Rev. William C. Harding will conduct the service and preach a sermon entitled "Try Giving Yourself Away." Fellowship with light refreshments will follow the worship service.

All are welcome to attend Bethany Church Worship Services and its numerous group activities. Bethany has an active Youth Group and a Missions and Growth Committee doing various charity works.

The church office is open from 8:30 a.m. to noon, and 1 to 4 p.m. Please visit us at our Web Page: www.bethanycongchurch.org for updates and activities. Thanks to the Video Ministry, if you're unable to attend worship service on Sundays, the Bethany Church Service is broadcast on Quincy Access Television at 6 p.m. on Thursdays and 10 a.m. on Sundays on Channel 8.

Childcare will be available for infants and toddlers during worship service on Sundays. The church is wheelchair accessible.

Quincy Catholic Collaborative Craft Fair Saturday, Sunday

OBITUARIES

Betty L. Gaziano, 80

Betty L. (Bjork) Gaziano, 80, of North Weymouth, formerly of Quincy, died Oct. 30 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Mrs. Gaziano was born in Quincy to the late Auno and Elizabeth (Ulvila) Bjork. She was raised and educated in Quincy. Mrs. Gaziano had lived in North Weymouth for over twenty-five years, previously in Quincy for many years.

Mrs. Gaziano worked in the accounting department for Johnson & Johnson in Stoughton for many years. Later, she worked as a home health aide for South Shore Hospital. Mrs. Gaziano enjoyed helping people and caring for her patients.

She was devoted to her family, especially her granddaughters and great grandchildren. Mrs. Gaziano enjoyed going out to lunch and shopping on Friday afternoons with them. She loved being in her yard, tending to her flowers or decorating for the holidays.

Beloved wife for sixty years of James C. Gaziano. Devoted mother of Charles J. Gaziano of North Weymouth. Loving grandmother of Deanna M. Cronin and her husband Michael of Hanover, Krista L. Moreis and her husband Anthony of Plymouth. Cherished great grandmother of Jacob Cronin, Victoria and Violet Moreis. Sister of Thomas Bjork and his wife Sue of Quincy, Dorothy Derosier and her husband Dick of East Bridgewater, and the late Carol Scibilio. Betty is also survived by many nieces and nephews.

At the request of the family, funeral arrangements were private. Interment took place in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to the "Have a Sammi Kinda Day" Fund, P.O. Box 3514, Plymouth, MA 02361 (haveasammikindaday.com), a non-profit organization dedicated to Creating Opportunities to Make Children Smile.

Arrangements were under the direction of the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, One Independence Avenue, Quincy, MA 02169.

You are invited to visit thesweeneybrothers.com or call 617-472-6344.

James W. Gallery, 77

A funeral Mass for James W. Gallery, age 77, of Quincy and formerly Dorchester was celebrated Wednesday in St. Mary's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Gallery died peacefully Sunday at home, surrounded by his loving family.

He was born in Dorchester on Oct. 5, 1939, to the late William R. and Norma V. (Murray) Gallery. He was raised and educated in Boston and had lived in Quincy for fifty years.

Mr. Gallery was employed as a court officer at the Massachusetts State House for fifteen years. Previously, he was the former owner of James Gallery Deliveries, JST Deliveries and the Saint Moritz Social Club in West Quincy.

Mr. Gallery was an avid Boston sports fan. He was devoted to his family and especially to his grandchildren and great-grandson.

Beloved husband for fifty-nine years of Carole B. (LaFauci) Gallery. Devoted father of Lynne A. DeLuca and her husband Mark of Whitman, Christine Callahan and her husband Brian of Quincy, Jaime Gallery of Quincy and the late Susan T. McDermott. Loving grandfather of Mark, Matthew, Zack, Rachel, Ally, Danielle, Casey, Seamus, Christian and Lindsay. Cherished great-grandfather of Mason. Dear brother of Joan K. Romano and her husband Lawrence of Weymouth. Jim is also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Interment Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Joan E. Bayer

JOAN E. BAYER

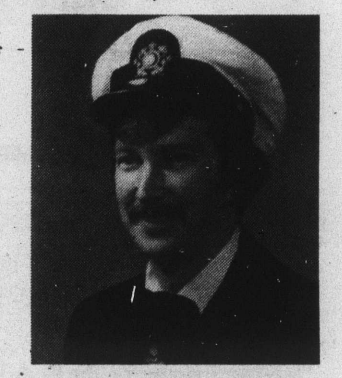
Joan E. (Eaton) Bayer of Quincy and formerly of Milton died Oct. 29

Mrs. Bayer was the mother of Ronald H. Bayer of Hull, and proud grandmother of Michael H. Bayer of Whitman, and the loving and devoted great-grandmother to Hailey and Jonathan Bayer.

She was a smart, strong and caring woman. She was an outstanding nurse for many years and loved taking care of people. She would like the memory of her to be a happy one. She would like to leave an afterglow of smiles when life is done.

Assisting the family was: Hamel, Wickens & Troupe, csofma.com.

John Rounseville, 65



JOHN ROUNSEVILLE

Visiting hours for John "Jack" Rounseville, 65, of Braintree were held Wednesday from 3 to 6 p.m. in Houghs Neck Congregational Church, Quincy.

Mr. Rounseville died Sunday.

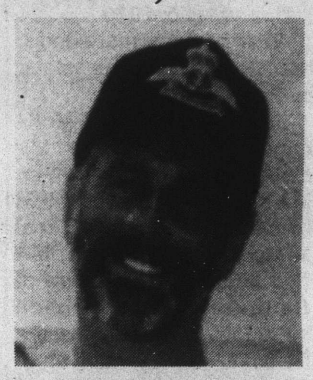
He is survived by his three children, Darlene Corbett-Rounseville, Heather Rounseville and Josh Ledger; his brother Uncle Sam Rounseville and wife Jean Kenney Rounseville; sister Nancy Kropp and husband Thomas Kropp. Cherished grandfather of four: Cameron Cox, Chancellor James Corbett, Amelia Corbett and Savaahna Corbett. Also survived by his nephews and nieces, John Rounseville, David Rounseville, Tina Kropp and Valerie Kindle, and many cousins. He also leaves behind his longtime caretaker and friend Alice Skehan. He is also survived by his beloved rescued dog Ida Claire Rounseville whom he said was the best dog he ever had.

Mr. Rounseville grew up in Quincy and graduated in 1971 from Quincy High School. He served as the youngest ever elected commodore of the Quincy Yacht Club in 1977 at the age of 26. He worked at Roys flowers which was the family business and then moved on to work for Yellow Cab for over 30 years.

After Mr. Rounseville retired he passionately researched the "Rounseville" genealogy leaving us with the abundance knowledge of our past family history. Many of his days/nights was our gift to our family roots. Jack was also a member of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Memorial donations may be made to Father Bill's & MainSpring, 422 Washington St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Kenneth D. Rowell, 68



KENNETH D. ROWELL

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This is a good time to let that intrepid Aries temperament take charge. Your strong leadership will help settle those still-unresolved situations. Support comes from a surprising source.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your problem-solving talents shine as you move to cool down heated emotions. You also inspire trust in all parties when you act with careful consideration of their feelings.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) That long-delayed commitment begins to look better to you. But there's still a crucial fact or two you need to know about it. A health problem needs to be taken care of.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't waste time trying to learn why someone you relied on is wavering in his or her support of your stand on a workplace issue. Move on with the help of more steadfast allies.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Relationships enter a brighter period, both at home and in the workplace. Prospects also look good for single Leos and Leonas, who can expect a welcome visit from Cupid.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Those mixed signals that were complicating your life are giving way now to clear, definitive guidelines. This makes it easier for you to weigh your options and make decisions.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Ask your partner for an explanation of what seems to be a sign of strain in your relationship. The sooner you understand the problem, the sooner you can both act to resolve it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A new challenge in the workplace holds an exciting promise for the future. But be aware of the fact that you haven't been told about all the demands you might have to meet.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your financial picture brightens as you get into sorting out realistic goals and those that are not reachable at this time. "Caution" remains your fiscal watchword.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're deep into your new project, and that's just fine. But don't neglect your family and friends. Spending time with people you care for is always a wise investment.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Past feelings are suddenly reawakened. This could make you emotionally vulnerable. Be careful about decisions you might be asked to make at this time.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You've come to a place where you'll be facing important decisions that can affect your future. Rely on your strong moral compass to guide you toward making the right choices.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're gifted with both natural wisdom and wit -- a good combination for success as a writer or teacher and, most importantly, a parent.

The Star Spangled Banner was performed by Squadron 294 member Bill Daly, a volley was fired by the Leatherneck Honors Society of Massachusetts and Taps were played by LaFleur.

Post members Steven Fowles and Ferris read the roll call of the names of deceased honorees.

Ferris noted that each flag, except one, has a veteran's name affixed.

"That one unnamed flag is to symbolize our prisoners of war and those missing in action who have yet to return home," he said.

Ferris said that Squadron 294 maintains the Flags for Veterans Island and that the brick initiative was a success. He said 416 bricks were purchased and each inscribed with the name of a veteran. The bricks were installed on the walkway leading to the flagpole. Ferris said additional bricks would be available for inscription in the spring.

Salvation Army Launches Annual Red Kettle Campaign

Supports Vital Programming, Services For Children, Seniors And Families

The Salvation Army's Quincy Corps announces its annual Red Kettle Campaign is underway.

The Salvation Army Red Kettle is an important event in Quincy, and bell ringers can be seen at various locations throughout the city during the holiday season.

The money raised during the Red Kettle Campaign is a critical source of funding for vital programs and services for tens of thousands of families, youth and senior citizens in Quincy and across Massachusetts each year. This includes meals, toys and other holiday support for those in need, along with funding for food pantries, social services, and education programs throughout the year.

"We see new people in need of The Salvation Army's services each day," said Captain Timothy Ross, Corps Officer of The Salvation Army Quincy Corps Community Center. "Each circumstance is a bit different. Some parents have seen their hours reduced and can't make ends meet, and others don't have enough income to cover the rising cost of food and utilities. We are excited to get the red kettles back out there so that we can continue to help all those in need."

Donations from the Kettle Campaign fund a variety of local services, including The Salvation Army's preschool program in Quincy. The Salvation Army expects that the number of people in need across the Commonwealth will be at or near record levels this year. Funds raised during the holiday season support needed services and transformational programs all year round.

"With only six weeks to raise funds that need to last all year, it's critical that we get off to a strong start this year," added Captain Nicole Ross. "We are fortunate to live in such a caring and supportive community and we're asking our friends and neighbors to help us achieve a successful Red Kettle Campaign in Quincy."

THE SALVATION ARMY'S Quincy Corps kicked off its annual Red Kettle campaign in the office of Mayor Thomas Koch Nov. 10. Members of the Salvation Army Advisory Board join the mayor in putting the first donations in one of the kettles that will raise money for the less fortunate this season. Salvation Army officials stress that any contribution will help — and donations of time are accepted as gratefully as donations of money. You can find a Red Kettle outside of all Stop & Shop and Shaw's/

Council Approves Borrowing $2 Million For Technology Upgrades

By SCOTT JACKSON

More than 500 new computers will be purchased for Quincy Public Schools students and teachers over the coming months after the City Council on Monday approved borrowing $2 million for technology upgrades.

Of the $2 million being borrowed, $1.3 million will be used to purchase 534 new Dell computers and 84 interactive whiteboards and short-throw projectors for the school system, and $700,000 will be spent to build a new fiber optic network connecting all city buildings.

The $2 million in borrowing that passed Monday night is part of Mayor Thomas Koch's larger capital plan. The council in June approved the first piece of the plan – including $5.33 million for new vehicles and equipment and $5 million for road and sidewalk repairs.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, chairman of the council's finance committee, said Monday Koch's capital plan entails up to $125 million in projects over the next five years. The mayor unveiled his capital plan in May, saying it would include a new public safety headquarters, new elementary school in West Quincy, a new animal shelter, a new Houghs Neck Maritime Center and improvements to the city's parks and playgrounds among other items.

Keith Segalla, the school official responsible for technology training and planning, said 256 new computers would be purchased for academic classroom teachers. Of those, 139 will be for elementary schools, 36 for middle schools, excluding Central, and 81 for the city's high schools, including the GOALS program.

Seven new computer labs will be installed, with a total of 178 computers between them. The new labs will be at Lincoln-Hancock, Parker, Snug Harbor and Squantum elementary schools, Atlantic and Point Webster middle schools, and North Quincy High.

Four new mobile carts, with 25 laptops each, will also be purchased. The mobile carts will be stored at Clifford Marshall, Lincoln-Hancock, Atlantic, and North, and will be made available for use at all schools.

James Mullaney, the school system's director of business affairs, said it would take about a month to purchase the new computers, and they should be ready to use by mid-January or February.

Five classrooms at each elementary and middle school, excluding Central, will receive interactive whiteboards and short-throw projectors. Nine classrooms at North will also be outfitted with them.

"Technology is always a significant challenge, as you know," Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said. "This opportunity, this consideration for the school system is something we really appreciate very, very much."

Dominic Venturelli, network administrator for the city's Information Technology Department, said the fiber optic network would link all city and school buildings together, which will allow for the installation of new VOIP phone systems in the buildings.

Venturelli said local governments have become "bandwidth hungry" as they switch from storing data on conventional hard drives to networks of servers, also known as the cloud.

"High speed networks are critical to the changing needs of local governments, with a specific emphasis on law enforcement and public safety agencies," he stated. "From data on traffic lights, video surveillance and email, the volume of infor-

Community Panel On Addiction Thursday

Maria Droste Counseling Services will host a community panel discussion addressing disparities and barriers to care for those impacted by substance use tonight (Thursday).

The discussion will take place inside Quincy High School, 100 Coddington St., from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Panelists include Sen. John Keenan, Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti, Middlesex County Sheriff Peter Koutoujian, victims advocate Kathy Deady, addiction counselor Georgia Thomas-Diaz, and addiction therapist Danielle Owen. QATV's Joe Catalano will moderate.

The panel will highlight what local leaders and agencies are doing to address the addiction and substance-use epidemic, and allow guests to discover key community resources available to address substance-use disorders.

Those in attendance will be able to hear stories of recovery and also discuss barriers that are stopping someone from getting help.

Seaside Gardeners Tree Lighting Nov. 27

The Seaside Gardeners of Squantum invite the community to their 17th annual Christmas tree lighting ceremony on Sunday, Nov. 27.

The ceremony begins at 4:30 p.m. and the tree lighting is at 5 p.m. Santa arrives at 5 p.m. as well.

The event takes place at the Daniel Gilbert Memorial Park at Dorchester Street and East Squantum Street. Free cookies and hot chocolate will be served by the Garden Club members.

If the Quincy Christmas Parade is cancelled due to inclement weather Nov. 27, then the tree lighting ceremony is also cancelled.

All are welcome.

THE ORGANIC GEMSTONE

Unlike mineral gemstones, pearls are technically referred to as "organic gems" because they are harvested from shellfish. Each of these lustrous beauties is formed after an irritant (such as a piece of sand) becomes lodged within an oyster shell. In response to this intruder, the oyster releases a semi-translucent substance known as "nacre," which envelops the irritant and becomes thicker over time. With this in mind, the most important factor to consider when purchasing pearls is their "luster," which refers to the sharpness and intensity of reflections on the pearl's surface. The closer the clarity of images reflected from the pearl's surface resemble those of a mirror, the better the luster. Size also matters greatly when it comes to pearls.

Pearl farmers typically use surgical-style instruments to harvest pearls. Not only does removing a pearl not kill the oyster that produced it, but pearl farmers are careful not to harm their oysters. As oysters age, they typically produce better and better pearls. To learn more, please call 617-773-3636, or stop by our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. . Russell Erikson's Keynote Address - Quincy Veterans Day Ceremony, Nov. 11, 2016

'Our Debt To America's Veterans Is Eternal'

Editor's note:

Russell G. Erikson, a decorated World War II Army Air Force pilot, was the keynote speaker at the Quincy Veterans Day observance Nov. 11.

Erikson, a 94-year-old Quincy native, served with the U.S. Army's 8th Air Force in Europe during World War II. He piloted a B-24 Liberator bomber during the war, flying 33 combat missions over Germany and Europe. For his service, Erikson received the Air Medal with five Oak Leaf Clusters, three Distinguished Flying Crosses, and the French Legion of Honor.

Erikson attended Quincy High School where he was a standout athlete in cross-country and hockey. He worked at the Quincy Shipyard and Boston Gear Works before his service in the war.

Upon completion of his service, Erikson returned with his wife, Beverly, who would remain at his side for 62 years, built their home in Quincy and raised five sons and a daughter. Erikson resumed his career as a carpenter and construction contractor until his retirement. He still maintains a myriad of interests and an active lifestyle.

The following is the text of Erikson's keynote address.

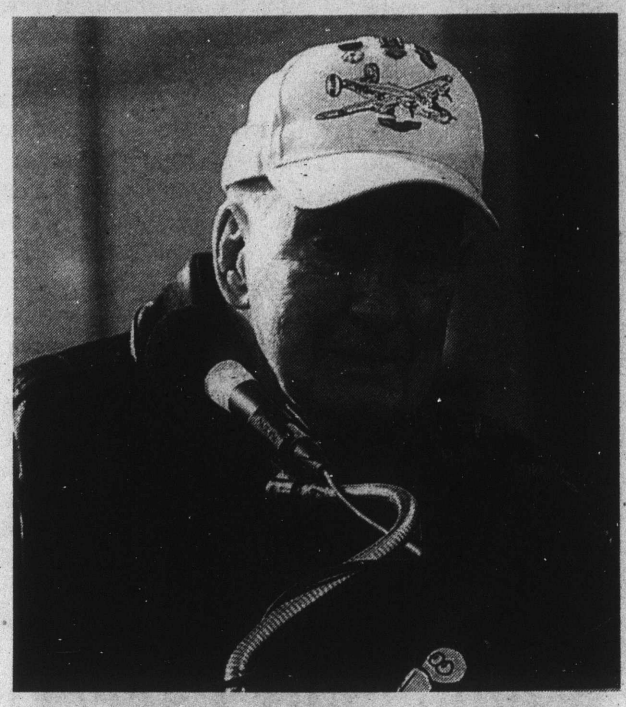
I would like to thank Mayor Koch, Director Nicholson, the Quincy Veterans Council and all our city officials for allowing me the opportunity to speak here today. Quincy is and always has been my home. I was born here, went to school here, and made a good life for myself, and my family, here in Quincy. I have always been proud of this City and I am honored to stand before you as one of its sons today.

I enlisted in the Army Air Force in September of 1942 because I wanted to be a pilot, an occupation that had fascinated me since my childhood. I was sent to Norwich University as part of my basic training and then went on to different airfields around the country where I learned basic flying skills and progressed to larger and more complicated airplanes until I finally got my flying wings at Moody Field in Valdosta, Georgia.

I was next sent to Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama where I would learn to fly the B-24 Liberator, the greatest bomber aircraft of the time. An aircraft, which thanks to American industrial capabilities, was produced during the war and came off the assembly line at the unbelievable rate of one plane per hour.

It was quite the progression to go from a small 200 hp, twin-engine plane to a 4800 hp four engines, 35-ton behemoth that was the B-24 Liberator. I studied over and over, every detail I could learn about that aircraft and its flying characteristics. I got to where I could fly it well and very comfortably as low as just a few feet off the ground...and I was doing this at the tender age of just 22.

The bomber I flew was named the Louisiana Belle.



'I WAS CERTAINLY not a hero,' a humble Russell Erikson said in his keynote remarks at Quincy's Veterans Day observance Nov. 11. 'I was just a very good pilot. I served my country at a time when the world was in the middle of tremendous worldwide upheaval. Full-fledged combat raged in the oceans and on three major continents. Personal liberty and freedom was in danger all over the world. America arose out of that conflict to help bring peace across our planet and in doing so to become the most powerful and respected Nation on Earth.'

Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

The name was assigned to her by the Crew Chief who kept her flying and not by any of us, in the crew, who flew her. However, coincidentally, the aircraft designation letter on the tail happened to be the letter E so I always contended it stood for "Erikson!" You can still see the Louisiana Belle today, as it is currently on display, at Barksdale Air Force Base in Louisiana.

I was then sent to Europe to serve the 8th Army Air Force, 14th Combat Wing, 44th Bombardment Group, 68th Squadron based in England. If you have studied or read anything about the Army Air Force in Europe during World War II then you know that it had a very high casualty rate in terms of both personnel and aircraft. Because of that fact, aircrews were required to complete only 25 missions before ending their tour of duty and returning home. Not long after we got there, that 25 figure was raised to 30 missions. When my crew and I had survived 28 missions, the mission number to go home was raised to 35. My crew and I had flown 33 missions of those 35 missions when the war in Europe ended.

It never ceases to amaze me just how much damage the B-24 could take and still stay in the air if you knew what you were doing. It was my job and objective to complete those missions and bring the Louisiana Belle, and my crew, back safely. Trust me when I say, there was more than one occasion and more than one mission where that objective looked seriously in doubt. We flew missions where the anti-aircraft fire over our targets ahead was so thick – it looked like we were about to land on a black top parking lot. Between missions, when we were not flying, we would very often watch those amazing crew chiefs and their assistants as they worked day and night repairing our damaged planes. And believe me, rarely did any plane come back from a bombing mission undamaged. They were just an awesome group of dedicated mechanics.

When we were flying, we lived a fairly comfortable life and if I ever have any doubts about that, I remind myself about a friend of mine who spent 39 straight days in combat, living in the same set of dirty clothes, eating cold K rations, moving from foxhole to foxhole and sometimes removing a dead German soldier from a foxhole, so that he would not have to dig one again.

I stand before you today as the only remaining living member of a very wonderful and outstanding group of young men with whom I flew. On our Hamburg mission, Pat Conlon, who was my tail gunner, had the distinction of being one of very few aviators credited with shooting down a German ME262, the world's first jet fighter plane that was introduced by Germany towards the end of the war. A group of engineers at MIT designed the very computing gun sight Pat used to shoot down that jet. Pat would stay in the service and serve in Korea. He would die early in life from some form of atomic poisoning.

Ray Rydz was one helluva good flight engineer and played no small part in our surviving many of those missions. He was in and out of VA hospitals many times after the war, but the VA took good care of him and he died in his much later years.

My bombardier, Jim Wright, lived a good life, too, after the war. He died a few years ago leaving $200,000 to the 2nd Air Division Museum back in England.

In one of our missions, we took part in the Battle of the Bulge and the liberation of Bastogne. When the skies cleared on Christmas Day, 1944, we were able to fly in and bomb the German troops below. We had some good times, too, when we flew. On one mission, we dropped supplies to the Allied troops as they crossed the Rhine River. What we did not know at the time, but would learn later, was that General Eisenhower had been observing the crossings from inside the top of a nearby church steeple at that very moment. After the supply drop, we along with another B-24 crew returning to base, flew along the German autobahn at 4 foot off the road.

I was certainly not a hero. I was just a very good pilot. I served my country at a time when the world was in the middle of tremendous worldwide upheaval. Full-fledged combat raged in the oceans and on three major continents. Personal liberty and freedom was in danger all over the world. America arose out of that conflict to help bring peace across our planet and in doing so to become the most powerful and respected Nation on Earth.

Our National Flag rose to become the symbol of freedom across the globe. It was our foot soldiers and sailors who carried that banner and planted it around the globe in the name of freedom. They deserve the highest praise for their efforts and I am proud to say that I, from the air, was their helper. We supported each other. We always have and we still do.

I am in awe of the men and women who wear America's service uniforms today, as they carry-on, equally and proudly, America's mission with the same pride and diligence as the predecessors. Our debt to America's veterans is eternal. We are a great nation but we have never claimed to be perfect. The American Flag and our National Anthem are our National Symbols of Hope and belief in Freedom and Equality of life for all. The world has not reached that level yet...and in a number of ways, neither have we. But these two symbols are also the enduring legacy and testimony to the sacrifices made by America's veterans in the eternal pursuit of freedom and equality. I hate it when I see our flag or national anthem disrespected. It is absolutely the wrong thing to do as a chosen form of protest for anything in this country. It is a shortsighted and ignorant gesture that disrespects all Americans who have worn the uniform in defense of freedom and it disrespects their families as well.

I have made it to the age where buying green bananas may be a questionable purchase, so I thank the good Lord for every day he gives me and I thank him for all that he has given and blessed me with. I thank HIM for bringing the United States of America into existence and for all the blessings he has bestowed upon this Nation. And while it might just be the lament of one little old man, I also ask him to help restore, in the hearts and minds of all American people, the dignity and respect for our National Symbols; to cherish their meaning and purpose and to never allow any diminishment of our honor and gratitude for the sacrifices made by America's veterans.

Thank you all and God Bless America.

The Quincy Sun

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1909 real photo postcard view of Warren Avenue in Wollaston Heights. Dozens of beautiful American elm trees lined both sides of the street. They were planted here and on most of the streets of Wollaston over 100 years ago by the land development companies. Over the years the unstoppable Dutch elm disease has destroyed all but a few scattered handfuls of these majestic trees throughout all of the city. Warren Avenue runs from Highland Avenue downhill to Newport Avenue where there used to be an iron truss footbridge over the Old Colony railroad tracks to Warren Avenue Extension that continues on to Standish Avenue. "Reaching out to those in need by volunteering to ring bells is a wonderful way to connect with the community, to give back, to share blessings, and to be blessed in return," said Captain Timothy Ross. To volunteer this Christmas season, contact Captain Timothy Ross at 617-472-2345 or by email at Timothy.Ross@use.salvationarmy.org.

The Salvation Army is also grateful for the support of Quincy's area businesses that have sponsored many of our kettles this year. Sponsors include Quincy Credit Union, Colonial Federal Savings Bank, Quincy College, The Quincy Sun, Curry Hardware, NorthEast Community Bank, Dr. John Pasciuccio, DDS, Rotary Club of Quincy, Keohane Funeral Home, and the Law Offices of Morgan J. Gray, P.C., and Eastern Insurance.

The Red Kettle tradition began in 1891 when Salvation Army Captain Joseph McFee wanted to help feed needy citizens in San Francisco. McFee remembered the ferry landings in Liverpool England, where people would sit with small kettles that travelers would toss spare change into to help the less fortunate. Placing his own kettle on Market Street in Oakland California, McFee was able to help individuals on Christmas. The idea traveled to Boston in 1897 and the Red Kettle Campaign has been a tradition ever since.

Quincy Honors Its Veterans

The City of Quincy once again held its annual Veterans Day Parade through downtown Quincy before ending at the Doughboy Statue at the Adams Academy where World War II Pilot Russell Erikson, a 94-year-old Quincy native addressed the crowd.

Erikson served in the US Army's 8th Air Force in Europe and piloted a B-24 Liberator bomber, flying 33 combat missions over Germany and Europe.

In his remarks, he spoke of the incredible heroism he saw in those he fought beside. He remembered those who never came home and he remembered how much America sacrificed in that war. He also spoke of all our veterans, Korean War, Vietnam War, the Gulf War and today's ongoing fighting in the Mid-East.

At the end of the ceremony, the City of Quincy presented a special commemorative coin and certificate to Quincy residents who served during the Vietnam War as a token of the city's respect for these men and women and that their service to country would never be forgotten.

A few weeks ago pretty much the same thing happened over in Charlestown when State Secretary of Veterans Affairs Francisco Urena pinned another state commemorative pin on those from Charlestown who served during the Vietnam War. While I did not come from Charlestown nor live there now, I too received my pin for which I was deeply honored. Charlestown has always been part of my family's roots.

When most Vietnam veterans returned home decades ago, they were not greeted with honor as the war had become so divisive back home. It is nice to see so many years later these aging veterans from the Baby Boomer generation finally getting the honor and respect denied them back then.

Sheets Forms Task Force To Fight Crime, Vandalism, Litter

Mayor James A. Sheets formed an ambitious city-wide task force designed to target and reduce areas of vandalism, crime and litter throughout Quincy.

In announcing the task force, Sheets said its mission will be to determine ways to reduce vandalism, crime and pollution in all of Quincy by identifying all the contributing factors.

U.S. MUST MAINTAIN ITS VIGILANCE TO REMAIN FREE

Army Chief of Staff General Gordon Sullivan said that with President George H. W. Bush preparing to send more American troops to the Persian Gulf, that America must maintain its vigilance to stay free.

Sullivan, a Quincy native and a four-star general, was the guest speaker at the Veterans Day ceremonies sponsored by the Quincy Veterans Council. Sullivan delivered his remarks to some 200 veterans, city and state officials, and area residents. The ceremonies were held on the grounds of the Adams Academy.

Students Assemble Toiletries, Snacks, Supplies To Benefit The Homeless

North Quincy High School seniors in Kristen McCarthy's U.S. Government and Politics class along with fourth graders from the Parker School recently assembled bags of toiletries, snacks, and supplies for the homeless to aid the group C.O.P.E. (Communities Offering Practical Encouragement).

In all 94 bags were made from the donations of the generous NQHS community and notes of encouragement created by the younger students were included in the bags. C.O.P.E. is a group made up of citizens in our local communities who help to service people on the street in the city of Boston by hand delivering donations and offering support for those in need. They have a Facebook page and a running Amazon.com wishlist for anyone to give at any time.

Sonia Fairhurst and Joan Bennett are the organizers and their enthusiasm for the cause is contagious. They are so grateful to the students for the work that was done that they are coming to personally thank the U.S. Government and Politics classes.

Overall, it was a very special experience to see the outpouring of generosity from the students at NQHS and at the Parker School. The schools look forward to working with them again and putting their efforts together to continue to make a difference in the community.

Quincy's Abigail Coughlin Cast In 'The Snow Queen'

Six-Night Run Begins Dec. 2

Abigail Coughlin, a sixth-grader at Atlantic Middle School, will play the role of Princess Lena when Canton Community Theatre presents Hans Christian Andersen's "The Snow Queen" during a six-night run that begins Friday, Dec. 2.

Abigail began her acting career at the age of 7 with South Shore School of Theatre in Quincy. Her roles there have included the Fox in "Aesop Fables" and Widow Corney in "Oliver." But her favorite was the role of Marta in "The Sound of Music" with the North Quincy High School Drama Club.

Besides acting, Abigail enjoys singing and playing the piano. She is a member of her school's chorus and select choir. Her favorite song is the "The Star-Spangled Banner" and her dream is to sing it someday at Fenway Park.

The story of "The Snow Queen," which centers on the struggle between good and evil as experienced by a young girl named Gerda and her friend Kay, was the original inspiration for the beloved Disney film "Frozen."

QUINCY'S ABIGAIL COUGHLIN will play the role of Princess Lena in the Canton Community Theatre's production of Hans Christian Andersen's "The Snow Queen."

The Stuart Paterson-adapted holiday classic, which features music by Savourna Stevenson and a South Shore cast, will be staged at the Village Shoppes at Cobbs Corner, 95 Washington St., Canton (next to the Shoe Department). Dates are Dec. 2 and 9 at 7:30 p.m., and Dec. 3, 4; 10 and 11 at 4 p.m.

Tickets are $15 for adults and $10 for children under 12. They can be purchased at the door or at www.cantoncommunitytheatre.org.

Wollaston Garden Club Greens Sale Dec 3

Members of the Wollaston Garden Club of Quincy have begun their work making bows, collecting pine cones, wiring shells and cones, and painting floral sprays for the many unique wreath, swags, and arrangements, which will be available for sale at their Annual Holiday Greens Sale next month.

The sale will be held Saturday, Dec. 3rd from 9 a.m. to noon at Wollaston Congregational Church, corner of Lincoln and Winthrop Avenues in Wollaston.

There will be packages of greens filled with a variety of evergreens and holly, and both small seasonal floral arrangements and large outdoor containers designed for winter interest. Many wreaths and swags, decorated by WGC designers, will be on sale. Garden club wreaths are unique, and fairly priced.

Each year, the club looks for new ideas for novelty and gift items. Shoppers will find several different items suitable for gift-giving or stocking-stuffing, at the sale, all reasonably priced.

Arrive early in the sale for the best selection. Proceeds support the Wollaston Garden Club's work on civic beautification in Quincy, and other local community, youth, education and conservation projects.

Easy Corn Fritters

By MARIE

Through the years I have made all kinds of fritters - from clam fritters to various vegetable fritters. The only difference between how I have made them and the new recipe I found is the separation of the eggs.

Today's recipe is for a corn fritter but I also used it to make an artichoke hearts fritter, and the difference is a crustier coating and was very delicious.

Recipe

1 and ¾ cup fresh corn kernels (from about 3 ears) also frozen corn can be used instead.

½ cup of flour
3 eggs (separated)
½ teaspoon salt
One dash of pepper
¼ cup vegetable oil

Beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. Stir together the corn, egg yolks, flour, salt and pepper. Then fold in egg whites.

In hot oil drop two tablespoons of the corn mixture per fritter without crowding the skillet.

Cook until golded brown on both sides. Then drain on paper towel.

Sweet, Healthy Little Snacks

By SUSIE

How about something nice and sweet! We all deserve something sweet after this election season, correct? How about something sweet, healthy and easy!

These are fun little snacks that you can make in a jiffy. You may even have the ingredients all ready in your cupboard. These are packed with lots of healthy individual ingredients that when combined, have just the right amount of crunchy and chewy. These are great to throw in a baggie and take to the office for a snack. (Just make sure you make enough for your co workers as well.)

This recipe has been adapted from a Whole Foods recipe.

- 1 cup organic unsweetened peanut butter
- 1/3 cup raw honey
- 2 teaspoons unsweetened organic cocoa powder
- 1/2 cup raisins or dried cranberries
- 3/4 cup unsweetened shredded coconut, divided
- 1/2 cup semisweet chocolate chips
- 1/4 cup sesame seeds
- 1/4 cup finely chopped nuts (walnuts, pecans, etc.)

Method:

Mix peanut butter, honey and cocoa powder until well combined. Stir in the raisins and 2 tablespoons of the coconut. Stir in chocolate chips. Refrigerate for 1 to 2 hours.

Place remaining coconut, sesame seeds and nuts into 3 separate bowls. Using a spoon, scoop small heaps of the peanut mixture from the bowl; roll into 1 1/4-inch balls.

Rolling is easier if you form a rough ball, roll in coconut, and then continue rolling into a more perfect shape.

Roll each finished ball in more coconut, sesame seeds and chopped nuts. Arrange the balls on a plate, cover loosely and refrigerate for at least 30 minutes.

Christmas Poster Contest Winners

Christmas poster contest winners for 2016 have been determined.

The Christmas Festival Committee and Quincy Access Television sponsor the contest in all the Quincy elementary schools and the Quincy Catholic Academy.

This year's contest saw an increase in the number of entries; well over 600 posters were submitted for judging. The winners receive a cash prize and have the opportunity to ride in a convertible in the Christmas Parade on Sunday, Nov. 27.

The winning students and their schools are:

In grades 1-2-3:

First prize Sara Li, Wollaston School. Second prize Cattien Huynh, Quincy Catholic Academy. Third prize Parikshit Bhatt, Marshall School.

In grades 4-5:

First prize Ryan Setow, Montclair School. There is a tie for second prize: Isabella Kuang, Wollaston School and Ciara Golden, Beechwood Knoll School. Third-prize Jason Zou Montclair School.

QHA Hosts State Legislative Visit To Discuss Anti-Poverty Programs

Two local legislators – state Sen. John Keenan and state Rep. Tackey Chan recently joined staff and participants from the Massachusetts Learning, Employment and Assets Program (MassLEAP) at a legislative open house held at the Quincy Housing Authority.

Participants discussed the value of one-on-one Mobility Mentoring in helping them achieve their goals and move toward economic stability.

"The event was a great opportunity to hear from the participants of the MassLEAP program," said Keenan. "Their experiences in the program show that if you give people tools and resources, and they match them with personal hard work and commitment, success in the form of financial stability is achievable."

"I learned how easy it is to budget and have already paid-off $2,000 in debt," said Lucreta, a MassLEAP participant who lives in Quincy with her 7-year old child. "I never would have been able to put aside the money to give my son music lessons at the New England Conservatory." Participants must have a child under 18 years old in order to be eligible for the program.

In addition to professional coaching in career management, financial literacy, and education and skills training, families who participate also receive an escrow account that allows them to save money as their income grows and rent increases. After successfully completing the five-year program, participants receive access to the savings accrued to use toward buying a home, continuing education, or other personalized goals that improve their financial stability.

"I give my mentor Megan all the credit and she turns it back to me. She says I'm the one doing the work," said David, who lives in Quincy with his wife and three children. He recently got a promotion at the company where he has worked for 12 years. He added, "[This program] makes you feel like you are going in the right direction."

According to Economic Mobility Pathways (EMPath), 41 percent of program participants increased their earned income after one year in the program, and 83 percent have already completed one or more goals. MassLEAP is in its second year of a five-year state funded pilot program. The Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) has committed up to $8.125 million to fund partnerships between Local Housing Authorities, Regional Administering Agencies and pre-qualified service providers to provide Mass LEAP participants with comprehensive set of services and asset development opportunities that will increase family economic stability.

"Massachusetts doesn't have a great track record converting pilot programs into long-term initiatives. We hope the unbelievable success of this program will help change that," said Ruthie Liberman, vice president of Public Policy at EMPath.

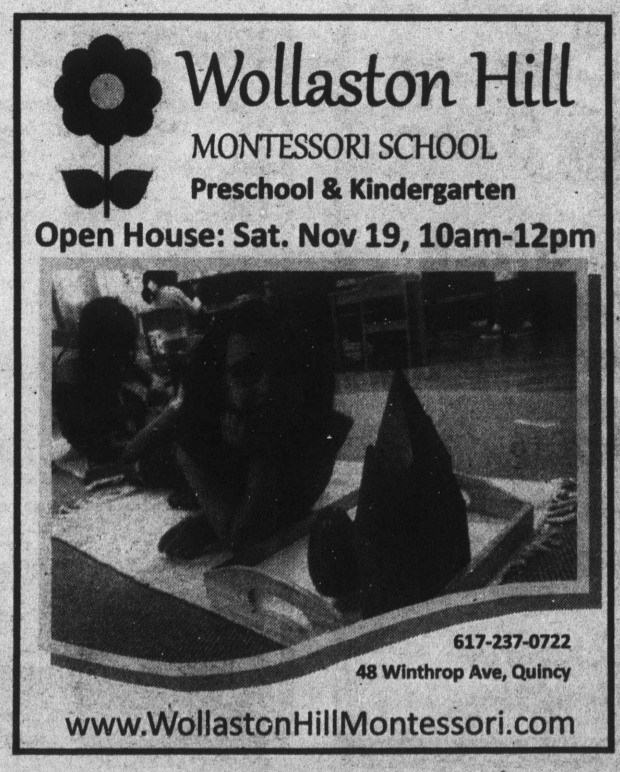
Pack 42 Cub Scouts Spread Pre-Holiday Cheer

The Cub Scouts of Quincy Pack 42 have been busy with pre-holiday community service, learning about how they can assist local families in need.

Pack 42 Cub Scouts participated in the Boy Scouts of America annual "Scouting for Food" campaign in early November. Cub Scouts consolidated the food donations they had gathered in their neighborhoods. Cubmaster Stephanie Webb, with more than a dozen scouts, delivered 160 pounds of food to the Quincy Crisis Center in advance of the holiday season. The boys further assisted by sorting the many boxes and cans of food in preparation for the holiday rush.

For more information on how to help local families in need, please check their website at www.sangercenter.org.

For more information on our Cub Scout program, visit the Pack 42 website at http://cubscoutpack42.doubleknot.com or find us on Facebook, Cub Scout Pack 42 (Quincy, MA).



Turkey Tips For A Safe And Delicious Holiday Meal

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

RUTH JONES

The Thanksgiving gathering is the largest meal many cooks prepare each year.

Trying to accomplish this amazing feat accurately, especially the turkey, brings a fair amount of pressure whether or not a host is experienced with roasting a turkey or not.

Food safety is probably not the first thing you think about when planning a holiday dinner. But to keep your gathering from being memorable in the wrong way, it's important to protect your guests from food-borne illnesses.

Follow these tips to make sure your Thanksgiving meal is both delicious and safe to serve.

Steps to follow before cooking a turkey:

• Read labels carefully. Temperature labels show if the bird is fresh or frozen. If you plan to serve a fresh turkey, purchase it no more than two days before Thanksgiving.

• Purchase two thermometers: a refrigerator thermometer to ensure the turkey is stored at 41 °F or slightly below and a food thermometer to make sure the cooked turkey reaches a safe 165 °F.

• Thaw the turkey by using the microwave, the running cold water method, or the refrigerator. The refrigerator method is USDA recommended. A frozen turkey is safe indefinitely, but a thawing turkey must defrost at a safe temperature.

Allocate 24 hours per 5 pounds to defrost in the refrigerator. When the turkey is left out at room temperature for more than two hours, its temperature can creep into the danger zone between 41°F and 135°F, where disease causing bacteria can grow rapidly.

Steps to follow when cooking a turkey:

• Wash hands with warm water and soap for 20 seconds before touching any food to prevent the spread of many types of infection and illness. Bacteria from raw poultry can contaminate anything that it touches. Thoroughly wash your hands, utensils, and work surfaces to prevent the spread of bacteria to your food and family.

• Do not wash the turkey. This only spreads pathogens onto kitchen surfaces. The only way to kill bacteria that causes foodborne illness is to fully cook the turkey.

• Keep raw turkey separated from all other foods at all times.

• Use separate cutting boards, plates, and utensils when handling raw turkey to avoid cross-contamination. Wash items that have touched raw meat with warm soap and water, or place them in a dishwasher.

• Cook the turkey until it reaches a minimum temperature of 165 °F, as measured by a food thermometer. Check the turkey's temperature by inserting the thermometer in three places: the thickest part of the breast, the innermost part of the thigh, and the innermost part of the wing.

Cook stuffing in a casserole dish to make sure it is thoroughly cooked. If you stuff the turkey, do so just before cooking. Use a food thermometer to make sure the stuffing's center reaches 165°F. Bacteria can survive in stuffing that has not reached 165°F, and possibly cause food poisoning.

Let the turkey stand 20 minutes before removing all stuffing from the cavity and carving the meat.

• Keep guests with sticky fingers out of the kitchen. Holidays occur during cold and flu season, which further compounds the fact that about half of all people have staph aureus bacteria on their hands, which can cause illness.

Steps to follow when consuming leftover Thanksgiving food:

• Refrigerate leftovers within two hours to prevent bacteria from growing on the food. Clostridium perfringens is the second most common bacterial cause of food poisoning. Outbreaks occur most often in November and December, and appear to be related to holiday meals.

• Divide leftovers into smaller portions. Refrigerate or freeze in covered shallow containers for quicker cooling. Store leftovers in shallow pans or containers to decrease cooling time, this prevents the food from spending too much time at unsafe temperatures (between 41 °F to 135 °F).

• Discard any turkey, stuffing, and gravy left out at room temperature longer than 2 hours; 1 hour in temperatures above 90 °F.

• Do not store stuffing inside a leftover turkey. Remove the stuffing from the turkey, and refrigerate the stuffing and the meat separately.

• Avoid consuming leftovers that have been left in the refrigerator for longer than 3 or 4 days. Use the freezer to store leftovers for longer periods of time.

• Keep leftovers in a cooler with ice or frozen gel packs if the food is traveling home with a guest who lives more than two hours away.

• If freezing leftovers, use within 2 to 6 months for best quality.

Reheating Your Turkey:

Cooked turkey may be eaten cold or reheated.

•Set the oven temperature no lower than 325 °F.

• Reheat turkey to an internal temperature of 165 °F. Use a food thermometer to check the internal temperature.

• To keep the turkey moist, add a little broth or water and cover.

In the Microwave Oven:

• Cover your food and rotate it for even heating. Allow standing time.

• Check the internal temperature of your food with a food thermometer for a full 2 minutes to make sure it reaches a minimum of 165 °F.

Finally, be careful with eggs. Many eggnog recipes call for uncooked eggs; you need to use pasteurized eggs or cook the egg yolks to be sure you kill any potential salmonella bacteria.

Eggs should be kept refrigerated until ready for use and always cook egg products to 160 degrees.

Have a Safe and Happy Thanksgiving!

Plymouth 400 Exhibit At Quincy Historical Society

"Our" Story: 400 Years of Wampanoag History, an educational and cultural exhibit about history and traditions of the Wampanoag Tribe, is currently on display at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St. in Quincy.

This traveling, multi-media exhibit is part of the Signature Events and Programs of Plymouth 400, Inc., the organization planning the international 400th anniversary commemoration of the 1620 Mayflower voyage and the founding of Plymouth Colony. The exhibit will be open to the public throughout Native American Heritage Month this November, and visitors are encouraged to share their thoughts on "Our"Story using the hashtag #WampanoagStory.

"Our"Story was created to bring to light key legacies of America's earliest beginnings from the Wampanoag perspective, a perspective that has largely been left out of the narrative of this iconic moment in American history. Told in the Native voice, this exhibit received widespread media attention since its debut for its honest and powerful approach to highlighting occurrences in indigenous history that are not commonly known yet vital to the founding of Plymouth Colony and the building of America.

The exhibit's first chapter, "Captured 1614", tells a critical back story to colonization and the roots of the American holiday, Thanksgiving. The second chapter, "The Messenger Runner", highlights the Wampanoag tribe's traditional communication network and tribal territories predating the Pilgrim's arrival.

Plymouth 400 commissioned a Native design team to create "Our"Story to ensure that the exhibit was thoroughly representative of the history of New England's indigenous peoples. The Indian Spiritual and Cultural Training Council Inc. and SmokeSygnals Marketing and Communications conceptualized, researched, and produced "Our"Story, and members of the Mashpee Wampanoag and Aquinnah Wampanoag tribes portrayed historical figures for the exhibit. The creation of this exhibit aligns with Plymouth 400's mission to create a commemoration that is historically accurate and culturally inclusive, as indigenous peoples have declined participation or faced misrepresentation and even omission from previous anniversary events.

"Perceptions from Plymouth's earliest period became etched into the American story when President Lincoln used the iconic symbol of the Wampanoag people and English colonists feasting together in 1621 as a representation of cooperation as he proclaimed our national holiday, Thanksgiving," said Michele Pecoraro, executive director of Plymouth 400. "Plymouth 400 is committed to creating a commemoration that is historically accurate, which means addressing realities of the story that don't reflect the simplified and often inaccurate depictions of the First Thanksgiving. This exhibit is intended to create conversations around these crucial realities in our history in an informative and authentic way, honoring the contributions of both cultures and recognizing the complexities of their relationship."

"Our"Story is open to the public at Quincy Historical Society through Dec. 31.

Croall 'Talk & Coffee' Saturday

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall will host "Talk & Coffee" Saturday, Nov. 19 from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. at Webster's Eatery, 13 Scammel St.

This is a forum for residents to come share their concerns, ideas and opinions over a cup of coffee and also meet some of their neighbors. All Ward 2 residents are invited and encouraged to attend.

For more information call 857-939-1624 or e-mail bcroall@quincyma.gov.

Historical Society Trip To Holiday Pops

Quincy Historical Society is offering a trip to Holiday Pops at Boston's Symphony Hall, with supper and transportation included, on Thursday, Dec. 15.

The Society has a block of seats in the center section of the second balcony, considered by many the best location in the hall to see and hear everything. The program will feature all the Pops' Holiday favorites, from traditional to contemporary, a visit by Santa Claus, a performance of "The Night Before Christmas," and perhaps a surprise or two.

The evening begins at 5:45 p.m. with a buffet supper at the Adams Academy, catered by Simply Good Catering, featuring soup and sandwiches, dessert, tea and coffee. At 6:45 p.m., a Brush Hill bus takes everyone to Symphony Hall for an 8 p.m. performance. The concert concludes at 10, and the bus will return everyone to the Adams Academy by approximately 10:30 p.m.

The price for the trip is $80 for Historical Society members and $85 for non-members. To register or for more information, call the Historical Society at 617-773-1144.

Free Concert At St. Chrysostom's Church

Palaver Strings, a new professional orchestra based in Boston, will present a free concert at St. Chrysostom's Church, 1 Linden St., Quincy, on Saturday, Nov. 19 at 8 p.m.

The concert will feature music by Mendelssohn, Purcell, and Britten. St. Chrysostom's Church is fully accessible. More information may be found at www.stcquincy.org or by calling 617-472-0737.

Palaver Strings, a musician-led string orchestra, is dedicated to the collaborative interpretation of classical masterworks.

In addition to the concert at St. Chrysostom's, Palaver Strings will be giving a free concert for children at the Thomas Crane Public Library on Saturday, Nov. 19 at 10:30 a.m.

North Quincy High School will host its annual Photo Sale Fundraiser to benefit Boston Children's Hospital Tuesday, Dec. 6 between 5:30 and 8 p.m.

The event will be held in the NQHS atrium.

Original, framed works of photography/digital art/design created by NQHS students will be for sale.

There will also be raffles, a donation jar for spare change and complimentary food/beverages.

Clinton Won All Quincy Precincts In Presidential Election

By SCOTT JACKSON

Hillary Clinton carried Quincy and the rest of Massachusetts on Election Day in the race for the White House, but lost the Electoral College to Donald Trump who is set to become the nation's 45th president in January.

Clinton pulled off a clean sweep in Quincy, winning each of the city's 31 precincts.

Voters in Quincy also joined their counterparts statewide on Nov. 8 in approving the legalization of recreational marijuana while rejecting an expansion of the number of charter schools allowed in Massachusetts.

Clinton, the Democratic nominee, won Quincy with 25,298 votes (62.3 percent). Trump, the Republican nominee, received 13,297 votes (32.75 percent) in the city. Libertarian Gary Johnson finished with 1,454 votes (3.58 percent) and Green Party nominee Jill Stein with 554 votes (1.36 percent).

Turnout in Quincy was 70.44 percent, with 41,973 of the city's 59,589 registered voters casting ballots; 8,496 voters cast ballots during a two-week window leading up to Election Day, as Massachusetts allowed no-excuse early voting for the first time.

Statewide, Clinton received 60.8 percent of the vote and Trump finished with 33.5 percent. Johnson and Stein garnered 4.2 and 1.5 percent of the vote, respectively. Clinton's win in Massachusetts netted her the state's 11 electoral votes.

Though he trailed in the polls leading up to Election Day, Trump prevailed over Clinton in the Electoral College with 290 votes – more than the requisite 270 – to Clinton's 232, according to Associated Press projections.

Trump claimed victories in key swing states including Florida, North Carolina, Ohio and Iowa. He also won Wisconsin and Pennsylvania – states that had not voted for a Republican in a presidential contest since 1984 and 1988, respectively.

Clinton called Trump to concede the race after 2 a.m. on Nov. 9.

Michigan, with 16 electoral votes, remained too close to call Tuesday, a week after Election Day, according to the AP. Early results have Trump up in Michigan – a state that last went Republican in 1988 – by fewer than 12,000 votes.

Clinton, despite losing the electoral vote, was winning the popular vote with 47.81 percent to Trump's 47.28 percent. Clinton was up by about 668,000 votes nationwide as of Tuesday.

Trump, 70, is a billionaire businessman from New York. He was making his first run for elected office. His vice president will be Mike Pence, the 57-year-old governor of Indiana.

Republicans also maintained control of the U.S. Senate, though Democrats won a pair of seats in New Hampshire and Illinois. The GOP will hold at least 51 Senate seats and the Democrats will have 48, including two independents who caucus with the party. A runoff election will be held next month to decide the winner in Louisiana's Senate race.

Republicans will also maintain control of the U.S House of Representatives.

Voters in Massachusetts were asked to weigh in on four ballot questions on Election Day. The results in Quincy were on par with those in the rest of the Bay State.

Quincy residents rejected Question 1, which would have allowed an additional slots parlor in the state, 21,966 to 16,498 (57.1 percent to 42.9 percent). Statewide, 61 percent of voters voted against the measure.

On Question 2, which would have allowed up to 12 more charter schools each year, Quincy voted 26,421 against to 13,824 for (65.65 percent to 34.35 percent). Across the state, 62 percent of voters voted against the measure.

Residents of Quincy voted 32,025 to 8,190 (79.63 percent to 20.37 percent) in favor of Question 3, which sets new standards for the confinement of certain farm animals. The measure prevailed statewide with 78 percent of the vote.

Voters in Quincy also joined the rest of the Bay State in backing the legalization of recreational marijuana. In Quincy, 21,083 residents voted in favor of the measure to 20,230 against (51 percent to 49 percent). The referendum prevailed by a larger margin statewide, with the yes side garnering 53.6 percent of the vote.

U.S. Rep. Stephen Lynch, a South Boston Democrat, was re-elected Tuesday over Republican challenger William Burke of Quincy. Lynch received 28,861 votes in Quincy to Burke's 10,880 votes, and carried the overall district with 72 percent of the vote.

State Sen. John Keenan prevailed in his bid for re-election over independent candidate Alexander Mendez. Keenan, a Quincy Democrat, received 27,231 votes in Quincy. Mendez, also a Quincy resident, garnered 10,643 votes in his hometown. Keenan won the entire district with 71 percent of the vote.

State Reps. Bruce Ayers, Tackey Chan, Ron Mariano and Dan Hunt were re-elected without opposition. Also re-elected without opposition were Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti and County Commissioners Joseph Shea and Francis O'Brien, as well as Governor's Councillor Christopher Iannella Jr. All are Democrats.

Tuesday's election includes a couple footnotes for Quincy residents. With her husband's win, Melania Trump is set to become the nation's second foreign-born first lady; she was born in the former Yugoslavia, in what is now Slovenia. The first foreign-born first lady was Louisa Catherine Adams, wife of John Quincy Adams, who was born in England.

Trump, like John Quincy Adams, is also set to win the presidency without winning the popular vote. Adams lost the popular vote to Andrew Jackson in the 1824 election, but Jackson did not receive enough electoral votes to win outright in the four-way race. Adams won the White House after being elected by the House of Representatives – the only time the House has settled an election. Jackson defeated Adams four years later in 1828.

Three others have lost the popular vote but won the electoral vote: Rutherford B. Hayes in 1876, Benjamin Harrison in 1888, and George W. Bush in 2000. Only Bush was re-elected to a second term.

School's Rapid Reset Program Proving A Success

By TOM GORMAN

The Quincy Public Schools' rapid reset initiative launched last year has helped improve student achievement.

Curriculum Director Madeline Roy told the school committee on Nov. 9 that this year's MCAS English Language Arts (ELA) and math scores improved at three schools where the program was implemented. The rapid reset initiative was spearheaded by School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro to hasten intervention of struggling students.

"It's an integrated learning model that looks at benchmark data and identifies students in immediate need of support and services," she said. "The program increases time on learning."

The rapid reset program that was implemented last year at Snug Harbor and Bernazzani elementary schools and Sterling Middle School gives teachers and administrators additional time to review and analyze MCAS results and "reset" action steps necessary to address lagging achievement targets.

It focuses on improving reading comprehension as well as creating a model to improve understanding of math complexities. Each school has a design team of staff members that monitors students' progress and identifies areas and those that need help.

At Sterling, Roy said that students showed "remarkable progress" in the MCAS scores, particularly math, where the scores were "blown out of the water."

Snug Harbor's ELA MCAS proficiency scores in the top category of advanced/proficient spiked from 44.5 percent to 57 percent this year, according to the district's special education director Erin Perkins. Math proficiency went from 29 percent to 54 percent.

In math, Snug Harbor's proficiency overall scores went from 29 percent to 54 percent this year.

As a result of the increase in proficiency scores, Snug Harbor School went from a Level 3 to a Level 2 this year, meaning the school is closing in on achievement gaps. Schools and districts are categorized by the state from Level 5, the lowest where achievements gaps are not being closed to the highest of Level 1 where proficiency is being achieved.

Perkins said that achievement scores for high needs students at the Bernazzani School increased from 66 percent a year ago to 83 percent this year. Schoolwide, proficiency scores went up from 52 percent to 64 percent.

"Last year, we surpassed the high needs target," she said.

Perkins noted that no third-grade student at Bernazzani fell into the warning category of this year's ELA MCAS exam. ELA scores in advanced/proficient went up from 44 percent to 64 percent and math increased from 51 percent to 71 percent.

"The goal, as a district, is to improve student achievement," she said. "We are working with the social and emotional aspects of our students."

Perkins also said the rapid reset program is being implemented at Broad Meadows Middle School, Marshall, Beechwood Knoll and Lincoln-Hancock elementary schools.

"We are building capacity for leadership of teachers and providing site-based professional development and collaborative decision making," said Perkins.

In a related matter, Snug Harbor School assistant principal Mike Marani explained that each school has an extended day program where students are offered afterschool enrichment programs in academic areas as well as in such activities as homework support, music, reading, community service, chess, robotics and English Language Learners. He noted that 100 Quincy middle school robotics teams students will be competing in a regional competition in Newton.

Marani said this March, the STEM academy (Science, Technology, Engineering and Math) program will add the fifth grade. Last year, the STEM program was open to grades 2, 3 and 4.

The program focuses on web-based design software where students can design a structure on a computer, print out the plans and build the project.

"It's great hands-on learning," he said.

School committee Vice Chairman Paul Bregoli praised the creativity of the administrators and teachers.

"This is a testament to what goes on in the Quincy Public Schools on a daily basis," he said. "There's no comparison…in creativity in trying to get our scores up."

Also, DeCristofaro told the committee that 104 teachers received mini grants during a Nov. 3 reception at the Neighborhood Club. The Quincy School-Community Partnership and the Quincy Foundation for Excellence in Education awarded $32,000 in mini grant funds. To date, the partnership, comprised of over two dozen businesses, has awarded more than $324,000 to the district's teachers to help fund programs and educational materials.

School committee member Barbara Isola recommended that the future of the North Quincy High School Yakoo mascot be discussed by the policy subcommittee. Last month, a small group of parents told the committee the mascot should be retired, opining it is offensive to Native Americans.

Committee member Kathryn Hubley said that traffic concerns at Snug Harbor School would be referred to the traffic and security subcommittee.

The committee accepted a donation of $12,000 worth of computers from Bluefin Robotics.

New Computers For Students, Teachers

mation flowing through the city every day has soared, and that means the need for capacity to handle that data at fast speeds is going up too."

The city stands to save $15,000 each month by no longer having to lease lines to connect buildings, Venturelli said.

Chris Walker, the director of policy and information for the mayor, said the installation of the fiber optic connections would be coordinated with the Department of Public Works and utility companies.

Municipal Finance Director Mark Cavanagh said the new computers have an expected lifespan of at least five years, and the new fiber optic network at least 20 years. Quincy will issue bonds to purchase both, and they will be paid back over the anticipated lifespan of the items.

The City Council approved the $2 million in borrowing in an 8-0 vote; Councillor Joseph Finn was not present Monday.

Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain, referring to the defeat of a referendum on the Nov. 8 ballot that would have lifted the cap on charter schools in the state, said it was important to continue making investments in public schools.

"I'm happy to support education and the school system," he said. "I think overwhelmingly in the state last week there was a vote of confidence in our public schools, and we want to continue to invest those dollars wisely.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest welcomed the $700,000 that will be spent on the new network.

"I've consistently said the city doesn't spend enough money on the IT Department," Laforest stated, adding it felt at times like decades old technology was being used. "I'm really pleased to see this come forward."

$2M In State Grants OK For Two School Projects

The Massachusetts School Building Authority has approved final audits for two school projects in Quincy totaling $2,013,118 in state grants.

Quincy will receive $808,484 and $1,204,634 from the state to help defray project costs at the Francis W. Parker Elementary School and the Lincol-Hancock Community School.

The project at the Parker School calls for new windows and doors totaling $1,309,639. The Lincoln-Hancock School will receive new windows at a total cost of $2,521,196.

In all, the MSBA Board of Directors approved final audits for eight projects from six school districts totaling over $51.3 million in grants from the MSBA. The final audit stage is the laset step in the MSBA building process and represents the successful completion and closeout of these projects.

New Athletic Facility At NQHS Dedication Saturday

Field, Concession Building, Flagpoles, Light Towers Dedicated To NQ Alumni, Veterans, Leaders

The new athletic complex formerly known as Teel Field will be dedicated on Saturday to honor a number of individuals and families who have contributed to the North Quincy community.

The ceremony will begin at noon at the field and the public is invited to attend. Parking will be available at the new lot on Hunt Street.

The new playing field, which is framed by Hunt Street, Newbury Avenue and Kendall Street, is being named for the Creedon family.

Peter Creedon, who raised his family at 52 Kendall St., was a veteran of the United States Navy serving in World War I and World War II. He was a Deputy Chief on the Quincy Fire Department and he and his wife Mabel raised seven children: John, Peter (Joe), Frances, Lawrence, Paul, Eugene and Bernard. Mabel served as the cook and manager of the North Quincy High School cafeteria for 20 years.

Their sons Lawrence and Eugene both served as Superintendent of Quincy Public Schools; Larry from 1969 to 1984 and Gene from 1992-2001. John, Joe, Larry and Bernard all graduated from North and served the country in various branches of the armed forces.

The concession building is being named for the Yacubian Brothers, Arthur and Allan. Arthur Yacubian graduated from North in 1949 and enlisted in the United States Air Force serving during the Korean War. Dr. Allan Yacubian, a longtime dentist in Wollaston, graduated from North in 1958 and became the model for the school's beloved mascot, "Yakoo." Dr. Yacubian has quietly given back to NQHS for decades in support of athletics, clubs and other school activities.

Three flags will be flown at the facility honoring our country, state and city. The American Flag will be dedicated in memory of PFC Francis A. Mullen, who was killed in action in 1945 while serving with the Seventh Army Infantry near Althorn, France. Mullen grew up on Holmes Street and graduated from North in 1942. He received a Purple Heart after being wounded at Anzio Beach, Italy in 1944 and was awarded the Bronze Star posthumously.

The flag of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts will be dedicated in honor of attorney Thomas R. Kiley, a graduate of the class of 1964. While at North, Kiley was a three-sport standout, member of the National Honor Society and was a National Merit Scholar. He went on to graduate from Harvard University with honors in 1968 and, following graduation, enlisted in the United States Army serving in Vietnam during the Vietnam War.

The flag of the City of Quincy will be dedicated in memory of former Ward 6 Councillor Brian F. McNamee. McNamee represented the residents of Squantum, Marina Bay and North Quincy from 2005 until his death in 2015. He was a vociferous advocate for his constituents and championed the approval of the North Quincy High School campus enhancement project with his colleagues on the Quincy City Council.

The four light towers at the field will be dedicated to Paul Bregoli, Eileen Feeney, Mary Pratt, and the late Pete Zoia.

Bregoli graduated from North Quincy High School in 1966 and is currently the vice chairman of the Quincy School Committee. He was an educator in Quincy for 34 years. He has coached in both the girls and boys programs at North for 75 seasons.

Eileen (Dearing) Feeney grew up on Kendall Street just behind the field and graduated from North in 1951. A graduate of Cornell University, Mrs. Feeney spent the bulk of her career as an educator at North as a mathematics teacher, Dean of Students and Assistant Principal from 1979-1998 and Principal from 1998-2000.

Mary Pratt graduated from North in 1936 and taught physical education for 42 years in Quincy. Forever committed to the advancement of organized athletic programs for young women, Pratt herself pitched five seasons in the All-American Girls Professional Baseball League which was made famous by the 1992 motion picture, "A League of Their Own."

Pete Zoia was also a graduate of the NQHS class of 1936. Known among the football community as "Mr. North Quincy," Zoia was the only player to compete in the first three North Quincy vs. Quincy High football games. He inspired countless young men while being part of the North Quincy coaching staff and his jersey, No. 20 was retired in 1987, one of only three numbers retired in the history of NQHS football.

Following the formal program a reception will be held at the field which will be catered by staff and students from the Quincy Public Schools Culinary Arts program.

City To Weigh Recreational Marijuana Regulations

By SCOTT JACKSON

City officials will look at potential regulations for recreational marijuana after Bay State voters approved its legalization on Election Day.

Massachusetts voters approved Question 4 on the Nov. 8 ballot by seven percentage points – 53.6 percent in favor to 46.4 percent against. The results in Quincy were closer, with 51 percent voting yes and 49 percent opposed.

With Question 4 passing, recreational marijuana will become legal on Dec. 15 for residents age 21 and older. Adults age 21 and over will also be allowed to grow their own marijuana starting on that date; the law allows each person over 21 to grow six plants, up to 12 per household.

The referendum will also allow stores to sell marijuana as soon as Jan. 1, 2018, and requires the state to establish a Cannabis Control Commission. The law imposes a tax rate of 10 percent on marijuana sales – the state's 6.25 percent sales tax plus a 3.75 percent excise tax – and allows communities to impose an additional 2 percent tax.

Two days after voters approved Question 4, Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci introduced a resolution during a special City Council session Nov. 10 calling on city officials to look at possible regulations that could be imposed in Quincy. The resolution was unanimously approved.

Palmucci said he was concerned by a lack of regulations in Question 4, saying it would be like the "wild, wild west" and the onus was on the government to craft rules.

"I fully respect the will of the voters of the commonwealth that want marijuana to be legal," Palmucci said. "That's fine, but the ballot initiative does not set up the kind of criteria that I think residents of the city expect there to be, so therefore the City Council has to step in and do it before the state Legislature does.

"I know they're considering some things, but we shouldn't wait for them to act."

Palmucci expressed concern about where a recreational dispensary might open up, saying they would be inappropriate for places like Brewers Corner in his district, which is between Sterling and Lincoln-Hancock schools. Other things he would like to look at include hours of operation and who would be allowed to own a dispensary.

Councillor Noel DiBona raised concern over the potential sale of edibles – marijuana-infused food and drinks – and children getting a hold of them.

"Voters in general opened up a nice can of worms here, so we go to plan B," he said. "What are we going to do to make it safe out there on this type of substance getting inside of gummy bears, brownies and all these other food sources that children might not know that it's in there?"

Chris Walker, the director of policy and information for Mayor Thomas Koch, said Quincy officials have begun looking at potential regulations the city could impose.

"We are 100 percent on the same page as the council," Walker said at the meeting. "We believe we need to get out in front of this as soon as humanly possible and present this body with some options going forward."

AG Announces Opioid Prevention Grant During Quincy Visit

By SCOTT JACKSON

Attorney General Maura Healey announced a new statewide grant program meant to help boost opioid prevention efforts for students during a recent visit to Quincy.

Healey announced up to $500,000 in grants would be made available to schools and community groups on Nov. 10 at the James R. McIntyre Government Center. The funding comes from CVS, which in September agreed to strengthen its policies and procedures around the dispensing of opioids and require pharmacy staff to check the state's prescription monitoring program.

Healey said more than 1,700 died in Massachusetts from opioid overdoses last year, and that number is expected to surpass 2,000 this year. The attorney general said effective substance abuse programs can reduce the risk for addiction among young people.

"We need to do a lot more when it comes to education and prevention, specifically education and prevention for young people in schools," she said.

"I've just heard way too many stories from way too many people whose lives have been ruined," Healey added later, "parents who've quit work or taken time off work to care for a loved one, family members who sit worried everyday for that phone call to come wondering what's actually going to happen to their loved one, the young people who were prescribed opioids for sports injuries or for wisdom teeth removal that in no short amount of time found themselves down the road to serious addiction.

"This is problem where I think we have a moral imperative to act as a state and we certainly have a moral imperative to do as much as we can for our young people."

Healey praised Mayor Thomas Koch for assembling the city's Substance Abuse Task Force after taking office in 2008 and giving Quincy police officers the overdose-reversing drug Narcan, as well as Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey, who offered Narcan training to first responders in the county and financed the purchase of drug take back containers.

The mayor said Quincy would apply for the grant to provide prevention programming in both of the city's high schools.

"The more tools, the more resources and the more folks we can bring together on this, the more successful we will be," he said. "Every child and young person we keep away from it – though we can't measure it – we are succeeding."

Morrissey said three people die from opioid overdoses every week in Norfolk County, three times the number killed in car crashes.

"A lot of children think it's safe to take a pill because some doctor prescribed it. We have to get the message out to high school kids – and it may be down into the middle schools and lower grades – about the danger of medications and taking medications that are not prescribed for you," Morrissey said.

"We're not going to arrest our way out of this."

Joanne Peterson, founder and executive director of Learn to Cope, said it would be important for schools and organizations applying for the grant to develop opioid education programs beyond "don't do drugs" or the egg in a frying pan.

"As much information that can be given to these children in a safe manner, in a scientific manner with experts to help the coalitions and the organizations that will be using this information, I think it will make a huge difference and maybe turn the tide on this epidemic," Peterson said.

Healey invited leadership of the Students Against Destructive Decisions chapter at North Quincy High School to her announcement. North's SADD chapter, she noted, was named the second place winner in the national organization's chapter of the year competition earlier this year.

Abigail Koch, the president of the school's SADD chapter, said the group's membership has grown over the past nine years from a handful of students to more than 200 today.

"Every year we offer prevention programs that provide examples of the dangers of using drugs and alcohol at such an early age. We partner with state and local agencies, and also with local residents, all of whom share their stories and expertise with the knowledge to make better choices when out with our friends," she said.

"As a senior in high school and a four-year member of SADD, I can say that the programs and education I have received as a part of this group and as a student at a school that supports such programming has given me the knowledge to make smart decisions when out with my friends."

School Officials Prepare For Next Generation MCAS Exam

By TOM GORMAN

School administrators are beginning to prepare for what state education officials are calling the next generation MCAS exam – MCAS 2.0 - that will be rolled out next spring.

The new assessment test is computer-based only, compared to the current exam where students answer questions using pencil and paper. The state is phasing in the exam over the next two years allowing some grades to use pencil and paper, giving districts time to have students and staff prepared before it is fully implemented in 2019.

"It's a significant change," Quincy Public Schools Curriculum Director Madeline Roy told the school committee Nov. 9. "The teachers are transitioning and preparing students."

Roy explained that, as part of the phase-in process, only grades four and eight in Quincy will be taking the exam online in the spring while the other grades will use pencil and paper. She said that at the end of this month, teachers will begin classroom instruction geared toward the new test.

She noted that students will have to learn the nuances of the computer keyboard in order to take the exam.

"Keyboarding is the biggest concern," Roy said.

Erin Perkins, the district's Special Education director, explained the test will require students to highlight, drag and drop elements and use an online calculator. Additionally, students will have to select answers by using a mouse and must be able to access video and audio clips and write narratives.

"These are definite things kids will need to practice before they take the test," she said.

Perkins noted that schools' libraries and media centers will be offering support for students including afterschool programs.

A survey was sent to teachers seeking feedback on what support they will need from the district and what additional skills students will need for the test. Roy said teacher training and student support will be in place.

"We will make sure we provide all the resources needed," she said.

Roy also said that the district is working with principals and the information technology department in preparing for the new exam.

The assessment exam annually measures student achievement in core academic areas such as math, science and English Language Arts. Students receive individual scores and each school and district is ranked based on overall scores.

State education officials developed the MCAS 2.0 as a hybrid of the original MCAS (Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System) and the new PARCC (Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers). The PARCC is based on the national Common Core standards the state adopted a few years ago.

The PARCC exam is computer-based and is designed to better measure critical thinking. The state MCAS exam has been administered each spring for the past 20 years.

"The new test, informally called 'Next-Generation MCAS,' will build upon the best aspects of the MCAS assessments that have served the Commonwealth well for the past two decades," states the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE). "The test will include innovative items developed by PARCC, along with new items specifically created to assess the Massachusetts learning standards."

According to the DESE, the original MCAS "was not designed to measure readiness for success in college or a career after high school."

The DESE states that the more than a third of the state's public school graduates who attend the Commonwealth's colleges and universities are placed in remedial courses.

"The remedial rate is closer to 70 percent for two-year colleges," states the DESE. "These courses often consume a student's financial aid, are not credit-bearing, and do not count toward graduation. Too often, these students do not graduate college on time or at all."

Since the state has adopted the Common Core standards, education officials say a new assessment exam is needed to properly measure student achievement under the new standards.

"Now that we have upgraded our learning expectations over the years through revisions to our curriculum frameworks and content standards, it is time to upgrade our assessments for the next generation of students," says the DESE.

The state will have complete control of the new exam including content and reporting or results.

According to Roy, the new MCAS 2.0 is still under development and some samples should be available in January.

'Girls Rising' Shows The Power Of Education

By TOM GORMAN

A documentary is helping Quincy students understand inequalities girls face in other parts of the world and how education can overcome barriers.

"Girls Rising" is a 2013 film about nine girls living in Third World countries who, through education, were able to overcome cultural barriers and achieve their dreams. The film has a curriculum component where local students create projects and helps them learn how education gives empowerment, explained Sterling Middle School English teacher Elise Higgins Steele during the Nov. 9 school committee meeting.

"The documentary gives faces to the 62 million girls who are not in school in the world," she said. "It gives us a global perspective about how girls live around the world. (The film) is not only about girls, it's about families."

The film documents barriers to education girls face in some parts of the world that boys don't. In some developing countries, impoverished young girls who are forced into arranged marriages and child slavery aren't given the opportunities to go to school.

As part of the "Girls Rising" curriculum unit, Higgins Steele said that the students wrote essays, analyzed statistics from the film and created artwork. The students also made their own mini-documentary based on their studies.

"They used poetry, art and research to create projects," Higgins Steele said. "They painted a mural in Arabic."

One of the film's producers, Kayce Freed Jennings, wife of the late ABC news anchor Peter Jennings, visited Sterling and explained how the filmmakers went to remote areas of the world

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Saturday, Nov. 5, at approximately 9:58 p.m., Officers James Goldrick, Steve Kelly, Bruce Tait and Robert Kelly were dispatched to the area of 1546 Hancock St. in downtown Quincy Center for a report of a man swinging a hammer at pedestrians.

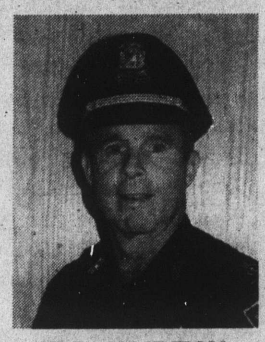
Upon arrival, Officer Goldrick briefly interviewed the caller, who was the manager of a local business to determine the location of the suspect. He said that the male suspect fled south on Hancock Street. The other officers began checking the area for the suspect.

Officer Goldrick, on a police bicycle, approached the area of Kelly's Cellar and his attention was drawn to the doorman who was pointing at a red Dodge Ram pickup that was backing out of a parking spot behind the Fuji restaurant. The doorman confirmed that the operator was the suspect who was swinging a hammer.

As Officer Goldrick approached the pickup truck, it backed out quickly and then fled at a high rate of speed towards the pay booth exit of the lot. Due to traffic, the pickup had to slow down. Officer Goldrick radioed the other units that the suspect vehicle was attempting to elude him and gave out the description.

At this time, Officer Robert Kelly stopped the vehicle as Officer Goldrick pulled up. The operator/suspect opened his door, stepped out of the truck, and then reached into the cab of the truck. Due to the violent nature of the call, the operator/suspect was ordered to show his hands and told to get on the ground. He obeyed the directions of the officers and was handcuffed and pat/frisked.

While placing handcuffs on the suspect, he stated angrily, "You'll be sorry. You got the wrong guy." Once the suspect was secure in the backseat of a cruiser, Officer Goldrick returned to Kelly's Cellar and spoke to the doorman to get a more in depth account of what he witnessed. He said he saw the suspect enter Kelly's Cellar and his attention was drawn to the suspect's waist area. Fearing that the suspect had a weapon under his jacket, the doorman ordered the suspect out of the bar. The suspect walked away from the bar but returned a short time later.



LT. DAN MINTON

As the suspect attempted to re-enter, he flipped over tables and chairs on the patio of Kelly's Cellar. He then removed a hammer from his waistband and tried to reenter the bar. The suspect then raised the hammer in a threatening manner and made a move towards the doorman like he was going to swing at him. The doorman grabbed the suspect and took the hammer from him. The suspect fled to his truck. The doorman gave Officer Goldrick the hammer as evidence.

Officer Steven Kelly spoke with the original caller who said the suspect was with a group of males earlier in a local bar for about five hours and then left without incident. The suspect then returned by himself to the rear entrance of the bar/restaurant and grabbed bottles of soy sauce.

The manager/caller followed the suspect out the front door of the restaurant and watched him brandish a hammer. He watched as the suspect began yelling and swinging the hammer at people walking down the street. The suspect followed a male and female walking on Hancock Street before walking towards the red Dodge pickup truck in the parking lot.

Sergeant Joseph Lencki arrived on scene and had the doorman brought to the scene where the suspect was being held. The doorman stated that he was "100 percent sure" the man being held was the same man who came at him with a hammer. The suspect's truck was towed, the hammer was placed into evidence and during booking, and a small amount of marijuana and a pipe were found.

The suspect, a 48-year-old Weymouth resident, was charged with assault with dangerous weapon (hammer) and disorderly conduct.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Nov. 29, 1775, the Second Continental Congress, meeting in Philadelphia, establishes a Committee of Secret Correspondence. Its goal is to provide European nations with a Patriot interpretation of events in Britain's North American colonies, in the hope of soliciting aid for the American war effort.

• On Dec. 1, 1824, Congress acts to decide a presidential election for the first time in history, giving the presidency to John Quincy Adams, even though Andrew Jackson had received the most electoral votes among the four candidates. The Constitution's 12th Amendment puts an election in the hands of Congress if no candidate receives a majority of Electoral College votes.

• On Nov. 28, 1895, Frank Duryea wins the first motorcar race in the United States, piloting a gas-powered "horseless carriage." Vehicles had to be able to carry at least two people: the driver and a race-appointed umpire, who would guard against cheating.

• On Nov. 30, 1954, the first modern instance of a meteorite striking a human being occurs in Sylacauga, Alabama, when an 8 1/2 pound meteorite crashes through the roof of a house, bounces off a radio, and strikes Mrs. Elizabeth Hodges.

• On Dec. 3, 1947, Marlon Brando's famous cry of "STELLA!" first booms across a Broadway stage, electrifying the audience at the first-ever performance of Tennessee Williams' play "A Streetcar Named Desire."

• On Dec. 2, 1975, Ohio State senior running back Archie Griffin becomes the first player in history to win the Heisman Trophy two years in a row. Griffin set an NCAA record with 5,177 career rushing yards.

• On Dec. 4, 1991, Islamic militants in Lebanon release kidnapped American journalist Terry Anderson after 2,454 days in captivity. He was kidnapped on a west Beirut street and held prisoner in an underground dungeon for the next six-and-a-half years.

Registry Of Deeds Holiday Food Drive

Noting that 1 out of every 9 households in Massachusetts is considered food insecure according to Project Bread, Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell announces the Registry's Annual Food Drive will take place Monday, Nov. 21 through Friday, Dec. 30.

"Here in Norfolk County," noted Register O'Donnell, "Some of our less fortunate neighbors continue to face economic hardship. We see this each month in the number of foreclosures. Yes, Norfolk County is a destination community to work and live in, but some of our neighbors are truly hurting. It could be from a lay-off, a medical catastrophe or just a case of bad luck."

Non-perishable food items can be brought directly to the Registry of Deeds, 649 High St.; Dedham from Monday, Nov. 21 through Friday, Dec. 30.

A donation bin will be set-up in the Registry building lobby which is open to the public Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Suggested donations include canned goods, breakfast cereals, pasta, sauces, toiletries and paper products.

O'Donnell concluded, "If you can't get here to drop off food, you can check the Registry's website at www.norfolkdeeds.org for a location in your community. Working together, we can truly make a huge difference this holiday season. After all, it is the season of giving."

'Girls Rising' Shows The Power Of Education

where poverty is prevalent. A girl from Afghanistan accompanied Freed Jennings who related how she dressed as a boy in order to go to school.

Higgins Steele said some of her male students questioned the focus on girls. After seeing the documentary, she said one boy related how the girls featured in the film helped him appreciate the educational opportunities he has.

School committee members were impressed with the curriculum unit and how the film shed a light on educational inequalities.

"I was blown away by this project," said Barbara Isola. "It is so important that we look outside of our community and how so many of our students take education for granted. We will get benefits from this that won't be measured in tests. Students will take this with them...it won't be lost on them."

Anne Mahoney agreed, and noted how Quincy is a melting pot.

"We have so many different backgrounds in Quincy to learn from," she said.

Vice Chairman Paul Bregoli related that when he was starting his career in education, a psychologist told him that when "you educate a man, you educate one man. But, when you educate a woman, you educate an entire family. Women are the hub of the family."

"It's incredibly important to get a good education," Bregoli said, adding that he hopes other schools in the city will show the documentary and participate in its curriculum component.

In another matter, School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro informed the committee that 631 bubblers and sinks have been tested to date for high lead and copper levels in the district's public schools. Several bubblers and sinks in several schools have tested for high lead and or copper levels.

He said the affected bubblers have been disabled by the maintenance department and sinks that tested positive for high levels have been labeled for hand washing only. Since lead does not penetrate the skin and is only harmful if ingested, affected sinks can be used for hand washing purposes.

The superintendent said testing continues and results are being updated on the district's website.

Special Recognition For Quincy's Vietnam War Veterans

By GEORGE NICHOLSON
Director
Quincy Veterans Services

In 1982, when I was asked to be the guest speaker for Quincy's Veterans Day ceremony, I was the first Vietnam veteran in the city to be so honored.

The Vietnam War had been so full of bad memories, for soldiers and citizens alike, throughout its duration, that the nation just seemed to want to forget the whole experience. The message of my speech that day was that the Vietnam War must never be forgotten and neither must the generation of soldiers who, during that time, served their country so honorably and so well.

QUINCY VIETNAM VETERANS march down Hancock Street in the city's Veterans Day Parade Nov. 11. Local Vietnam War-era veterans were also recognized at the Veterans Day observance following the parade at the World War I statue at the Adams Academy. More than 140 Vietnam veterans from Quincy were presented "challenge coins" and citations recognizing their service and sacrifice during the Vietnam War. The list of those veterans honored is below.

The National Commemoration of the 50th Anniversary of the Vietnam War is a nation-wide, long-overdue validation of that service. It is a national recognition that this chapter in American history must never be forgotten or diminished.

According the Presidential Proclamation:

"The Commemoration of the 50th Anniversary of the Vietnam War is a 13 year program to honor and give thanks to a generation of proud Americans who saw our Country through one of the most challenging missions we have ever faced..."

It occurred to me that our Vietnam Memorial on the Clock Tower in Marina Bay is widely recognized as one of the most significant monuments in tribute to Vietnam Veterans of any city in the nation. I am proud to say that this is just a classic example of the highest level of esteem that the City of Quincy holds for its veterans.

With that in mind, it didn't take much thought for me and the rest of my Quincy Veterans Services staff to know that we wanted our contribution to this commemoration to be significant, memorable and in keeping with Quincy tradition. As a Vietnam veteran, the recognition ceremony we conducted on Veterans Day was heartfelt and one of the most meaningful things that I have been able to do in my four decades of advocating for my brother and sister veterans and their families.

It might have been a small gesture in the scheme of things, but its impact and memory will remain with me for the rest of my life.

A special thanks goes to my office staff for a labor of love very well done. My thanks to Mayor Koch and all the involved city resources for their support in this event. And my very special thanks to all of the Vietnam veterans and their families who came forward and allowed themselves to be recognized.

On behalf of the City of Quincy, "Welcome Home."

Isaiah Steinberg (3 TDs) Leads Houghs Neck To 66th Founders Cup

By SEAN HALPIN

The Houghs Neck Manets (7-1) and North Quincy Apaches (7-2) battled this past Sunday in the 66th Annual Quincy Youth Football League Championship game. The Manets got out to an early lead when QB Campbell Tierney passed to TE Peter Ugwu on 17-yard TD pass. Tierney Kicked the two point conversion to take an 8-0 lead on the opening drive.

On the ensuing series, Manet LB Isaiah Steinberg intercepted an Apache pass giving their team the ball on their own 4 yard line. The Manets capitalized with and 81-yard TD run by Steinberg. Tierney kicked the two point conversion to extend the Manets lead to 16-0.

The Apaches answered, on the next series, with a 61-yard TD on a halfback pass from RB Tyler Le to WR James Ward. Danny Scolaro kicked the 2-point conversion to make it 16-8.

Apaches Alex Demerit recovered an onside kick on the ensuing kickoff. The Apaches capitalized with a 31-yard TD pass from Scolaro to James Ward. The conversion kick was blocked and the Apaches entered the locker room at halftime trailing the Manets 16-14.

Manets special teamer Ryan LaRoache recovered the onside kick to open the second half. The Manets capitalized with a 19-yard TD pass from Tierney to TE Peter Ugwu. The conversion sion kick was blocked but, the Manets extended their lead 22-14. On the next series Manet LB Steinberg recovered an Apache fumble and returned it 55 yards for a touchdown. Tierney kicked the conversion to take a 30-14 lead in the game.

The Manets got the ball back midway through the 4th quarter. Steinberg added his third TD of the day on a 31-yard run to make it 36-14. The Apaches answered with a 40-yard TD pass from Scolaro to James Ward to make it 36-20.

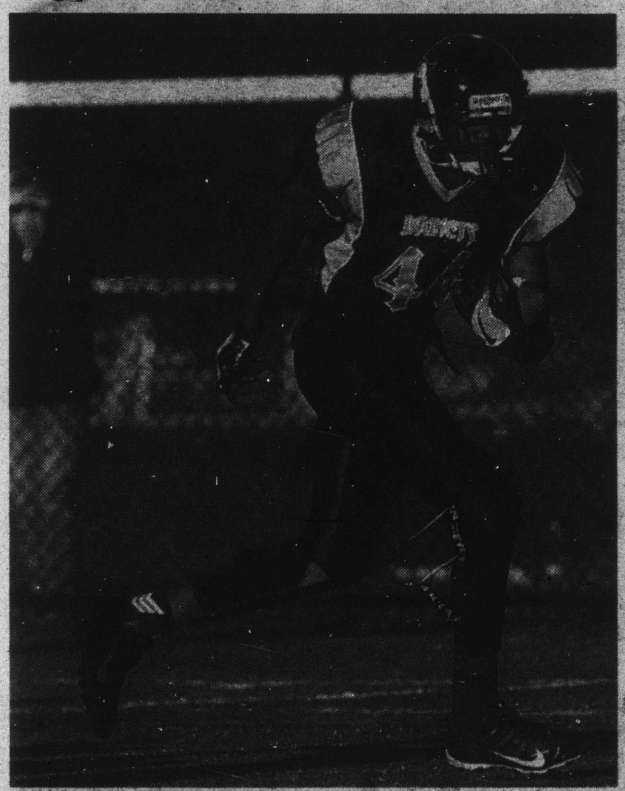
Time expired on the Title Game as the Houghs Neck Manets (8-1) defeated the North Quincy Apaches (7-3) in the 66th Annual QYFL Championship Game.

Each team turned in some fine performances. Apaches Head Coach Ryan Craig praised the efforts of Danny Scolaro, Tyler Le, James Ward, Jamal Maximillien, Declan Geary, Brian Gutro, Colm Geary, John Bell, Clayton Corley, Harry Gaudiano, Alex Demerit, Connor Plante and Luke Bertrand.

Manets Head Coach Mike Flavin got strong two-way efforts, all season, from League MVP Isaiah Steinberg, Campbell Tierney, Zach Luggelle, Peter Ugwu, Kevin Gomez, Aidan O'Donoughue, Max Van Tassell, Jake Mutch, Devin Desmond, Brendan Healy and Ryan McCarthy.

Manets and Apaches players will join forces next week on Team Desmond in the 4th annual QYFL All-Star Game next Saturday (Nov. 19) at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Kickoff is at 3:30 p.m. immediately following the annual Quincy-North Quincy Alumni Football Game.

HOUGHS NECK MANETS Isaiah Steinberg crosses the goalline for his third touchdown of the day in the Manets' 36-20 win over the North Quincy Apaches to win the Quincy Youth Football League's varsity championship Sunday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Steinberg, the League's MVP, also caught an interception and recovered a fumble.



TIGHT END PETER UGWU scores the Manets' first touchdown on a 17-yard pass from QB Campbell Tierney.

Alysia DiMuzio Inducted Into Curry College Athletic Hall Of Fame

Quincy resident Alysia DiMuzio was recently inducted into the Curry College Athletic Hall of Fame.

Curry College Athletic Director Vinnie Eruzione welcomed DiMuzio and five other alumni into the 2016 Hall of Fame Class Oct. 21. DiMuzio who graduated from Curry in 2009, dominated the softball field while attending the college and joins the ranks of 99 total members inducted into the Hall of Fame.

DiMuzio was the 2009 Female Athlete of the Year, named the Rookie of the Year in 2006, and was also a four-time member of a CCC All-Conference team. As a senior, she was named to the ESPN Academic All-America Second Team. Alysia was honored a combined four times by the ECAC and NEISCA as an All-Star. Named the Offensive Player of the Year in 2008 and 2009, she played in 175 career games while tallying 200 hits, 106 runs, 172 RBIs, and a career batting average of .372.

The Curry College Athletic Hall of Fame was established to recognize the College's greatest athletes and those who have given extraordinary support to Curry's athletic program, bringing honor and distinction to Curry. Hall of Fame members include individuals who have demonstrated exceptional athletic ability, personal integrity, high standards of sportsmanship and good character; have participated in varsity intercollegiate athletics at Curry for at least two years; or those who have made a significant contribution to the Curry athletic program.

Emily Bryson Named To All-UAA Women's Cross Country First Team

Brandeis University sophomore Emily Bryson of Quincy has been named to the University Athletic Association (UAA) All-Association first team for the 2016 season.

At the University Athletic Association Championship, hosted at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., Bryson earned her second-straight first-team All-Association honor by placing third overall. Bryson's 6K time of 21:55.81 was eight seconds faster than her time at UAAs a year ago in Boston, but Washington U. junior Aly Wayne ran away with the race in 21:25.29, while Chicago junior Khia Kurtenbach, who Bryson edged down the stretch in 2015, was eight seconds ahead of Bryson to finish second in 21:47.29.

Bryson was the winner of the 2015 UAA Championship in her rookie season for the judges.

The Brandeis women's cross country team finished fourth out of eight teams, matching their performance at last year's UAA Championship. The Judges scored 96 points to claim fourth place, behind only a trio of nationally-ranked squads. #4 Washington University defended their UAA title with 33 points, while #13 Chicago was second with 75. #19 Emory edged the Judges by six with 90 points, while Rochester wasn't far behind Brandeis in fifth with 106.

The Judges reentered the United States Track and Field and Cross Country Coaches Association (USTFCCCA) national poll at #31 for their third appearance this season.

Bryson is a 2015 graduate of North Qunicy High School.

The women's tennis team from Natick, representing the USTA New England Section, finished second at the USTA League Adult 40 & Over 4.5+ National Championships held recently at the La Quinta Resort & Club in La Quinta, Calif.

Among the team members is Aileen Eleey of Quincy.

The Natick team lost to a team from Raleigh, N.C., 3-2 in the Championship match. Earlier in the day, the Natick team defeated a team from Orlando, Fla., 3-2 in the semifinals. They advanced this far by winning their round-robin flight contested Friday and Saturday.

Established in 1980, USTA League has grown from 13,000 participants in a few parts of the country in its first year, to over 904,000 players across the nation today, making it the world's largest recreational tennis league.

USTA League was established to provide adult recreational tennis players throughout the country with the opportunity to compete against players of similar ability levels. Players participate on teams in a league format, which is administered by the USTA through its 17 Sections. The league groups players by using six National Tennis Rating Program (NTRP) levels, ranging from 2.5 (entry) to 5.0 (advanced). USTA League is open to any USTA member 18 years of age or older.

The 2016 USTA League season will be the fourth season with the updated structure and format which offers four age categories (Adult 18 & Over, Adult 40 & Over and Adult 55 & Over and Mixed 18 & Over) to better align participants with players their own age.

Quincy Volleyball Reach Sectional Finals

By TOM JOYCE

The Quincy high girls' volleyball team wanted to make as deep of a playoff run as they could. And in that, they were successful.

The No. 3 seed in the Division 1 Central/East playoff bracket, the Presidents won their first two playoff games which was enough to give them a spot in the sectional finals at a neutral site, Wellesley High School.

Last Saturday morning, their playoff run came to an end as they met up with the top-seeded and undefeated Newton North Tigers (21-0). The Presidents fell, 3-0 (19-25, 9-25, 14-25), subsequently ending their season. The Presidents finish the year with a 19-4 record.

"I'm just so proud of the way they played," Presidents head coach Jacqui Niosi said. "I think we really committed to playing as a team playing good defense and having a lot of fun."

"I don't think we backed down," she added. "Athletically, I think we were a little outmatched. But we did everything we could to try and stay in the game."

It might be worth noting the Tigers are a vertically gifted team. Eight of the 13 girls listed on their roster are 5-foot-10 or taller which gave them an advantage when it came to blocking.

The Presidents started their first set strong, taking a 3-1 lead. But they lost momentum after that, scoring just one point as the Tigers scored their next 12. And while the Presidents would respond well, scoring four unanswered and outscoring their foes for the rest of the set, it would not be enough as they fell, 19-25.

In the second set, the Presidents also fell behind early. They were down 0-8 before they would score. Down 2-17 late, they played close to an even set the rest of the way out as they fell, 9-25.

The Tigers also garnered an early edge in the final set, scoring the first four points and 11 of the first 14. Down 3-11, the Presidents kept fighting and they finished the set down 14-25.

"We just wanted to step on the court, play our game and hopefully surprise some people," Niosi said. "Being here today, I think we definitely did. We always say when we walk into a gym, 'people must not think much of us because we're so small,' but once we start playing we start playing with a lot of heart and determination."

In the same round last year, the Presidents also fell to Newton North, 3-0.

This year, Quincy knocked off Number 2 seed King Philip on the road in the sectional quarterfinals Nov. 10 to advance to the finals. The Presidents went five games to down the Warriors (25-23, 25-16, 15-25, 26-28, and 15-13.)

Overall, Niosi said she was pleased with her team's effort and she was happy to see her team try their hardest until it was over.

"As long as you know you tried your best, when you're walking off that court, you've got to keep your head up," she said.

"I'm really proud of the girls," she added. "I'm really happy that they had a season that went as well as it did because they definitely deserved it."

The match marked the final game for the Presidents senior class consisting of Danielle Perry (setter), Molly Murphy (right side hitter), Emilia Kapcia (outside hitter), Eryn McCarthy (outside hitter), Hillary Valenzuela (outside hitter), Jessie Lei (outside hitter), Jackie Ryan (defense), Kaylen Kozlowski (defense) and Casey Kelliher (middle hitter). In other words, nine of their 18 varsity players this year were seniors.

"They're just such a nice group of seniors," Niosi said. "They're very selfless. They put the team first and just played as a unit. When we play as a unit and communicate well, that's when we play best."

"I think we have a lot of kids -- especially seniors -- who lead by example," she added. "Part of that is how they conduct themselves on and off the court. They're great role models for our underclassmen."

Junior outside hitter Shannon Foley led the team with 16 digs and added three kills. Lei was second on the team with 13 digs and she had a team-leading six kills. Valenzuela, who had a pair of aces serving, also had six digs. Sophomore outside hitter Camryn Burgio had four kills and Parry added three kills.

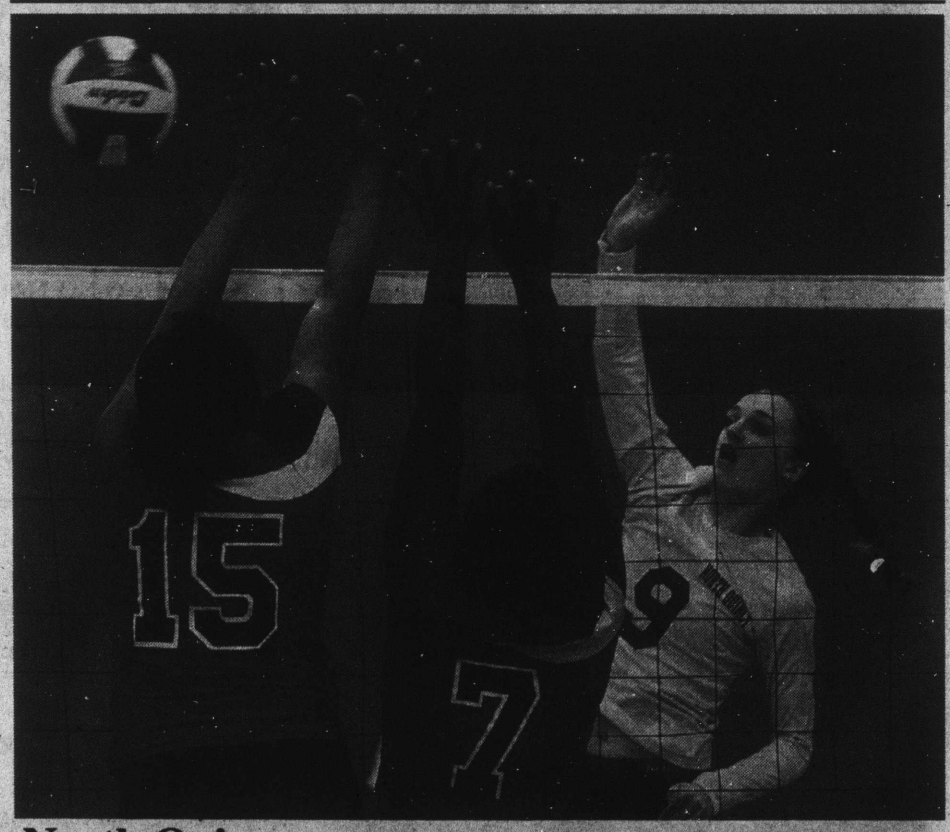
While the Presidents will lose many contributors to graduation, Niosi said she is happy with what the team does have coming back.

"I'm definitely excited for next year," she said. "It's kind of weird to think about it already but we have a great group of underclassmen who work hard and are excited to play."

For Niosi, the 2017 girls season is especially far away to think about because she is also the boys head coach and their season is in the spring.

In addition to Foley and Burgio, junior middle hitter Rosheline Molina is another one of the team's top contributors who will be returning next season.

In order to prepare for next season, Niosi said many of her players will play club volleyball in the offseason.



North Quincy Bows In Semifinals

NORTH QUINCY GIRLS volleyball bowed in the Div. 1 Central/East Sectional quarterfinals falling to Number 1 seed Newton North, 3-0, Nov. 10. League All-Star Isabelle Flaherty (above photo) concluded her terrific high school career with nine digs and two kills to lead the Number 4-seeded Red Raiders. Sharon Yang (photo right) had six digs and Julia Klincewicz contributed three kills for North Quincy.

Presidents Focus On North, Thanksgiving

By JOE REARDON

It may show 10 losses on the schedule but it's that time of the year when the regular season record gets thrown out the window and it's a clean slate for one game.

The Quincy High football team will be approaching the long-running Thanksgiving Day showdown against North Quincy with a Super Bowl, winner-take-all battle mindset for city bragging rights. A victory would certainly send Bill Reardon's squad into the offseason on a huge positive note. Either way, the future is shaping up nicely for the Presidents and their sophomore-heavy roster.

"Thanksgiving's the next game," said Reardon. "We're going to rest up over the weekend and get back at it next week with a game plan. We played hard. We always play hard, but tonight it seemed to be at another level. That (a win over North Quincy) would certainly make ten losses easier to swallow."

One can only hope that Friday night's frustrating 30-7 loss to 4-6 Durfee at Veterans Stadium is a distant memory for the Presidents as they prepare to take on Mark Nutley's Red Raiders.

Quincy was very much in the fight against the Hilltoppers, trailing just 14-7 going into the fourth quarter before Durfee began piling up the points on the road.

Dominic Laptiste had his second 100-yard-plus rushing performance in a row to lead Quincy's offense. The speedy junior back only got better as the game wore on, rushing for 134 yards and a score on 32 carries. Laptiste did his best running on the Presidents' scoring drive where he broke a 44-yard run and had 69 yards on six carries, the last being a three-yard score with 5:18 to play in the third quarter. Mikhayla Foley drilled the point-after kick to cut Durfee's lead to 14-7.

It was that stretch where the Presidents showed just how well they could move the ball when playing mostly error-free football.

"There was a spot there, halfway through the third quarter into the fourth, where we played our best football offensively of the season," said Reardon. "We were physical. We were making plays and Dominic Laptiste was running great leads and showing a lot of patience when we needed to set up the blocks. I was really encouraged by that stretch of football we played."

The Presidents could feel the momentum swing as defensive lineman Josh Coughlin pounced on a Durfee fumble to give Quincy the ball at its 25-yard line. Quincy worked the ball across mid field again, but a four-yard loss and incomplete pass stalled the drive at the start of the fourth quarter.

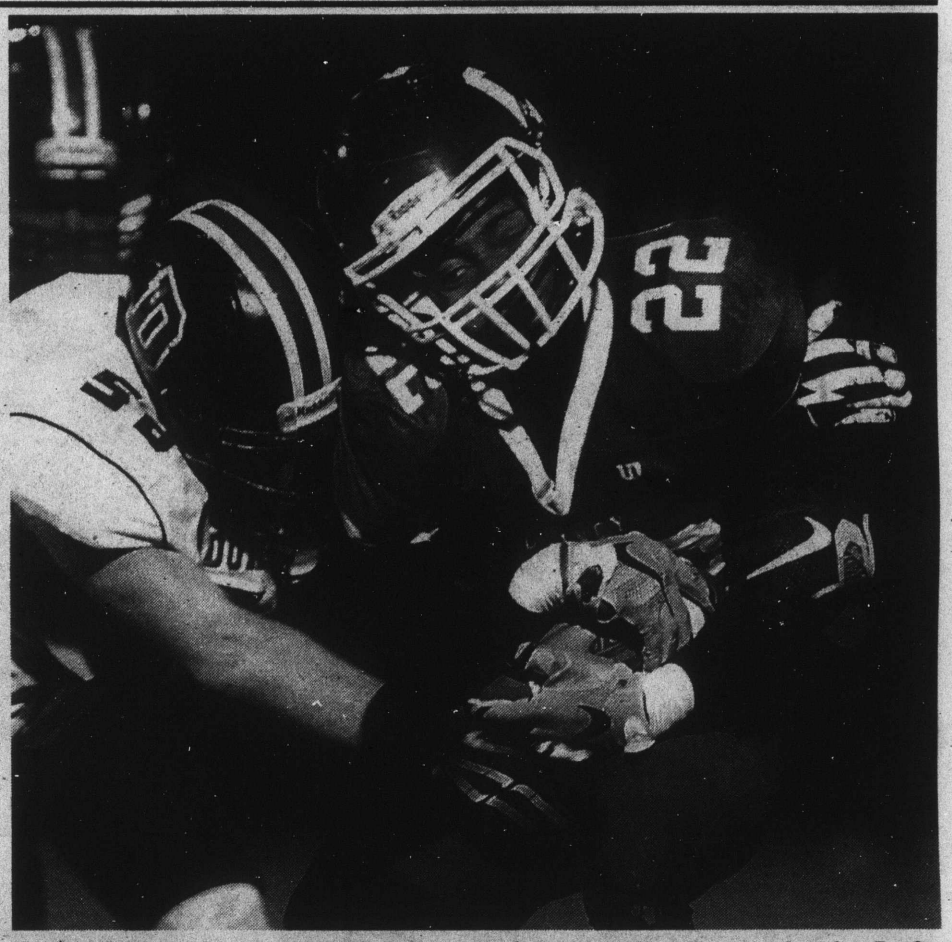
That was as close as the Presidents would get as Durfee quarterback Nick Salmon lit up the Quincy defense with a 44-yard touchdown run and hit Asante Montiero with the conversion pass to give the Hilltoppers a 22-7 advantage with 8:21 remaining.

It was the fleet-footed Salmon again on the next possession, this time running 10 yards on a keep and hitting Latrell Canto with a pass to make good on the conversion to stretch the lead to 30-7.

Quincy moved the ball well on its second series of the first quarter as sophomore quarterback Colin Keaveny completed a pair of passes to Laptiste and Brenden Ward for 19 yards. Quincy's fake punt attempt failed, giving Durfee a first down at the Presidents' 36. Salmon scampered 13 yards untouched up the middle on a keep, five plays later, for the score. Quincy blocked the point-after kick to hold the Hilltoppers at 6-0.

Quincy put together an 11-play drive later in the second half, but it stalled at the Durfee 41 when Keaveny was dropped for a seven-yard loss. The Hilltoppers took full advantage of the prime field position three plays later when Salmon hit Chaten Nehra with a 21-yard scoring pass and then rushed in untouched on the conversion for a 14-0 lead with 1:08 to play in the first half.

"As it seems to be with us, we tend to make mistakes here and there and it always seems to be at the worst times," said Reardon.



JUNIOR DOMINIC LAPTISTE grinds out some of his 134 yards on the ground against Durfee last Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Laptiste also scored Quincy's lone touchdown in a 30-7 loss to the Hilltoppers. The next high school varsity football game in Quincy is the annual Thanksgiving Day game between the Presidents and the North Quincy Red Raiders. Kick off is at 10 a.m. next Thursday, Nov. 24 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Abby Murphy Qualifies For All-State X-Country Meet

By JOE REARDON

Abby Murphy corrected a tactical error she made at the Patriot League Championships and has been on a cross country tear ever since.

The Quincy/North Quincy sophomore came up big in two consecutive weeks on the grassy, 3.1-mile Wrentham Developmental Center course and stamped her ticket to Saturday's All-State championships at the Gardner Municipal Golf Course.

Murphy stayed back for the first mile of the Div. 1 EMass Championships last Saturday before moving up into the top 10 and finishing a solid eighth in 19 minutes, 43.06 seconds. That performance came on the heels of a dominant victory in the Div. 1 Sophomore race at the Coaches Invitational. Murphy ran in a group until the halfway mark and forged ahead to crush the field with her 19:49.60.

JIMMY CANNON

"I was with the lead pack for a lot of it and I broke off at about a mile and a half," said Murphy. "I wasn't expecting to win. I knew today would be a lot tougher."

The off day at the Patriot League meet proved to be a huge learning experience after tearing out from the start instead of settling into a more conservative pace early. She struggled over the hilly, 3.1-mile course on the grounds of Pembroke High, but still placed a respectable fifth in 20:05.3.

"The league meet wasn't her best strategy," said Quincy/North Quincy coach Geoff Hennessy. "She went out really fast and just fell off the pace. Pembroke has a hill that you run twice and it's very difficult. When we were done with the event, I asked Abby if she was to run it again would she have done anything different and she said 'everything.' It was a learning experience for her."

Murphy went into the Coaches Invitational prepared to be patient before making one big move to the front. "When she came here she ran more conservatively and before you knew it, she was by herself," said Hennessy. "She ran comfortably with two or three girls and by two miles it was just her."

Murphy was 43rd at last year's All-States and is hoping to use the hills to her advantage this time around at Gardner. "There's a lot of hills and I can really pick the pace up on the downhills," she said.

Hennessy believes she is ready to run well after her freshman experience on the flat Stanley Park course in Westfield. "I think last year we were just happy to be there," he said. "We were running at Stanley Park and she hadn't been there before. This year Gardner's a hilly course that's very tricky and there's a strategy to it. She's short in stature so maybe the hills won't take as much out of her as the tall, lankier kids.

"There'll be some other kids who head out so she'll have an entourage. She may be one of those kids who makes it to All-States all four years. That's kind of a special honor to make four All-States."

Jimmy Cannon's season ended on Saturday, but not before the senior placed a strong 23rd in 16:50.82 against a loaded Div. 1 field. Cannon ran very well at Wrentham the week before, placing sixth in the Div. 1 Junior/Senior race with a swift 16:46.06. Cannon had a huge day at the Patriot League meet as well, capturing the silver medal in 16:58.7 to finish to Plymouth North's Nick McNamee.

Hennessy said there is little room for error in running against Div. 1 competition and it's a battle the entire race.

"Division One is just unbelievable," he said. "But that's Division One and that's where we are. It's the best division in the state. You're rubbing shoulders with kids who are great and will go on to college and have careers, and who knows what else."

Cannon stayed back early and passed the mile in 5:05 on Saturday before going to work, moving through the pack. "It was a hard race," he said. "I did my game plan. I started out conservative and made some moves throughout the rest of the race.

"I was really happy with that. And my finish was so much better than it usually is. I was somewhere in the twenties at the mile. They went out really fast. I wanted to be in the top 25 so I can't complain."

Panthers Claw Past Elks For JV Crown

By SEAN HALPIN

The West Quincy Elks (7-2) and Quincy Point Panthers (7-1) faced each other for the third time on Sunday, this time for Quincy Youth Football 3rd Annual Junior Varsity Championship.

The Elks got out to early 6-0 lead when Thomas Murray rushed for a 25-yard TD. The Panthers took the ball and drove the ball deep but, were stopped by the Elks defense on a goal-line stand.

The Elks took the ball on their 1-yard line and were held on downs when the fumbled snap caused the Elks punter to be tackled on the 4 yard line. The Panthers capitalized on the field position as fullback Michael Potter scored on a 1yard plunge to tie the game, 6-6, at halftime.

The Panthers opened the second half with a long drive. They capped off by a 15-yard TD pass from QB Andrew Novak to Michael Potter. FB Jarod Walker rushed for the conversion as the Panthers took a 14-6 lead. Panther RB Jaden Field capped off the day with a 69-yard TD run. Eric Lomanno rushed for the conversion as the Point Panthers defeated the Elks, 22-0, to capture the QYFL Junior Varsity Championship.

West Quincy Head Coach Frank Calabro praised the efforts of his players. Gianni Perea, Thomas Murray, Scott Ritz, Nicholas Perea, Brody Baker, Gabe Villarino, Patrick Berry, Dallas Hudgins, Sammee Akhouzine, and Ryan Milley all turned in strong performances for the Elks.

Quincy Point Head Coach Joe Fields' squad was led by Jacey Hamm, Shawn Kozlowski, Jaden Fields, Michael Potter, Ruben Charles, Peter Boylan, Andrew Novak, Aaron Gravelle Tristan Guan and Jarod Walker.

Elks Run Out Mustangs For Freshman Title

By SEAN HALPIN

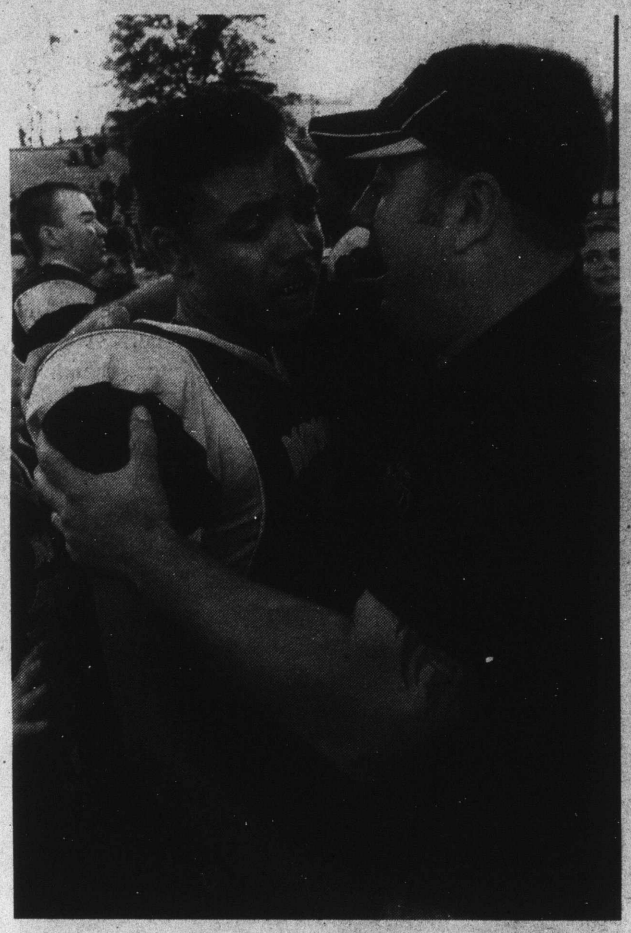
The West Quincy Elks (6-3) faced the Milton Mustangs (6-2) for the 3rd Annual Quincy Youth Football Freshman Championship Game.

West Quincy got out to an early lead and never looked back as John Toland raced for 17-yard touchdown. QB Shane Wright rushed for the conversion to make it 8-0. Later in the first half, Elks RB Jordan Mahoney ran for a 2-yard TD plunge. Wright rushed for the conversion as West Quincy took a 16-0 lead at halftime.

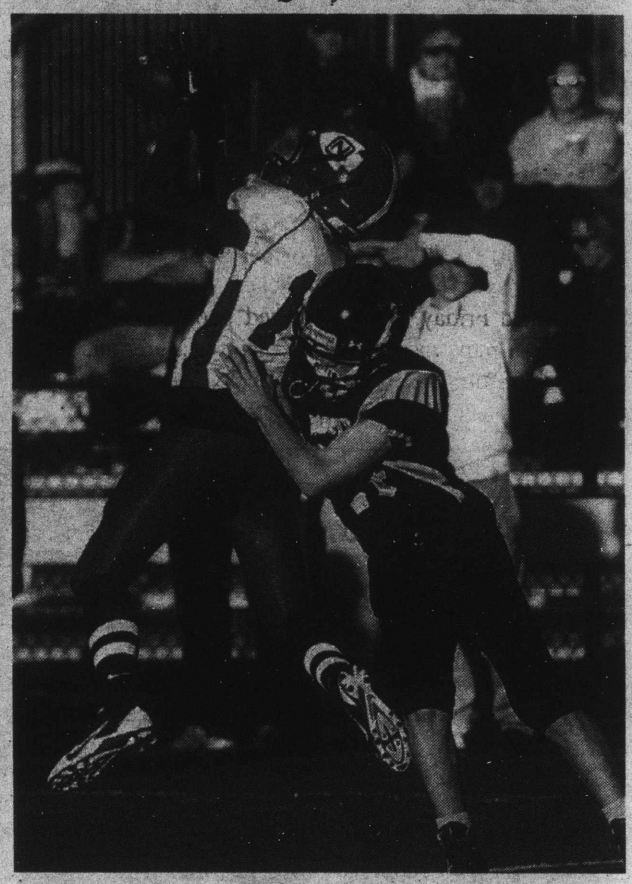
The Elks opened the second half with long drive down to the goal-line. Ivan Yhomby scored on a 5-yard TD run to make it 22-0. Late in the second half, Quarterback Shane Wright scored on a 4-yard keeper play as the West Quincy Elks (7-3) defeated the Milton Mustangs (6-3) 28-0, to capture their first QYFL Freshman Championship.

Milton Head Coach Tony Cicerone saw fine performances from Tim Trotman, Sean Finn, Oliver Blais, Owen Guerard, Ferris Collins and Anderson Perez-Ruiz.

West Quincy Head Coach Craig Wright praised the efforts of John Toland, Shane Wright, Enea Panariti, Ruben Santana, Jordan Mahoney, Ben Hudach, Dan Teixeira, Dan Hudach, Marcello Barros, Truett Bramlett and Ivan Yhomby.



MANET ASSISTANT COACH Greg Santoro hugs Isaiah Steinberg after Houghs Neck's 36-20 win over the North Quincy Apaches in the QYFL varsity championship Sunday.



NORTH QUINCY RECEIVER Jamal Maximillien takes a clean shot from Manet defensive back Campbell Tierney.

"Our goal is to run our best in the biggest meet," said coach Geoff Hennessy. "A lot of our kids accomplished that.

"For those who didn't it wasn't for a lack of training, planning, diligence and effort. They left it all out there on the course. We squeezed out every drop out of everyone. I couldn't be prouder.

"We're not a team of superstars - we're like every other Quincy or North Quincy team. We go on heart. We're overachievers. This was a fun team to coach. The kids are great kids, parents are supportive, our coaches are as good as a team could have.

"We got one more (All-State) with Abby. She got 43rd last year as a freshman so we're just shooting for a better finish. I also want to point out our four senior boys – Jimmy Cannon, Aidan Golden, Kevin White and Brian O'Connell – all brought something different to the table and were good leaders for our young kids. On the girls side Kara Polsgrove, although a newcomer transferring from North Carolina, was a quiet leader who was there every day. They'll all be missed moving forward."

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman

DON'T GET FROZEN OUT

"Adhesive capsulitis" (commonly known as "frozen shoulder") occurs when the capsule of connective tissue surrounding the shoulder joint develops chronic inflammation, thickens, and tightens. Symptoms include gradual pain when moving the shoulder followed by increased stiffness that limits range of motion. Most cases of frozen shoulder follow a specific pattern. First, there is an acute phase that is characterized by significant pain and functional impairment. This is followed by a progressive stiffening phase as shoulder motion worsens. The shoulder joint may become so tight and stiff that it is nearly impossible to carry out simple movements, such as simply raising the arm. Treatment consisting of gentle stretching exercises and manipulation of the shoulder joint helps get the shoulder moving again.

Instead of covering up your symptoms with drugs, at FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we will help determine if your health problem, such as frozen shoulder, can be helped through gentle chiropractic care – without drugs or surgery. Call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where you will be fully educated as to what is happening to you and how we can help. If you're suffering from pain, try a safe, effective alternative: chiropractic care. We have the services you require. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. While the cause of frozen shoulder is not exactly known, patients with diabetes, Parkinson's disease, cardiovascular disease, and thyroid disorders seem to be at greater risk.

'Tree Of Joy' At Quincy Point Congregational Church

Nov. 20th is the kick- off for the Quincy Point Congregational Church "Tree of Joy".

The annual collection of Christmas gifts for children supports Interfaith Social Services and the Quincy Public School Project Access program. Pick up a tag or tags from the Christmas tree located in the downstairs social hall at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St. Unwrapped items are due back to the church on Dec 11th.

New members will be welcomed into the congregation on Sunday, Nov. 20th during 10 a.m. worship. Rev. Stan Duncan will be preaching and Christina Mendez will be deacon of the day. Refreshments will be served after worship in the fellowship Hall on the lower floor of the building.

The Missions committee will be having a SERRV Sale in the Social Hall on Sundays in November after worship. SERRV is a nonprofit, fair trade organization dedicated to lifting disadvantaged artisans, farmers and their families out of poverty. Many hand crafted items will be available for purchase.

Tuesday, Nov. 22nd is the annual Thanksgiving Ecumenical Service. This is a joint service of St. Joseph Church and Quincy Point Congregational.

This year Bethany Congregational will also take part to honor a Rev. Ann Suzedell, who will receive the Quincy Point Community Service Award in recognition for all she has done for QPCC and the Quincy Point community.

St. Joe's is hosting this year and will lead worship. Rev. Stan Duncan will be preaching. The joint choir of QPCC, St. Joe's and Bethany Congregational will be singing. The offering will help support the St. Joseph's Food Pantry.

Refreshments will follow in the QPCC Social Hall. Bus service is provided by 1000 Southern Artery.

Christ Church Christmas Fair

The annual Christmas Fair at Christ Church Quincy, 12 Quincy Ave., Quincy, will be held Friday, Dec. 2 from 5 to 8 p.m. and Saturday, Dec. 3 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The fair will feature tables of handmade craft items, a kitchen boutique, jewelry, baked goods, raffles, white elephant treasures and more.

There will also be a snack bar.

RELIGION

Houghs Neck Congregational

The Sunday morning worship service at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave. starts at 10 a.m.

Pastor Felix Carrion will lead the service and preach the sermon "Grace, Gratitude ad Generosity."

Liturgist Nancy Jacobs will call to worship and read the scripture lesson. Steve Reed, minister of music, will direct the choir. Shirley Pearson and Joseph Giggey will serve for the Diaconate. A fellowship coffee hour will follow the service hosted by Nancy Jacobs.

This Sunday the church is collecting non-perishable food for ISS to restock their shelves for winter demands. Checks are also welcome as they can purchase food from the Boston Food Bank at a very low cost.

This Sunday at 3 p.m. the church will host an Ecumenical service for Holy Trinity churches – Most Blessed Sacrament and Our Lady of Good Counsel and Bethel Church of the Nazarene. Colleen McIntosh from Bethel will preach the sermon and other clergy will take part. A combined choir from all the churches will sing.

Collation will follow the service. Everyone is welcome.

OBITUARIES

Marion E. Marani, 94

MARION E. MARANI

A funeral Mass for Marion E. (Tropea) Marani, 94, was celebrated Nov. 12 in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Marani died Nov. 7 after a brief illness.

Born and raised in Quincy, she graduated Quincy High School in the class of 1940. She was passionate about her family and her cooking, and her meatballs and ravioli are world-renowned. Mrs. Marani was a sports enthusiast who followed her children and grandchildren's sports teams as closely as she did the Patriots, the Red Sox, and the Celtics. She was devoted to her Catholic faith and was most recently a parishioner at St. John the Baptist Parish in Quincy. In her leisure time she enjoyed playing cards with her dear friends at 125 Granite Place in Quincy.

Mrs. Marani was the beloved wife of the late Evo A. Marani. She was a caring sister to the late Frank, John (Tubba) and Louise Tropea. She is survived by her sister Elaine McGlauflin of Quincy.

She was the loving mother of Teresa Kominsky and her husband Carl of Tucson, Arizona; Jack Marani and his wife Linda of Halifax, and Joseph Marani and his wife Mary of Hanover. Cherished grandmother of Jennifer Fearnley, John Marani, Jr., Jeffrey Marani, Joseph Marani, Matthew Marani, Michael Marani, Jodi Seals, and Leah Sauter. Adored "Big Nana" of Evo, Morgan, Morrison, Shea, Emmy, Ryan, Marlowe, Maylee, Leo, Grant, Frank, and Jackson.

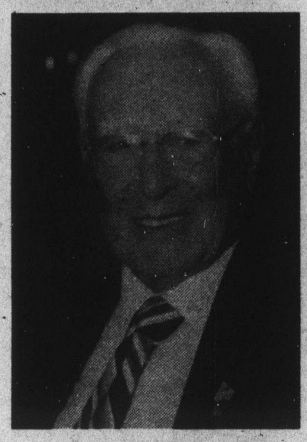
In addition to her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, she is survived by many nieces, nephews and cousins, special among them Patti (Marani) Molignano of Weymouth, Donna (Marani) Carr of Abington, Evelyn (Marani) L'Homme of Wareham, Margaret (Marani) Mullen of Pembroke, and Mara (Marani) Russell of Halifax. She leaves many dear friends at 125 Granite Place in Quincy, where she resided for more than 25 years.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to St. John the Baptist Parish, 20 Gay St., Quincy, MA 02169 or to the Grow Clinic for Children, Dowling Ground, Boston Medical Center, 771 Albany St, Boston, MA 02118.

See keohane.com or call 1-800-keohane for directions and online condolences.

Salvatore C. Gallinaro, 94



SALVATORE C. GALLINARO

A funeral Mass for Salvatore C. "Sal" Gallinaro, age 94, of Quincy, was celebrated Nov. 12 in St. Thomas More Church, Braintree.

Mr. Gallinaro died Nov. 6 at Englewood Community Hospital in Florida, surrounded by his loving family.

He was born, raised, and educated in Watertown. Mr. Gallinaro lived in Quincy for sixty years and was a winter resident of Englewood, Florida for twenty-five years.

Mr. Gallinaro was proud to have served in the United States Army during World War II as a member of the 3104th Ordnance Company. He participated in the Northern France Campaign and received the European African Middle Eastern Theater Campaign Ribbon with 1 Bronze Battle Star. He was also a member of the first all-volunteer army battalion.

He worked as a clothing cutter and marker man as a member of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union for over forty years. He also served as a constable for Norfolk County.

Mr. Gallinaro was a lifelong boating enthusiast. He was a longtime member and past commodore of the Town River Yacht Club in Quincy. He was also a past president of the Quincy Bay Race Week Association.

Beloved husband of the late Maria Josephine (Previti) Gallinaro. Devoted father of Gerard L. Gallinaro and his partner Julie of Florida, Mary Jo Gallinaro and her partner Frank of Humarock, Joyce Alfano and her husband Salvatore of Braintree and Donna Gallinaro and her partner Michael of Plymouth. Loving grandfather of Anthony, Joseph and Steven Alfano. Longtime beloved companion of Elizabeth "Liz" MacNeil. Dear brother of Robert Gallinaro of Belmont and the late Alfred Gallinaro. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Interment with Military Honors at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Soldiers' Home in Chelsea, Activities Fund, c/o John Davis, 100 Summit Avenue, Chelsea, MA 02150.

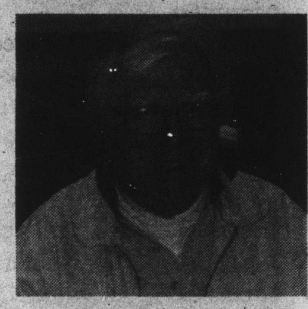
Francis X. McCabe, 76



FRANCIS X. McCABE

Visiting hours for Francis X. "Frank, F.X." McCabe, 76, of Quincy were held Monday at Kfoury Keefe Funeral Home, West Roxbury.

Mr. McCabe died Nov. 9.

Beloved father of Karen McCabe and her husband Peter Angelos of Randolph, Helen McCabe and her husband Eric Barnes of Geneva, NY. Loving brother of Paul McCabe and his wife Joan of Brookline, and the late Jack, William, Harry, Donald, Elizabeth, Rita, Helen and Margaret. Frank is also survived by many nieces and nephews, as well as extended family, some of whom he met through his extensive genealogy research.

Mr. McCabe was a proud veteran of the U.S. Army. In his retirement he volunteered to teach English (ESOL). He relished the opportunity to help his students learn. Mr. McCabe's students were also his very good friends, referring to him fondly as "Uncle Frank."

A private interment service will be held at a later date.

Memorial donations may be made to Old Colony Elder Services, 144 Main St., Brockton, MA 02301, ocesma.org.

Ruth J. Bradbury, 91

Funeral services for Ruth J. (MacBeth) Bradbury, age 91, of Braintree, will be held at 10:30 a.m. Thursday in Fort Square Presbyterian Church, Quincy. Pastor John W. Culp will officiate.

Mrs. Bradbury died very peacefully Monday at home, surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in Quincy on Jan. 4, 1925, to the late Alexander and Annie (Darrach) MacBeth. She was raised and educated in Quincy schools and was a graduate of Quincy High School, Class of 1942. After graduation, Mrs. Bradbury worked for the John Hancock Life Insurance Company in New York City during World War II. She returned to Braintree in 1950 where she lived for sixty-six years. Mrs. Bradbury was employed as a secretary at the East Middle School in Braintree from 1970-1988.

She was a lifelong active member of the Fort Square Presbyterian Church in Quincy, singing in the choir, teaching Sunday School, as a member and former president of the Friendship Circle, working in the VBS, serving as a trustee, and also serving on a pastoral search committee.

Mrs. Bradbury loved playing the piano, knitting, crossword puzzles, baking, and was an avid walker. She enjoyed making meals for people, and would gladly assist anyone in need. She had a passion for the missions around the world, especially helping an orphanage in the Philippines.

Devoted mother of Donna Ross and her husband Peter of Canton, Robert Bradbury of Braintree, Dayna Scribi and her husband Michael of

Pearl M. Volpe, 89

A funeral service for Pearl May (Parody) Volpe, 89, of Quincy, was held Tuesday in Bolea-Buonfiglio Funeral Home, 116 Franklin St., Quincy.

Mrs. Volpe died peacefully Nov. 11.

She was the wife of Samuel P. Volpe for 63 years. Born on July 20, 1927 in Quincy, she was the loving daughter of the late Carl and Marion (Hall) Parody.

Mrs. Volpe was a loving person who enjoyed caring for everyone around her. She attended Quincy High School but left during her junior year to be at home with her mother who was bedridden from heart disease.

She is survived by her husband, Samuel P. Volpe of Quincy, her daughter Donna Driscoll and her husband John Driscoll of Milton, and her son Paul Volpe of New York City. She was the cherished Gramma of Mark Driscoll of Winchester and Jacqueline DeFreitas and her husband, Robert DeFreitas of Milton. Also survived by her loving nieces and nephews of the Volpe family.

The Volpe and Driscoll family would like to give a special thank you to the wonderful staff at the Hancock Park nursing facility for lovingly caring for Mrs. Volpe during her time there.

Interment at Blue Hills Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to the Alzheimer's Foundation of America, alzfdn.org.

SJC Sides With City On Adams Academy Suit

By SCOTT JACKSON

The state's highest court on Tuesday ruled in favor of Quincy by upholding the dismissal of a lawsuit that challenged the 50-year lease of the Adams Academy to the Quincy Historical Society.

James DeGiacomo, the trustee of the Adams Temple and School Fund, brought the lawsuit in 2014 challenging the 50-year lease awarded by the city in 1972 – when it was trustee of the fund – to the Quincy Historical Society for the Adams Academy building. The Adams Temple and School Fund benefits the Woodward School, which was beneficiary of the fund in 1953.

Under terms of the lease, the society is responsible for upkeep of the building and pays $1,200 for rent to the trust fund annually. DeGiacomo had argued the rent did not represent fair market value for the property.

Francis X. Spina, an associate justice on the Supreme Judicial Court, sided with the city and granted a request for summary judgment in a ruling last year. Spina, in his 2015 ruling, said a 1972 SJC finding that approved the lease settled the matter by finding no breach of its fiduciary duty to the fund. Spina based his ruling on the principle of res judicata, meaning the matter had been adjudicated in a competent court previously and could not be re-litigated.

DeGiacomo then appealed to the full SJC, contending the Woodward School was not a party to the 1972 litigation and not precluded from bringing the new lawsuit.

The SJC, in its ruling Tuesday, unanimously upheld Spina's 2015 dismissal of the case. In its ruling, the court said Quincy took the proper steps – including notifying the office of then Attorney General Robert Quinn – before executing the lease. Under state law, the attorney general is tasked with representing the beneficiaries of a public trust such as the Adams Temple and School Fund.

"With respect to the interest in maximizing the net income arising from the lease, the interests of the school and the attorney general were aligned and we must infer that the attorney general recognized his obligation to represent the public interests served by the charitable trust," Chief Justice Ralph D. Gant wrote in the court's ruling.

Mayor Thomas Koch welcomed the court's finding.

"We are very pleased the state's highest court reviewed what occurred here very carefully and determined that city officials took the proper steps back in 1972," he said in a statement.

"The Quincy Historical Society has maintained and enhanced the building we all know and love as Adams Academy for the past four decades. It would have been a grave injustice if the court had ruled for the trustee and Woodward School in this case. Adams Academy has been preserved as a cornerstone of the rich, historical tradition in our city. Its presence fulfills the desire of John Adams, who deeded this land and provided funds for the construction of this beautiful structure."

Koch said he was reviewing the decision with City Solicitor James Timmins – who argued the case before the SJC – and intends to meet with Quincy Historical Society officials in the near future.

"This site is an important part of our history, and an important feature of our downtown," the mayor stated. "We will continue to do all we can to preserve and allow for future generations to enjoy the vision of John Adams."

Councillors Want More Time To Consider TOD Zoning

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors want additional time to consider new zoning overlays that Mayor Thomas Koch has proposed to encourage transit-oriented development at three of Quincy's MBTA stations.

Koch in October introduced an amendment to the city's zoning code that would create transit-oriented zoning districts at the North Quincy, Wollaston and Quincy Adams stations. The new transit-oriented zoning districts would be overlay districts, giving a developer the option of following the new zoning rules or those already in place.

The Quincy Center MBTA district would not be included in a new overlay. It is already in one of the new districts created for the redevelopment of the downtown.

The transit-oriented districts would allow for taller buildings – up to 10 stories in height – at the three stations with less required parking than necessary under current zoning rules, and let developers take advantage of shared parking arrangements. The new zoning rules would have a minimum lot size and minimum lot size per dwelling unit, but no other dimensional requirements. The Planning Board would be the special permit granting authority for all developments falling under the new zoning.

The City Council met to review Koch's proposed changes to the zoning code during a special session on Nov. 10, but no vote was taken that night.

Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain called for additional time to consider implementing the new zoning changes. Several residents expressed skepticism over the proposal during a public hearing earlier that evening, and Cain agreed with their concern that more input would be needed.

"I kind of agree – we heard some public opinion tonight – I think it's coming kind of fast," he said.

Additionally, Cain questioned whether all three stations should have the same zoning requirements.

"I think it's a good start, but I think there is a long way to go," he said. "We're looking at three different, distinct neighborhoods within the city of Quincy and trying to bundle them into one document here, and I think we should actually be looking at those regions independently.

"I think however dense we'd like to consider the Wollaston area or Quincy Adams area or North Quincy T station parking lot should be thought of in different respects."

Councillor Joseph Finn said he was generally supportive of the zoning overlays because they would allow for design guidelines for development that would otherwise not be in place – the Planning Department would be tasked with crafting the guidelines – but agreed with Cain's concern about public input.

"I generally support this overlay because...in order to develop this in a way that is consistent with what the community wants to do, the only thing that refers them back to that plan, is to have the overlay zoning in place," Finn said. "However, the point Councillor Cain raises is a valuable one in terms of specifically input."

Chris Walker, a spokesman for the mayor, said Monday the administration looks forward to further discussion of the proposed changes.

"We certainly appreciate the work the council has done on this issue to date," Walker said. "We look forward to further discussion on this issue."

Residents had a chance to comment to comment on the proposed zoning overlays during a public hearing held immediately prior to the council meeting on the matter.

Anita Kutasz, a resident of Grandview Avenue, said she was not necessarily opposed to idea, but had serious questions about the proposal. Parking and traffic in her neighborhood, which is near the Wollaston station, is already problematic, Kutasz stated, and would only get worse if future developments at the T station had less parking than currently required.

"I know we're supposed to be thinking about people who are not going to be having cars in this development; however, it's not everyone," she said.

"Lifting the restrictions and making things more open for the developers in an area which is already overcrowded seems quite, quite foolish. You're going to have more accidents, you're going to have more anger, and I don't believe it is in the best interest of Quincy as a whole."

John Rodophele of Grenwold Road suggested several changes to the proposed zoning rules at the three stations. They included making the minimum lot size three acres – as originally proposed, the minimum size is five acres, but the Planning Department has recommended reducing it to one acre. Rodophele also suggested requiring one parking space per bedroom instead of residential unit, and increasing the minimum lot area per dwelling unit to at least 500 square feet instead of 325 square feet.

"The bottom line is that we have to look out for the people who have lived here forever," Rodophele said. "It's really overcrowded; we can't let them get too dense and we don't want too many developers on the same lot. It would be nice to have a master developer on each station."

William Zamzow, who lives on Edgewood Circle, noted the city held a series of public meetings while contemplating its plans for Quincy Center redevelopment, and said more public input would be needed for the transit-oriented zoning rules.

"Those are three of the largest remaining, fairly open pieces of property in town left. We've got to make sure they're right," he said. "I don't have a problem with density on those sites, but you have to sound density. I'm not seeing anything to make me feel warm and fuzzy."

Dr. Eric Cohen, who owns the parcel of land at 275 Hancock St., within the proposed overlay district at the North Quincy station, spoke in favor of adding the new zoning rules.

Seventeen acres of land would be included at the North Quincy station – the entire MBTA property and several other abutting parcels, including the firehouse. At Quincy Adams, 31 acres would be placed in the overlay district, including the Home Depot property. The Wollaston station's overlay district would be limited to eight acres of MBTA property there.

The MBTA has already announced plans to redevelop the North Quincy station's parking lot, where a pair of developers are backing a $205 million proposal to bring 579 residential units and 40,000 square feet of retail space to the station. City officials anticipate developments at both Quincy Adams and Wollaston over the next several years.

Discover Quincy Promoting Arts, Culture In Quincy

Pop Up Art Gallery Nov. 17-19 - 4-8 PM
Inside Granite Trust Building, 1400 Hancock St.

Discover Quincy has been working to promote arts and culture in Quincy, including the set up of a pop up art gallery in Quincy Center.

"We have partnered with the Quincy Art Association to transform a vacant retail space in downtown into a Pop Up Art Gallery featuring the work of local artisans: Alan Jenkins, Amber Buck, Dan Myers, David Osheskie, DJ Stenny, Isabel Shamitz, James Kavanaugh, John Marshall Dyke, Karen Giovanniello, Lily Kwan, Steve Powers, Tony Andrade, students from the Woodward School for Girls and more," said Margaret Laforest, vice president of Tourism for the Quincy Chamber of Commerce.

"The Pop-Up Art Gallery is a wonderful event that brings together professional artists, aspiring artists, as well as students - everyone has something to bring to the arts," said QAA President Karen Giovanniello.

Woodward Headmaster Walter Hubley adds, "The arts are a critical part of our STEAM initiative at The Woodward School - the integration of Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics with the Arts. The Pop-Up Art Gallery is a great way for artists throughout the community to get involved, have a voice, and our students are proud to be a part of it."

The pop up art gallery is open Thursday through Saturday, from 4 to 8 p.m., Nov. 17-19. Admission is free.

The gallery is set up inside the Granite Trust Building, 1400 Hancock St. Enter through the Bank of America lobby or the side door on Chestnut Street.

"As we renovate our city's downtown, we recognize the value arts and culture contributes to our city's vibrancy," Laforest said. "With so many great restaurants within walking distance of our location, we encourage diners to stop in to the gallery where art can be appreciated and purchased. We are grateful to our donors who are committed to the arts and helped bring art to a retail space that wouldn't be financially sustainable without their support.

"This event is made possible thanks to the support of Discover Quincy, Massachusetts Cultural Council, Key Realty, Quincy Mutual Group, Related Beal, Northeast Community Bank and our media sponsors, Artscope Magazine and The Quincy Sun."

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Keep those sharp Sheep eyes focused on a hazy situation. As things begin to clear up, you'll find a sharper picture emerging, showing something you will need to know.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Watch your expenses through the end of the month. Later, you'll be glad to have extra money to pay for something that will make an acquisitive Bovine's heart beat faster.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're now ready to make that oft-deferred commitment, if you still believe it's what you want. Don't be afraid to change your mind if you feel you should go in another direction.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Now that you are moving on with your life after that recent disappointment, how about reactivating your travel plans and taking someone special along with you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Many new friends come into your personal life, which suits all of you social Lions just fine. However, one new friend might make demands that you could find difficult to deal with.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Communication doesn't exist unless it's two-way. So if you're getting no replies to the signals you're sending, it could be time to look for someone more receptive.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A workplace complication that you thought was ironed out develops new wrinkles that need attention. Meanwhile, expect continuing improvement in your home life.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A tense personal problem needs to be talked out before someone decides to walk out. Resist making decisions until full explanations are offered from both sides.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A technological glitch that caused problems recently will soon be repaired, and life can return to normal. A colleague has a surprising message to deliver.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your partner might feel that you haven't been as open with him or her as you should be. Deal with this now, before it turns into something more difficult to handle.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Good news: Many of the stumbling blocks that affected the progress of some of your career projects are fading away. Things also start to look up on the home front.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You'll need that strong Piscean pluck to get through waters that will be turbulent for a while. A more positive aspect soon emerges, along with some welcome news.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are zealous in the pursuit of truth. You would make an excellent research scientist.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

64th Annual Quincy Christmas Parade Sunday

'Traditions Of Christmas' Steps Off At 12:30 PM

By SCOTT JACKSON

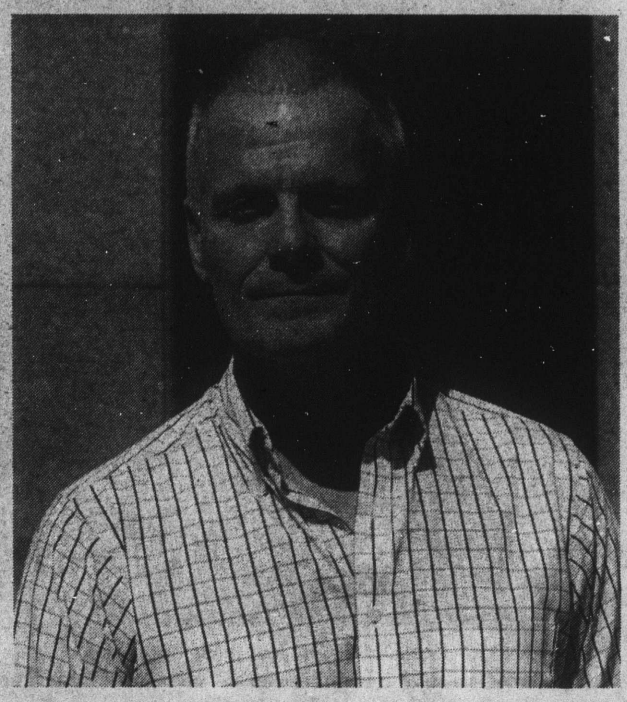
The 64th annual Quincy Christmas Parade will begin making its way up Hancock Street at 12:30 p.m. Sunday with more than 110 units – including bands, floats and specialty units – all decorated to reflect this year's theme, "Traditions of Christmas."

Quincy native Richard "Ratt" Kennedy, whose work advocating on behalf of ALS research has helped raise more than one million dollars toward a cure for the disease, will be the grand marshal for the parade.

Kennedy, a member of a large, well-known Quincy family, is president of the Angel Fund for ALS Research, a local charity that raises money for ALS investigations at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at UMass Medical Center in Worcester.

Kennedy has helped lead the fight to find a cure for the devastating disease for decades.

Kennedy's father, Christopher, was first diagnosed with ALS more than 30 years ago. Christopher Kennedy, a 13-year member of the Quincy School Committee and dean at Northeastern University, died in 1989 at the age of 66; he was also being treated for a brain tumor at the time of his death.



RICH KENNEDY, a Quincy native who has helped raise more than $1 million for ALS research, is the grand marshal of Sunday's 64th annual Quincy Christmas Parade. Kennedy, a member of a well-known Quincy family, was diagnosed with ALS earlier this year.

Kennedy's brother, Jimmy, succumbed to the disease at the age of 31.

For 19 years, Kennedy has organized one of Quincy's most successful annual charity road races named in honor of his brother, the Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run For ALS. The race is often better known by Jimmy's nickname –The Squirrel Run.

Kennedy was diagnosed with ALS earlier this year.

"Rich Kennedy has done so much for so many others," Mayor Thomas Koch

SANTA CLAUS will again be the star of this year's Quincy Christmas Parade. This year's event also features a number of floats, speciality units and marching bands that will proceed from Hancock Street and Hannon Parkway in Quincy Center to North Quincy High School.

LESS THAN DIAMOND AND MORE

If you are looking for a gemstone that can more than adequately stand in for diamond, take a look at Moissanite. This intriguing gemstone is named after French scientist Henri Moissan, who discovered microscopic particles of the gem in a meteorite crater in Arizona in 1893. He first assumed that he had found diamond, but later determined that the crystals were composed of silicon carbide. While these natural stones are very rare, it eventually became possible to recreate them in the laboratory. The resultant Moissanite is barely distinguishable from diamond. Not only is it nearly as hard as diamond (9.25 versus 10), but it is also more brilliant than diamond at a fraction of the cost.

Gemstones are measured on the Mohs Scale of Hardness. This assesses a gem's ability to withstand surface scratching. On this scale, moissanite scores a 9.25; this makes it one of the hardest substances on earth and suitable for daily wear as an engagement ring. Quincy Fire Begins Ice Rescue Training

By MIKE SLADE
Fire Prevention Officer
Quincy Fire Department

The Quincy Fire Department has once again started annual ice rescue training. Quincy Fire conducts ice rescue training every year in order to reacquaint first responders with the ice rescue equipment, tactics, and potential ice rescue areas throughout the city of Quincy.

Ice rescue training was conducted last week at Sailor's Home Pond. Sailor's Home Pond is located on Rice Road in the Wollaston section of Quincy. Heavy vegetation below the ice can cause inconsistencies in the thickness of the ice. Other factors that affect the ice includes temperature and snow cover. Sailor's Home Pond is a popular spot to ice skate, therefore it poses a serious risk to people falling through the ice.

Although there is no ice on the pond during last week's training, the basic principles of ice rescues are the same. Ice rescue drills are designed to enforce safety for the firefighters, to properly transport and deploy the ice rescue sleds, and train for effective communication between the companies, dispatch, and communication to the person(s) being rescued.

Firefighters trained last week on proper techniques for rescuing one victim as well as rescuing two or more victims. The Quincy Fire Department has two ice rescue sleds. One sled is located at the Houghs Neck Fire Station and the other is located at the West Quincy Fire Station. Other ice rescue equipment utilized by firefighters includes ice rescue suits, helmets, life rings, life jackets, and numerous lengths of rope.

The ice rescue sled weighs 88 pounds and can hold a capacity of 600 pounds. The ice rescue sled is designed to go over ice as well as open water. It can be easily deployed in all areas of water throughout the city.

The Quincy Fire Department is prepared to rescue any victim that may fall through the ice. However, we would like to avoid any potential ice rescue emergencies by providing the following tips:

Stay off of the ice.

Pond and ocean ice are unstable and unsafe. If you want to ice skate or play ice hockey, utilize safer Quincy resources like the Quincy Youth Hockey Arena or the Quincy Shea Rink.

If you choose to go out onto frozen ponds, check the thickness once you get there. Ice needs to be a minimum of 4 inches thick to walk on and is rarely the same thickness over the entire body of water.

Check the ice every 100 feet for ice thickness consistency. A cordless drill and a tape measure is the easiest way to measure the thickness of the ice. Using a cordless drill and a long, five-eighths inch wood auger bit, drill a hole and measure the ice thickness with a tape measure. Again, Quincy Fire strongly advises to stay off the ice.

Keep your dogs leashed.

It is the law to keep dogs leashed in Quincy. If your dog happens to wonder on the ice, please do not attempt to retrieve the dog by going onto the ice. Call 911 immediately. Quincy Firefighters will rescue your dog.

Do not attempt a rescue.

Call 911 and do not attempt a rescue. If you are with someone who falls through the ice, do not attempt a rescue. By attempting a rescue, you may become a victim as well. Call 911 immediately.

The Quincy Fire Department trains aggressively and responds daily to protect the citizens of Quincy 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, and 365 days of the year. Our response time is less than three minutes. If you should have any questions whatsoever, please do not hesitate to call the Fire Prevention Bureau at 617-376-1015.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1916 postcard view of the first building built by the First Church of Squantum. The congregation had originally met in a tent on the site of the fire station down the street. Later they moved their services to the more comfortable old Union Vacation House on the corner of Huckins Avenue and Bellevue Road. After a fire destroyed Vacation House the congregation brought the property and built this wooden church on the lot in 1914. The Norman-style stone church with a similar tower that is now on this corner replaced this building in 1947. Sited on one of the highest elevations in Squantum it is known to some as "The Friendly Church on the Hill." To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Cost Of Prop. 2½: Up To 400 City Jobs, $10M In School Funds

Proposition 2 ½ may cost as many as 400 city employees their jobs – not including school personnel. And the School Department may lose as much as $10 million in its budget for Fiscal Year 1982.

Those are the grim figures that grew out of a presentation to the effects of Proposition 2 ½ that is being given by Mayor Arthur Tobin to city officials and union heads.

The mayor said, after conferring with department heads over the weekend, that he prepared a list of about 112 positions that might have to be cut from the FY1982 budget.

Under Proposition 2 ½, Quincy will have to reduce its property tax levy by 15 percent in 1982 and will lose 62 percent of its usual receipts from the auto excise tax.

TOWN BROOK HOUSE DEDICATION SUNDAY

Dedication services for the 151-unit Town Brook House elderly apartments on Brackett St., Quincy Center, were scheduled to be held Sunday, Nov. 30.

The $7 million, eight-story apartment building is sponsored by the Wollaston Lutheran Church which also sponsored Fenno House of Wollaston, which opened in 1973.

Conducting the dedication service will be Rev. Frank Bauer, pastor of Wollaston Lutheran Church and executive director of Wollaston Lutheran Church Apartments.

Also participating in the service will be Rev. William McCarthy, pastor of St. John's Church, and chairman of the Quincy Housing Authority.

Greetings will be offered by Mayor Arthur Tobin and U.S. Rep. Brian Donnelly.

Also scheduled to be in attendance were architect George Earl Ross and Edward Fish, president of Peabody Construction Co., the builder of the facility.

A Thank You From Quincy Firefighters Local 792

In the spirit of Thanksgiving and the holiday season, the Quincy Firefighters Association Local 792 would like to thank the residents and businesses in the city for all you do for us all year long.

Every year we are able to raise around $50,000 for various local charities through our fundraising efforts. Whether it's purchasing a shirt, attending a fundraiser, filling the boot for MDA, purchasing a toy for a needy kid, or helping us fill the kettle during the holiday season – you are always there for us. We wouldn't be able to do this if it wasn't for the generosity of the residents and businesses in Quincy.

As our sign says the Quincy Fire Fighters Association Local 792 is "Committed to Community," but you have truly shown over the years that you are just as committed to your firefighters and those we are trying to help. We are proud to be a part of this great community.

Once again on behalf of the 200 members of the Quincy Fire Department – Thank You, Quincy. We hope that all residents and businesses in Quincy have a Happy Thanksgiving and a safe and healthy holiday season.

Trump In The White House - What Do We Do?

He's our president-elect. So, what do we do now?

Yes, for a long while, we might be downright down and sad, and desperate and distraught. But after that, what?

We can't stay in bed and put the covers over our heads forever; we can't stay locked up in our homes forever; we can't stop watching, reading, or listening to the news because he's in the news.

And we certainly can't binge drink or drug ourselves to try to forget he's in the White House. So, what do we do?

One very important way is to pray for him and for this country. Pray that he will do what's best for this country, for ALL people in this country, and not for his own benefit or agenda. (Seriously, if you're not religious, it's never too late to pray.)

Another way is to be more compassionate and kinder to others. His election brought out the worst in us. Don't let Trump continue to do that to us . . . don't let him win.

Last but not at all least is to help the vulnerable . . . the ones that he has targeted. Muslims. Women. Mexicans. Immigrants. Non-whites. Environment. And others.

While we hope our elected officials keep Trump accountable and in his place, we volunteer and assist those who are the victims of his dangerous, insensitive, frightful rhetoric.

We make sure that those who fall through the safety nets, or have no safety nets at all, are helped up, comforted, and led to safety.

Their lives have been tough, and now they will be much tougher.

Compassion Trumps Hate. Love Trumps Hate.

GENESIS CHAMBER SINGERS, an eight-voice professional chamber choir, will present "A Genesis Christmas" on Friday, Dec. 2 at 7:30 p.m. at St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church, 1 Linden St., Quincy. Photo Courtesy Genesis Chamber Singers

'A Genesis Christmas' Concert At St. Chrysostom's Dec. 2

The Genesis Chamber Singers, an eight-voice professional chamber choir under the leadership of Hingham Schools choral director and founding artistic director Joseph Young, will present "A Genesis Christmas" on Friday, Dec. 2 at 7:30 p.m. at St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church, 1 Linden St., Quincy.

The concert opens with a world premiere of a new choral work, 'O Come,' by Quincy composer Delvyn Case. The new piece was commissioned by the ensemble, which presents a world premiere at every performance.

The program then turns to music of the late 16th century, a rich source of choral treasures, including Christmas works by Renaissance masters such as William Byrd, Tomás Luis de Victoria, and Michael Praetorius. More traditional carols make up the second half of the program, including 'The Holly and the Ivy,' 'What Child is This,' 'Angels We Have Heard on High,' 'Silent Night,' and several others.

Tickets for "A Genesis Christmas" are $25 for adults, $20 for seniors, $15 for students and veterans (children 12 & under are free). Tickets may be purchased online (www.genesischambersingers.com) or at the door.

NQHS Drama Club To Present 'In-Laws, Outlaws, And Other People'

By LUKE D. MOLLOY
City-Wide Coordinator
North Quincy High School Drama Club

It's Christmas Eve, and Tom (Ryan Fiasconaro '19) and his daughter, Beth, (Veronica Byrne '19) are getting ready for a family dinner in their home.

They are preparing for their quirky and wacky relatives to arrive. Old grumpy Uncle Leo (Isabelle Pillone '17), talkative Aunt Rose (Lynne Campbell '17), space-invader Aunt Bunny (Melissa Myers '20), redneck Uncle Bud (Nick O'Connell '18), and know-it-all Tracy (Tamara Liang '18) arrive and the family fun is soon to begin. With a couple of rude interruptions from "concerned" neighbor Sue Draper (Cincere Tarkpor '17), the night is all but ruined. That is, until a couple of unwanted guests arrive...

This family fun, holiday play takes place in the modern day and gives us a comical glimpse at what happens when a couple of criminals decide to use a dysfunctional family as their hide-out spot, unintentionally.

Hilarity ensues when the grumpy nature of Tony (Charles O'Brien '17) and the ditzy-mind of Vinny (Aidan Mordas '19) intertwine with the crazy natures of the family. Christmas is all about celebrating time with your family and being grateful for what you have, but for this family the night is all about making it out alive, and not killing each other in the process!

"In-Laws, Outlaws, and Other People..." takes place on Friday, Dec. 2nd and Saturday, Dec. 3rd at 7 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 4th at 2 p.m. in the Peter J. Chrisom Auditorium at North Quincy High School.

The show will also feature Magdalena Wierzbowski ('17), Aisha Khiyaty ('17), Rowan Sloan ('19), Elisa Dylja ('19), and Jess Morabito ('20).

Tickets will be on sale at the door at $5 for students and $10 for adults. The auditorium is wheelchair accessible. A charity Toy Drive will be held if audience members would like to bring gifts to donate, which will be placed under the tree, on stage.

Understanding, Responding To Dementia Dec. 6

Behavior is a powerful form of communication and is one of the primary ways for people with dementia to communicate their needs and feelings as the ability to use language is lost.

However, some behaviors can present real challenges to caregivers to manage.

Join Jennifer Hoadley of the Alzheimer's Association at the Kennedy Center on Tuesday, Dec. 6th at 10:30 a.m. to learn to decode behavioral messages, identify common behavior triggers, and learn strategies to help intervene with some of the most common behavioral challenges of Alzheimer's disease.

Registration is required for this event as space is limited. To register for this event call the Kennedy Center at (617) 376-1506.

Wollaston Garden Club Holiday Greens Sale

Members of the Wollaston Garden Club in Quincy will hold their annual Holiday Greens Sale Saturday, Dec. 3 from 9 a.m. to noon at Wollaston Congregational Church, corner of Lincoln and Winthrop Avenues, Wollaston.

Each year, club designers seek the latest color and holiday decorating trends to be incorporated into their designs; the use of natural materials and embellishments is also typical of garden club creations. Wreaths, small table arrangements, large outdoor containers designed for winter interest, packages of evergreens and holly, bows, and other natural and floral gift items will be available.

Arrive early for the best selection. Proceeds from the sale support the Wollaston Garden Club's work on civic beautification in Quincy and other community education and conservation projects.

Common Market 'Night Of Giving' Dec. 7

The Common Market Restaurant announces its annual "Night of Giving" will be held Wednesday, Dec. 7 at their Cafe de Paris lounge from 6 to 11 p.m.

Free hors d'oeuvres are available to customers who bring a wrapped present for a boy or a girl to the restaurant the evening of Dec. 7.

The restaurant also makes a donation to the charity and the bartenders donate a portion of their night's gratuities to the charity.

The Common Market partners with "My Brother's Keeper," a local charity, to assist families in the area and provides presents for families at Christmas time.

Since the "Night of Giving" was started at The Common Market, customers have donated more than 5,000 Christmas presents.

WHAT'S COOKING

It Took Just Three Tomatoes

By MARIE

Three fresh tomatoes and a few minutes was all it took for my son, Dom, to make most delicious tomato sauce ever!

I thought of all of you gardeners out there since you must have an abundance of fresh tomatoes from your garden.

My son Dom has an incredible garden and he brought over 3 fresh, gigantic tomatoes and put them in boiling water for no longer than 5 minutes. Then the skin was loose enough for him to peel them.

He chopped them and sautéed them in hot olive oil. He did not use any garlic, basil – nothing else – just a bit of salt. While the tomatoes were cooking he crushed them with a spoon and a fork. Within a few minutes this fresh, delicious, savory sauce was done!!

We poured the sauce over Cavatelli pasta and then sprinkled grated Romano cheese on top and voila – a gourmet meal!

This recipe is just so easy to make with 3 garden-fresh ripe tomatoes. Watching Dom cook this sauce and then tasting it was a special treat.

The taste was just like the taste of the jarred sauce we made back in the days when I helped my mother preserve jars of sauce from tomatoes grown in my dad's lush summer gardens. We preserved jar upon jar of tomatoes to get ready for pasta dinners and other recipes for the long winter ahead.

So watching Dom make this quick sauce brought back fond memories of when I helped my mother back in the day.

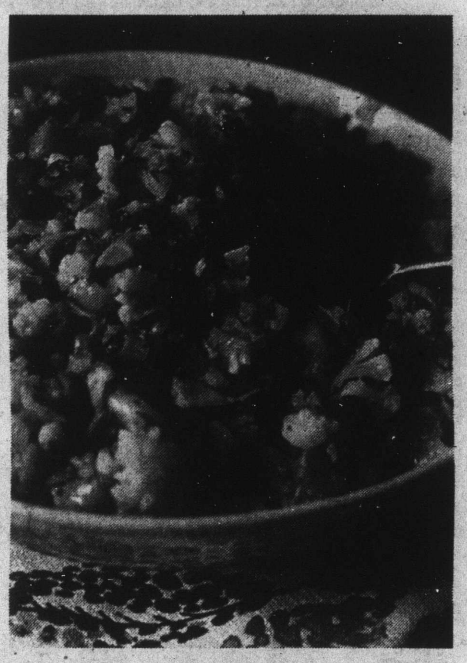
Carb Free Cauliflower Stuffing

By SUSIE

Here is a version of stuffing that you can make along with your regular stuffing for guests who are trying not to eat carbs over the holiday - (or at least are trying to reduce them.)

Though this is pretty much an impossible task over the holidays, its always nice to try new things that you don't have to feel guilty over eating, and may even be a welcome addition to some pretty rich traditional fare. It's always a good idea to serve extra vegetables next to all those potatoes, stuffing, and gravy anyway.

This tastes more like a really tasty cauliflower dish than an actual "stuffing" but you will be surprised just how good it is.



CARB FREE CAULIFLOWER STUFFING

4 tbsp. butter
1 onion, chopped
2 large carrots, peeled and chopped
2 celery stalks, chopped or thinly sliced
1 small head cauliflower, chopped
1 c. chopped mushrooms kosher salt
Freshly ground black pepper
1/4 c. Freshly Chopped Parsley
2 tbsp. chopped fresh rosemary
1 tbsp. chopped fresh sage or 1 tsp. ground sage
1/2 c. vegetable or chicken broth

Directions

1. In a large skillet over medium heat, melt butter. Add onion, carrot, and celery and sauté until soft, 7 to 8 minutes.

2. Add cauliflower and mushrooms and season with salt and pepper. Cook until tender, 5 to 10 minutes more.

3. Add parsley, rosemary, and sage and stir until combined, then pour over vegetable broth and cover with a lid. Cover until totally tender and liquid is absorbed, 15 minutes.

Seaside Gardeners Tree Lighting Sunday

The Seaside Gardeners of Squantum will hold its 17th annual Christmas tree lighting ceremony on Sunday, Nov. 27.

The ceremony begins at 4:30 p.m. and the tree lighting is at 5 p.m. Santa arrives at 5 p.m. as well.

The event takes place at the Daniel Gilbert Memorial Park at Dorchester and East Squantum Streets. Free cookies and hot chocolate will be served by the Garden Club members.

If the Quincy Christmas Parade is cancelled due to inclement weather Nov. 27, then the tree lighting ceremony is also cancelled.

All are welcome.

St. Chrysostom Christmas Fair Dec. 3

St. Chrysostom Church, corner of Linden and Hancock Streets, Quincy will hold its annual Christmas Fair Saturday, Dec. 3 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The fair will include food, crafts, games, entertainment, and more as well as all you can eat pancakes for $4.

United Methodist Church Craft Fair Dec. 3

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold a holiday craft fair Saturday, Dec. 3 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Vendors will offer a variety of items, and a homemade luncheon featuring hot dogs will be available.

For more information, call 617-773-3319.

North Quincy High School will host a Photo Sale Fundraiser to benefit Boston Children's Hospital Tuesday, Dec. 6 from 5:30 to 8 p.m. in the school atrium.

Original, framed works of photography/digital art/design created by NQHS students will be for sale.

There will also be raffles, a donation jar for spare change and complimentary food/beverages.

QUINCY DUNKIN' DONUTS franchisees Victor and Octavio Carvalho recently kicked off their 16th annual Holiday Toy Drive with a special offer for guests visiting specific locations in Quincy and Weymouth. Local Dunkin' Donuts Franchisees Kick Off 16th Annual Toy Drive

Quincy Dunkin' Donuts franchisees, Victor and Octavio Carvalho, were joined by state Sen. Patrick O'Connor, Quincy Mayor Tom Koch, Weymouth Mayor Robert Hedlund, members of the Quincy and Weymouth Police and Fire Departments, as well as representatives from Germantown Neighborhood Center and Weymouth Youth & Family Services in kicking off the 16th annual Holiday Toy Drive.

The toy drive is taking place at seven Dunkin' Donuts locations in Quincy and Weymouth. The locations are: 645 Bridge St., Weymouth; 180 Bridge St., Weymouth; 543 Southern Artery, Quincy; 825 Southern Artery, Quincy; 1250 Hancock St., Quincy; 366 Centre St., Quincy; and 100 Granite St., Quincy.

All donations will go to Germantown Neighborhood Center in Quincy and Weymouth Youth & Family Services. Collections will run through Saturday, Dec. 17th.

Charlene Manning To Receive ISS Community Hero Award

Charlene Manning of Quincy will receive Interfaith Social Services Community Hero of the Year award at the organization's Feed the Hungry Gala on Friday, Dec. 9th.

Since 1947 Interfaith Social Services has been a safety net for South Shore families in need. Their programs are focused on hunger, mental health and emergency assistance. Interfaith presents their Community Hero award each year to an individual who inspires others through selfless service.

"We have an amazing team of volunteers here at Interfaith, they are incredible, but Charlene goes above and beyond the call of duty," said Rick Doane, executive director of Interfaith Social Services. "Our Bureau Drawer Thrift Shop is one of our organization's most important fundraisers; the entire shop is run by volunteers.

"Charlene serves in the shop almost every day of the week. She is there early in the morning and into the evening, sorting, organizing planning sales and getting the shop ready for our customers. She is constantly thinking about ways that she can support Interfaith's various programs. She truly is a community hero and we are very pleased to honor her with this award."

Charlene will receive the Community Hero of the Year Award at Interfaith's Feed the Hungry Gala on Friday, Dec. 9 at Granite Links in Quincy. The Gala features carnival-style games, door prizes, entertainment and an amazing variety of live and silent auction packages. Chefs from top South Shore restaurants host a Dine Around experience for guests while local wine and spirits distributors showcase their products.

CHARLENE MANNING of Quincy will receive Interfaith Social Services Community Hero of the Year award at the organization's Feed the Hungry Gala on Friday, Dec. 9th.

Many surprises and fun giveaways are being planned for this year's event. All proceeds support Interfaith's programs.

Charlene Manning grew up in South Boston, her husband Joe is a retired Quincy policeman. They raised their two sons in Quincy.

For decades she shopped at Interfaith's Bureau Drawer Thrift Shop before becoming a volunteer at The Shop three years ago.

"For me volunteering is a self-serving reward," said Manning. "Interfaith is one of the few places that I know where I can go and really make a difference in someone's life, even if it is as small as giving a kid in the food pantry waiting room a stuffed animal. I feel selfish volunteering because I get so much out of it."

Health Dept. Message: Do You Have Hemochromatosis?

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Hemochromatosis is the most common form of iron overload disease. Hemochromatosis is believed to affect over 1 million Americans according to the Centers for Disease Control (CDC). This statistic means that 1 in 250 Americans have full-blown Hemochromatosis and 1 in 8 Americans are carriers for the genetic make-up.

Iron is essential because it is part of hemoglobin, a molecule in the blood that transports oxygen from the lungs to all body tissues. However, an excess of iron in the body leads to an accumulation that, without treatment, can damage organs such as the liver, heart, and pancreas; endocrine glands; and joints.

The three types of hemochromatosis are primary hemochromatosis, also called hereditary hemochromatosis; secondary hemochromatosis; and neonatal hemochromatosis.

Inherited genetic defects cause primary hemochromatosis, and mutations in the HFE gene, which helps regulate the amount of iron absorbed from food, are correlated with up to 90 percent of cases. The two known mutations of HFE are C282Y and H63D. C282Y defects are the most conventional cause of primary hemochromatosis. Rare defects in other genes may also cause primary hemochromatosis. People with juvenile hemochromatosis characteristically develop severe iron overload and liver and heart damage between ages 15 and 30.

RUTH JONES

Hemochromatosis that is not inherited is referred to as secondary hemochromatosis. The most common cause of secondary hemochromatosis is recurrent blood transfusions in people with severe anemia. Liver diseases, such as alcoholic liver disease, nonalcoholic steatohepatitis, and chronic hepatitis C infection, maybe the source of mild iron overload. However, this type of iron overload causes considerably less liver damage than the underlying liver disease.

Neonatal hemochromatosis is a rare disease distinguished by liver failure and death in fetuses and newborns. Scientists are investigating the causes of neonatal hemochromatosis and believe multiple factors may lead to the disease.

Primary hemochromatosis is one of the most common genetic disorders in the United States and mainly affects Caucasians of Northern European descent. Hemochromatosis is extremely infrequent in African Americans, Asian Americans, Hispanics/Latinos, and American Indians. HFE mutations are usually not the cause of hemochromatosis in these populations.

Mutually men and women can inherit the gene defects for hemochromatosis; however, not all will develop the indicators of hemochromatosis. Men usually develop symptoms at a younger age than women. Women lose iron containing blood regularly during menstruation; consequently, women possessing the gene defects that cause hemochromatosis may not develop iron overload and related symptoms and complications until after menopause.

A person that has developed hemochromatosis may notice one or more of the following symptoms:

- joint pain
- fatigue, or feeling tired
- unexplained weight loss
- abnormal bronze or gray skin color
- abdominal pain
- loss of sex drive

Without treatment, iron may accumulate in the organs and cause complications, including

- cirrhosis, or scarring of liver tissue
- diabetes
- irregular heart rhythms or weakening of the heart muscle
- arthritis
- erectile dysfunction

The complication most often associated with hemochromatosis is liver damage. Iron buildup in the liver causes cirrhosis, which escalates the chance of developing cancer of the liver. For a number of people, complications may be the first sign of hemochromatosis. Conversely, not everyone with hemochromatosis will advance to complications.

Health care providers utilize medical and family history, a physical exam, and routine blood tests to diagnose hemochromatosis or other conditions that could cause similar symptoms or complications. If blood tests show higher-than-average levels of iron in the body, health care providers can order a special blood test that can detect two copies of the C282Y mutation to substantiate the diagnosis. If the mutation is not present, health care providers will search for other causes. Your doctor may perform a liver biopsy, a procedure that involves taking a piece of liver tissue for examination with a microscope for signs of damage or disease. The biopsy reveals how much iron has accumulated in the liver and whether the patient has injury to the liver.

Hemochromatosis is rare, and health care providers may not consider testing for this disease. Therefore, the disease is frequently not diagnosed or treated. The preliminary symptoms can be varied, inexplicit, and comparable to the symptoms of numerous other diseases. However, if diagnosed and treated before organ damage has ensued, a person can expect to live a normal, healthy life. Experts recommend testing for hemochromatosis in people who have symptoms, complications, or a family history of the disease.

The treatment for hemochromatosis is drawing blood. This process is called phlebotomy. Phlebotomy purges the body of extra iron. This treatment is simple, inexpensive, and safe.

Based on the severity of the iron overload, a patient may have phlebotomy to remove a pint of blood once or twice a week for several months to a year, and occasionally longer. Health care providers will test serum ferritin levels periodically to monitor iron levels. Once phlebotomy reduces serum ferritin levels to the preferred concentrations, patients may require maintenance phlebotomy treatment every few months.

Iron is a vital nutrient found in many foods. Healthy people generally absorb less than 10 percent of iron in the food they eat. Those with hemochromatosis absorb up to 30 percent of that iron. People with hemochromatosis can help avert an iron overload by:

- eating only modest amounts of iron-rich foods, such as red meat and organ meat
- avoiding supplements that contain iron
- avoiding supplements that contain vitamin C, which enhances iron absorption

Steps to help prevent liver damage include:

- limiting the amount of alcoholic beverages they drink since alcohol intensifies their chance of cirrhosis and liver cancer
- avoiding alcoholic beverages totally if they already have cirrhosis

If you or a family member has been diagnosed with hereditary hemochromatosis, it's crucial to learn everything you possibly can about this condition so that you can formulate knowledgeable decisions about your treatment and management of the disease.

Sarah Alberione Cast In 'The Nutcracker'

Sarah Alberione of Quincy is performing in Boston Ballet's production of Mikko Nissinen's "The Nutcracker" in the role of Party Girl.

Alberione has been a student at Boston Ballet School for over eight years. The Nutcracker opens Friday, Nov. 25 at the Boston Opera House with performances through New Year's Eve, Dec. 31.

This will be Sarah's third year performing in The Nutcracker. In previous roles, she was a Lamb and a Polichinelle. In Boston Ballet's most recent ballet, Sarah had a role as a dancing Flower in the Garden Scene of Ivan Liška's Le Corsaire (The Pirate).

"This has been a very busy few months of rehearsals and performances" says Sarah's mom, Oonagh Connolly. "Sarah absolutely loves her dancing though, and as busy as her schedule is, she copes with everything very well. At this level, all of the Boston Ballet students have acquired excellent time management skills, as well as being honors students in the academic world.

I cannot say enough about Boston Ballet and how it prepares young people, not just in becoming highly trained dancers, but in becoming model citizens in every respect."

Sarah, a sixth grade student at The Woodward School for Girls in Quincy, says she is looking forward to this year's production.

"I just love performing on stage, hanging out backstage with my dance friends and also getting to meet the company dancers. It's really cool," she said.

Alberione joins more than 220 other young Boston Ballet School students from around New England in Mikko Nissinen's The Nutcracker. Three different casts will take on various roles, such as toy soldiers, pages, reindeer, lambs, polichinelles, baby mice, and party children during Boston Ballet's 43 performances of The Nutcracker.

Tickets start at $35. For more information, visit bostonballet.org or call 617.695.6955.

Quincy Christmas Parade Sunday

said. "He is a true symbol of the spirit we try to carry every year with the Christmas Parade. I'm thrilled that he's going to be our grand marshal."

The parade will step off from the intersection of Hancock Street and Hannon Parkway and travel three miles to North Quincy High School, where an award's ceremony will be held at the parade's conclusion. While much of the parade will follow the traditional route up Hancock Street, it will detour onto Temple and Washington Streets adjacent to the United First Parish Church in Quincy Center.

Lorraine Rooney of Henry Street, a resident of Quincy for 85 years and longtime parade-goer, submitted the theme for this year's parade, "Traditions of Christmas." As the winner of the theme contest, Rooney will get to ride in an antique automobile during the parade. The Quincy Christmas Festival Committee received 38 suggestions for parade themes this year from two states and multiple South Shore communities.

Floatings participating in Sunday's parade include:

The Knights of Columbus, Quincy Catholic Academy, Christmas Carolers, North Quincy High, Quincy High, Stop & Shop, the Council on Aging van, a grand marshal float, and Quincy 400.

Bands set to participate in Sunday's parade include:

Boston Police Column of Pipes and Drum; New Bedford High School; Waltham American Legion Band; Immaculate Heart of Mary Band; Joseph Case Cardinals High School; David Prouty High School; Acton-Boxborough Regional High School; Somerset Berkley Regional High School; the combined Quincy/North Quincy High School band; Plymouth High School band; Boston Windjammers; New Magnolia Band; Douglas High School; and Worcester Power & Light.

Other participants in the parade include:

The Quincy Police and Fire Departments; the homecoming kings and queens of Quincy and North Quincy High Schools; a Boston police paddy wagon; UMass Boston police; Cambridge police; a contingent from the Norfolk County Sheriff Department; Hallamore Clydesdales; poster contest winners; McGruff the Crime Dog; Wally the Green Monster; assorted costume characters, including three from Star Wars; Mare Willow Horses; Allepo cars; Cycling Murrays; fire dancers; and numerous antique cars from the 1910s, '20s and 30's.

Toys for Tots and the Salvation Army will both be collecting donations as they march down the parade route.

Santa Arrives By Parachute Saturday

By SCOTT JACKSON

Santa Claus and his team of trusty elves will literally descend upon Quincy this Saturday as they parachute their way into the city.

Quincy's unique Christmas tradition continues this year as Santa and the elves land at Pageant Field, 1 Merrymount Parkway, at 12:30 p.m. Saturday. The rain date is the following Saturday, Dec. 3.

This year marks a major milestone for the all-volunteer team of skydivers who delight and enthrall thousands of onlookers who attend the event. Gerald Sprague, a Quincy native and the team organizer, said 2016 will be the 40th time the group has parachuted down into the city.

The group has had many members over the years. In recent years, Thomas LaRochelle, Richard Sentner, Bob Huber, Frank Silver, Mike Burns and Richard Southerland have been the core jumpers.

The first jumpers to land are dressed as elves, and they circle the field to build anticipation as everyone awaits Santa, the last to jump.

Guests waiting for Santa and elves to arrive will be entertained by costumed characters who will pose for pictures and hand out candy canes. The Defenders Brass will be playing a mix of Christmas music as they stroll through the crowd before the airdrop.

Dependable Cleaners Coat Collection Benefits Non-Profit

Dependable Cleaners is collecting coats to support Cradles to Crayons and its Gear Up for Winter Initiative.

Cradles to Crayons is a nonprofit organization that equips children from birth through age 12 living in homeless or low-income situations with the essential items they need to thrive – at home, at school, and at play, for its winter initiative.

Now through Dec. 31, 16 Dependable Cleaners locations will host in-store coat collections to support Cradles to Crayons and its Gear Up for Winter initiative. The program aims to provide families and children with warm winter items necessary for the dropping temperatures and harsh winter season. This year's program aims to assist 40,000 local children with winter coats, hats, gloves and other winter essentials this season. Dependable Cleaners customers can drop new or gently used coats at collection bins accessible at each location including three in Quincy: 624 Hancock St., 320 Quincy Ave. and 581 Adams St.

Knights Of Columbus Meat Raffle Dec. 2

The N.Q. Knights of Columbus meat raffle will be held Friday, Dec. 2 at the council hall, 5 Hollis Ave. North Quincy.

This month's raffle is sponsored by Register of Probate Patrick McDermott in conjunction with the Culinary Arts Program at Quincy High School which will be providing the food. Food is served at 6:30 p.m. and the raffle begins at 7 p.m. Proceeds benefit the K of C scholarship drive.

All are welcome.

Proposed Ordinance On Underground Economy Needs Changes

By SCOTT JACKSON

The architect of a proposed amendment to Quincy's zoning code meant to ensure construction companies comply with state and federal laws on taxes, wages and the environment said he will look to make changes to it after hearing from contractors, union officials and the city solicitor.

Ward 4 Brian Palmucci introduced the proposed amendment to the zoning code in March. Officials were able to weigh in on the proposal during the Nov. 16 meeting of the City Council's oversight committee, which Palmucci chairs. A standing-room-only crowd of more than 100 filled the Great Hall for the meeting; many of those present wore buttons or stickers declaring their support for the ordinance.

Palmucci's proposed ordinance would amend the zoning code's section on special permits by adding three sections meant to crack down on the so-called underground economy. The underground economy is a term used to describe the misclassification of workers, such as those on construction sites. Misclassification occurs when companies treat workers as independent contractors instead of employees, or pay them under the table.

Under Palmucci's proposed ordinance, any firm debarred or suspended from performing construction work by any federal, state or government authority would be prevented from working on projects with a special permit in the city. A firm that had been found in violation of any laws applicable to its contracting business – such licensing laws, tax laws, prompt payment laws, wage and hour laws, prevailing wage laws and environmental laws – would likewise be prohibited from working on a project that had received a special permit.

If any firm working on a project with a special permit were found in violation of those conditions, the city would be able to issue a stop work order for the entire job site until the issue was remedied.

At the tail end of the meeting, Palmucci said he would look to revise his initial proposal after hearing from contractors, union representatives and the city solicitor.

"I think we've got some work to do on this," he said. "Hopefully what we can do is go back to the drawing board a little bit, take the concerns and comments we heard tonight, rework something and bring it out at the full council meeting."

The two-hour meeting – the third this year the oversight committee has held regarding the underground economy – began with comments from Doug Morrison, the chief operations officer for Bridgewater-based Callahan Construction Managers.

Morrison said the company "wholeheartedly condemned the practice" of misclassifying workers, and would take steps to ensure it would not happen on projects in which the company is involved, adding that there is no benefit to a construction manager if a subcontractor does misclassify workers.

He said the company would like to work with the council to craft ordinances meant to crack down on the practice, but raised several concerns with Palmucci's proposal to amend the zoning code.

In one example, Morrison said the portion of the proposed zoning ordinance that would prevent a firm found in "violation of any law applicable to its contracting business" in the past three years from working on a project with a special permit was too vague, because the definition of "in violation" was not stated.

Morrison also said the possibility of work on a jobsite being completely suspended for a violation would make developers wary of bringing projects forward, and would negatively impact all workers on a jobsite – not just those working for the subcontractor found in violation. Instead, he suggested fines against the offending subcontractor.

"We would welcome some kind of fine system that would be enacted by the city directly against the offending subcontractors," Morrison said. "This process would help add teeth to the current legislation and help make subcontractors much more aware of the urgency of providing properly for their workers."

Several councillors, however, said the city should be able to hold general contractors and construction managers accountable.

"One gets the impression construction managers – and I'm not pointing fingers at anybody – but it seems as though they turn a blind eye to it, because it benefits them as much as it does the subcontractor," Councillor Joseph Finn said.

Councillor Nina Liang said the possibility of a suspension for violations would encourage everyone on site to be proactive.

"We put strong regulations in place, but what I feel is lacking right now is a collective effort from everyone onsite and offsite to do their part, because this is happening on a day-to-day basis," she said.

In response, Morrison said the ordinance should be changed to give some time to remedy violations, instead of going immediately "from zero to 100."

John Anderson, owner of Plumb House, a Milford-based general contractor that employs about 80 carpenters, said his company wants a level playing field. He recalled being on a jobsite in Braintree where a framing subcontractor offered to pay Plumb House employees $14 an hour in cash for 60 hours of work a week.

"At $14 an hour in cash, we're out of business," Anderson said. "If the city of Quincy could do something to level that out and set standards, I would welcome that."

When asked if construction managers should be held accountable if violations are found, Anderson said "someone has to be held accountable." He said a general contractor would typically know how much certain job types cost.

"We look at those bids and we know what framing work or siding work is worth," Anderson said. "If the number is too low, it's too low – end of story. There are no secrets."

Anderson did, however, say there should be an intermediate step in place before a complete shutdown on a project site is ordered.

"If this goes through and there is a violation, I don't think it should go to 100 miles an hour right out of the gate," he stated. "I think there should be a half-way step there, that's the only thing I would suggest, because even with people paying attention and focusing on that, things can get by anybody."

Shawn Nehiley, a representative for Ironworkers Local 7, said a subcontractor could show a construction manager proof of workers' compensation before signing the contract and then cancel the policy.

"I think you're putting a lot of legwork on to the [general contractor] and the [construction manager]," he said.

Nehiley was also concerned about the provision

Crane Library Children's Events, Activities In December

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane
Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library announces the following events and activities for children during the month of December.

Fall Session II Storytimes

Weekday morning storytimes continue through Friday, Dec. 16th. Storytimes are offered for children ages 4 months to 8 years old. Please check our website and online calendar for dates and locations

Cast Your Vote!

Remember voting for your favorite story book character continues through Dec. 15th. Each time you visit the library pick up a ticket at the Children's circulation desk and cast your vote for either your picture book or chapter book favorite. After all the votes are tallied we'll have a celebration for the chapter book winner on Friday, Jan. 20th and the picture book winner on Saturday, Jan. 21st.

Preschool Discovery @ Wollaston

Drop by the Wollaston Library with your preschooler any time between 10 and 11 a.m. on Thursday, Dec. 1st to do some fun simple science together. Activities, experiments and instructions will be provided for science you can do with your child.

This month learn about animals! Look at paw prints, sort some animals and find out what keeps animals warm in cold water!

This program does not require registration.

Music and Movement with Rubi

On Saturday, Dec. 3rd at 10 and 10:30 a.m. sing and dance with Rubi Lichauco! Rubi brings her popular preschool program to Quincy so put on your favorite dancing shoes and join us for this lively mix of music and movement for children ages 0-4 accompanied by an adult.

This program has become so popular there isn't room to move and dance as we would like so we have decided to split the group in two. No registration is required; when the 10 a.m session fills we will close the doors. Please spend some time in the children's room choosing books or playing with our early literacy activities while you wait for the 10:30 a.m. session. Thank you for your cooperation we really think 2 smaller groups will make this program more fun for everyone.

Homework Help

Students in grades 1-6 are invited to stop by the main Library children's room on Mondays and Wednesdays from 3 to 5 p.m through Dec. 14th to get assistance with their homework from high school tutors. Students must be able to communicate with tutors in English.

Science Saturday – Coding with Minecraft for ages 8-12

Children ages 8-12 are invited to join Thi Sarkis of the Rhode Island Computer Museum for a 2 hour workshop, Coding with Minecraft on Saturday, Dec. 10th from 11 a.m. to noon.

Learn how to summon lightning bolts with a bow and arrow or build giant rainbows in the Minecraft world with code! Spawn farm animals or monsters instantly and have fun "modding" your world! This workshop introduces coding concepts by showing you how to build or change (e.g. mod) the game using the Javascript or Python programming language. The set-up is easy for beginners, challenging for experienced gamers and fun for everyone!

Space is limited and registration is required and is limited to Quincy residents. Registration begins on Thursday Dec. 1st at 9 a.m. online at thomascranelibrary.org, by phone at 617-376-2411 or in person at the Main Library Children's Room.

This program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library

Book Clubs for Kids

Do you like to read? Would you like to talk to others about books? Then you will like our book discussion groups. Join us each month to discuss all kinds of books.

The Night Owls Book Club for children in grades 3 and 4 meets on the 2nd Thursday of each month. This month the club will meet on Dec. 10th at 7 p.m.

This month we will be discussing Upside- Down Magic by Sarah Mlymowski.

It's never easy when your magic goes wonky. Nory, Elliott, Andres, and Bax are just four of the students in Dunwiddle Magic School's Upside-Down Magic class. In their classroom, lessons are unconventional, students are unpredictable, and magic has a tendency to turn wonky at the worst possible moments.

Pick up your copy of the book in the Children's Room to read before the meeting. Any questions, call 617-376-2411 and ask to speak with Ms. Cronin.

The Phoenix Book Club for children in grades 5-8 meets on the second Tuesday of each month to discuss a variety of books. This month we will be meeting on Tuesday, Dec. 13th at 7 p.m., to avoid the election crowds.

This month we will be discussing Graphic Novels. Take a look through our graphic novel collection. You could pick part of a series, like Tintin. You could pick a single story, like Rapunzel's Revenge. We have graphic novel versions of text novels, like the Percy Jackson books or The Hobbit. We have manga and even nonfiction. So long as it's in graphic novel format, grab it, read it and come talk about it in December.

Harry Potter Book Club

Are you a Harry Potter fan? Have you read the books several times or are you just discovering Harry for the first time? Harry fans of all ages are invited to join us from January to July at 7:00 pm on the third Wednesday evening of each month at the Wollaston Branch Library as we discuss each Harry Potter book in turn. Beginning on Dec. 19th stop by the main library to pick up a copy Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone to read for our meeting on Jan. 18th.

Mother Goose & Little Bo-Peep

Join children's librarians Jane Miller and Gail Columbare on Thursday, Dec. 15th at 10 a.m. as they present Mother Goose and Little Bo-Peep: a Nursery Rhyme and Song Extravaganza. This is a fun-filled program of stories and songs for children ages 4 months to 3 years old accompanied by an adult.

No registration is required.

Saturday Storytime

Join Denise Shaver for a family storytime full of stories, songs, rhymes and more for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult on Saturday, Dec. 17th at 10 a.m. at the Main Library. No registration required. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Dungeons and Dragons Encounters

New and experienced players ages 10 and older are invited to join us on Tuesday, Dec. 20th at 7 p.m. in the Main Library Children's Room for this introduction to D&D 5th edition game play. Take on the role of a fantasy hero in this monthly Dungeons and Dragons game. We will help you customize an Adventurer's League D&D character you can use both in our monthly adventures and at other D&D Organized Play.

Your group of adventurers will start out at level one and take on the module from the 5th Edition D&D Starter Set. Unravel the mysteries of the Lost Mine of Phandelver and what monsters and treasures lie within!

SCHOOL VACATION WEEK EVENTS

Movie Matinee at North Quincy

Join us on Tuesday, Dec. 27th at 2 p.m. at the North Quincy branch Library for a showing of the new live action Jungle Book. In this reimagining of the classic collection of stories by Rudyard Kipling, visually stunning CGI to creates the community of animals surrounding Mowgli, a human boy adopted by a pack of wolves. The appearance of a villainous tiger named Shere Khan forces Mowgli's guardian, the panther Bagheera, to shepherd the child to safety in the "man-village." Along the way, the boy meets an affable, lazy bear named Baloo , as well as a snake with hypnotic powers and an orangutan who wants to harness the power of fire.

Rated PG Runtime 105 minutes

This program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library

Harry Potter Hogwarts Training Academy with Jungle Jim

Are you ready to become a wizard? Join Quincy favorite Jungle Jim on Wednesday, Dec. 28th at 2 p.m. for a fabulously funny visit to Hogwarts.

The Harry Potter Hogwarts Academy Training is a fully-interactive program that prepares participants to become wizards themselves! Professor Jungle-Flick teaches children how to perform their own magic, play some Quidditch and even learn Defense Against the Dark Arts!

You don't have to be familiar with the Harry Potter stories to have fun at this show. Recommended for children ages 4 through 10 accompanied by an adult.

This program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library

LEGO Building at Wollaston

Drop in on Thursday, Dec. 29th anytime from 10 a.m. – 4 p.m. for free-play LEGO building. Grab some LEGO bricks and build a boat, a spaceship, a double-decker couch - anything you want, then toss them back and try to make something else. LEGOs must be returned by the end of the program, sorry! Parents please note regular LEGO are intended for children ages 5 and older, DUPLO and other building toys will be available for younger children.

Children's Movie Matinee at the Main Library

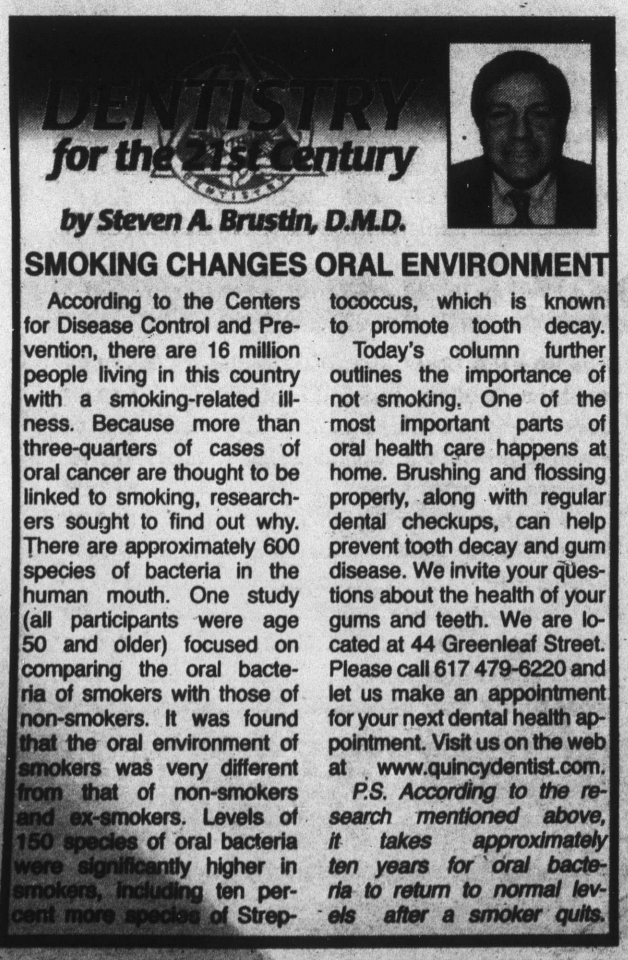
Join us at 10 a.m. on Friday, Dec. 30th at the Main Library for a showing of Finding Dory.

Lovable, amnesiac blue tang Dory decides to go off in search of her long-lost parents. With the help of young clown fish Nemo and his dad Marlin, Dory heads for California and the Monterey Marine Life Institute, evading predators along the way as she hopes to find a place she can call home.

Rated PG Runtime 103 minutes

Happy Noon Year's Eve!

Too young to stay awake until midnight? Join us in the Children's Room from 11:00 am to noon Saturday, Dec. 31st to celebrate 2017 a little early with a craft, stories, dancing and of course a countdown at noon.



SMOKING CHANGES ORAL ENVIRONMENT

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, there are 16 million people living in this country with a smoking-related illness. Because more than three-quarters of cases of oral cancer are thought to be linked to smoking, researchers sought to find out why. There are approximately 600 species of bacteria in the human mouth. One study (all participants were age 50 and older) focused on comparing the oral bacteria of smokers with those of non-smokers. It was found that the oral environment of smokers was very different from that of non-smokers and ex-smokers. Levels of 150 species of oral bacteria were significantly higher in smokers, including ten percent more species of Streptococcus, which is known to promote tooth decay.

Today's column further outlines the importance of not smoking. One of the most important parts of oral health care happens at home. Brushing and flossing properly, along with regular dental checkups, can help prevent tooth decay and gum disease. We invite your questions about the health of your gums and teeth. We are located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617 479-6220 and let us make an appointment for your next dental health appointment. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. According to the research mentioned above, it takes approximately ten years for oral bacteria to return to normal levels after a smoker quits.

Underground Economy Proposed Ordinance

that would prevent companies with violations in the past three years from working on projects that had received a special permit. He was concerned because his union has brought on board 20 to 30 subcontractors in recent years that were previously open shop and may have had violations, and could be barred from working on projects in Quincy under the ordinance.

Two other union officials spoke at the meeting – Amelia Phinney of the New England Council of Carpenters and Justin Desmond of the International Union of Painters and Allied Trades District Council 35.

"I commend the committee for taking on this important issue that affects us all as taxpayers," Phinney said. "I think proposal is an important step in the right direction. You as city councillors are taking an opportunity here to make a real and lasting change that has a positive impact on construction in Quincy. In doing so, you are setting a great example for other local communities."

"Union shops, open shops, if everyone could work together to end wage theft, it's only going to help support and the with the large amount of construction happening and permitted in the city of Quincy, this order will help to protect workers' wages and the city and state from losing much needed tax revenue," Desmond said.

"By eliminating misclassification, it puts all companies on an even playing field during the bidding process, giving honest contractors the opportunity to obtain projects that will create better working conditions for Quincy and Massachusetts workers."

City Solicitor Jim Timmins raised several concerns about the proposed ordinance. The state's zoning enabling act, he said, states the purpose of zoning is to regulate the use of land, building and structures and protect inhabitants of those buildings.

"The purpose of zoning law is to address issues relating to land, the buildings on the land, and the people who live in the buildings," Timmins said. "The problem here is, we are trying to protect the workers on the projects who construct these buildings, and I'm not certain that's a proper use of the zoning power."

Timmins said he was working with the office of state Attorney General Maura Healey to address the concern.

Salvation Army Community Leader Kettle Nov. 30, Dec. 7

Volunteers Ringing Bell Both Days 8 A.M. To 4 P.M. Outside Quincy City Hall

The 20th annual Community Leader Kettle to benefit The Salvation Army Quincy Corps will take place outside Quincy City Hall near 1305 Hancock St. Wednesday, Nov. 30 and Wednesday, Dec. 7.

More than 50 civic and city leaders will volunteer their time and ring the bell for The Salvation Army at the community leader kettle that was established 20 years ago by the late Henry W. Bosworth, Jr., founder and longtime publisher of The Quincy Sun.

Mr. Bosworth, who passed away in February 2009, coordinated the kettle for many years. He was a longtime member of the Quincy Salvation Army Advisory Board. For the last eight years, the kettle has been coordinated by Mr. Bosworth's son, Robert, who is now the publisher of The Quincy Sun and also a member of the Salvation Army Advisory Board.

To date, the kettle has raised $64,857 – including $1,600 last year – to benefit The Salvation Army and its mission of helping the needy during the holiday season and year-round. This includes toys and other holiday support for those in need, along with funding for food pantries, social services, and education programs.

"We see new people in need of The Salvation Army's services each day," said Captain Timothy Ross, Corps Officer of The Salvation Army Quincy Corps Community Center on Baxter Street in Quincy. "Many never imagined they would need our help.

"We are seeing families with two adults working who can't make ends meet," Ross continued. "Others don't have enough income to cover the rising cost of food and utilities. We are excited to get the red kettles back out there so that we can continue to help all those in need."

Here is the line-up of community leaders volunteering at the City Hall kettle:

75th Observance Of Pearl Harbor Dec. 4 At WWII Memorial

The City of Quincy's 75th observance of the Dec. 7th, 1941 surprise attack on the US Naval Base at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii will take place on Sunday, Dec. 4th at noon on the podium of the World War II Memorial at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The observance, which is sponsored by the Quincy Veterans Council, is being coordinated by Past Council Commander Lawrence M. Norton, who will also serve as Master of Ceremonies for the event.

Organizers said the observance is being held on Sunday, Dec. 4th this year, rather than the actual date of Dec. 7th, in the hopes that it will allow for a better turnout for the ceremonies on the weekend date than would otherwise be possible or likely on the mid-week date.

After the conclusion of the ceremonies, there will be some light refreshments back at the Morrisette Legion Post.

Guest speaker for this observance will be William "Guy" Ferris, a member of the Morrisette Post and the Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 294, whose parents witnessed that attack first-hand. In addition to the usual invitations that go out for this occasion invitations are also being sent out to as many remaining World War II veterans in the city as can be identified, in the hopes that they can attend, their physical conditions and weather permitting.

If there are any questions concerning this observance, call Quincy Veterans Services Director George Nicholson at 617-376-1192.

Quincy Historical Society Trip To Holiday Pops Dec. 15

Quincy Historical Society is offering a trip to Holiday Pops at Boston's Symphony Hall, with supper and transportation included, on Thursday, Dec. 15.

The Society has a block of seats in the center section of the second balcony, considered by many the best location in the hall to see and hear everything. The program will feature all the Pops' Holiday favorites, from traditional to contemporary, a visit by Santa Claus, a performance of "The Night Before Christmas," and perhaps a surprise or two.

The evening begins at 5:45 p.m. with a buffet supper at the Adams Academy, catered by Simply Good Catering, featuring soup and sandwiches, dessert, tea and coffee. At 6:45 p.m., a Brush Hill bus takes everyone to Symphony Hall for an 8 p.m. performance. The concert concludes at 10, and the bus will return everyone to the Adams Academy by approximately 10:30 p.m.

The price for the trip is $80 for Historical Society members and $85 for non-members. To register or for more information, call the Historical Society at 617-773-1144.

JOIN US to make a difference in the lives of others!

Please join the cause to provide warmth and comfort this year for those less fortunate. Coats will be distributed through 3 local organizations: Interfaith Social Services in Quincy; Weymouth Youth and Family Services in Weymouth; and Wellspring Multi-Service Center in Hull.

Supporters wishing to donate are asked to bring gently-used adult or children's coats to the lobby of the Keohane Funeral Home in Quincy at 785 Hancock Street.

The winter coat drive begins in October and continues through the end of November. Help us meet our goal to collect 250 coats this winter.

Quincy College Nursing Students Learn About Organ, Tissue Donation

QUINCY COLLEGE NURSING students recently heard a presentation about Organ and Tissue Donation from Matt Boger of the federally designated Organ Procurement Organization (OPO), New England Organ Bank, and heart recipient Ali Barton. Today there are over 121,000 people waiting for a life-saving organ transplant with over 5,000 on the waiting list in the New England region. Each state plays an important role in the organ and tissue donation process as the vast majority of people who register do so at their state RMV. To learn more about organ and tissue donation or to register as a donor please visit: www.DonateLifeNewEngland.org.

Quincy College Named Military Friendly School

For the sixth consecutive year, Quincy College has been named a 2017 Military Friendly School by Victory Media.

The Military Friendly® Schools designation is awarded to the top 15 percent of colleges, universities and trade schools in the country that are doing the most to embrace military students, and to dedicate resources to ensure their success in the classroom and after graduation.

Institutions earning the Military Friendly® School designation were evaluated using both public data sources and responses from Victory Media's proprietary survey. More than 1,700 schools participated in the 2017 survey; 1,273 were awarded with the designation. Ratings methodology, criteria, and weightings were determined by Victory Media with input from the Military Friendly® Advisory Council of independent leaders in the higher education and military recruitment community. Final ratings were determined by combining the institution's survey scores with the assessment of the institution's ability to meet thresholds for Student Retention, Graduation, Job Placement, Loan Repayment, Persistence (Degree Advancement or Transfer) and Loan Default rates for all students and, specifically, for student veterans.

Daniel Nichols, a Navy Reserve veteran and Chief Product Officer at Victory Media, said: "Our ability to apply a clear, consistent standard to the majority of colleges gives veterans a comprehensive view of which schools are striving to provide the best opportunities and conditions for our nation's student veterans. Military Friendly® helps military families make the best use of the Post-9/11 GI Bill and other federal benefits while allowing us to further our goal of assisting them in finding success in their chosen career fields."

Above and beyond the 2017 Military Friendly designation, Quincy College remains committed to continually improving the education experience provided to those students who have sacrificed in service to their country, said Chris Breton, Military and Veterans Services Specialist for Quincy College Military and Veterans Services Department in Quincy.

"The Military and Veteran's Services Office is honored to support our veterans and we are honored to be recognized by Victory Media for a sixth year in a row," Breton said. "We continually evaluate our programs and assess the needs of our students, providing one-on-one support. This past fall, we organized a campus wide 22-pushup event on both the Quincy and Plymouth campuses to engage not only our veteran students but our community as a whole to bring light to suicide awareness.

"Our mission for our veteran students is to make the transition and college experience as easy and comfortable as possible. We look forward to continuing to serve the Quincy College community of veterans in 2017 with honor and commitment they deserve," Breton added.

Quincy College offers veteran support on both the Quincy and Plymouth campuses. Students on the Plymouth Campus can schedule an appointment to meet with Karen Connick, Academic Services Specialist for Quincy College veteran and dependent support. Connick who started at Quincy College this Summer is a Colonel in the United State Army Reserve and is currently serving at Naval Station Newport in Rhode Island.

"It's been a pleasure to work at Quincy College and work with the Plymouth student population to not only continue to recognize and support their pursuit of higher education but continue to support and honor their service," Connick said. "One such way we continue to honor our veteran students and the community of veteran faculty and staff is to host Veteran Day luncheons, post Veteran student names in the hall way in the weeks leading up to Veterans Day, and also honor the community of South Shore veterans by hosting a Memorial Day event each year. We are committed to supporting the veteran community on campus. The Victory Media designation reflects what how we conduct ourselves on a daily basis."

Through the Quincy College Veterans Discount Program, veterans may enroll in either Liberal Arts or Professional Programs classes at a discounted rate. Veterans are eligible for this reduced rate regardless of the number of courses they take in a semester. The program is not funded by the state or federal government; therefore veterans who are eligible for education benefits through the VA may also receive the Quincy College discounted rate.

Quincy College advisors can help address the needs of veteran students and their dependents by reviewing both military and college transcripts, as well as CLEP and DANTES exam scores, for transfer credit according to American Council of Education (ACE) recommendations.

Veterans, veteran dependents, and active duty service members are able to use their federal education benefits at Quincy College including: Post 9/11 GI Bill, Montgomery GI Bill, Vocational Rehabilitation, My CAA, VA Work Study and Tuition Assistance at Quincy College.

20 New Apartments Planned In NQ

By SCOTT JACKSON

A developer's proposal to construct a 20-unit apartment building on Hancock Street in North Quincy was unveiled at a recent Planning Board meeting.

James Sullivan has proposed building the four-story building at 151 Hancock St. The site, located on the corner of Myrtle Street, includes 13,325-square feet of land and is located in a Business C zoning district. The site is now home to a single-family house with a detached garage as well as a commercial building.

The project was presented to the Planning Board Nov. 9. No vote was taken on the proposal that night, and the public hearing on the matter was continued to Dec. 14.

William Keener, an attorney for the developer, said the proposed building would improve one of the city's gateways.

"I think it's going to be an asset for that part of the city," he said. "It's going to make it a lot more pleasing to look at when you're driving by."

Tim Johnson, the project's architect, said each of the 20 apartments in the building would have two bedrooms and two bathrooms. The proposal also includes 30 parking spaces, which meets the requirement for residential developments in a Business C area. Twenty-nine of those spaces would be included in a ground level garage with entrances on both Hancock and Myrtle Streets.

Johnson said the applicant's landscape architect is working with the Quincy Park Department on plantings that will go outside the building.

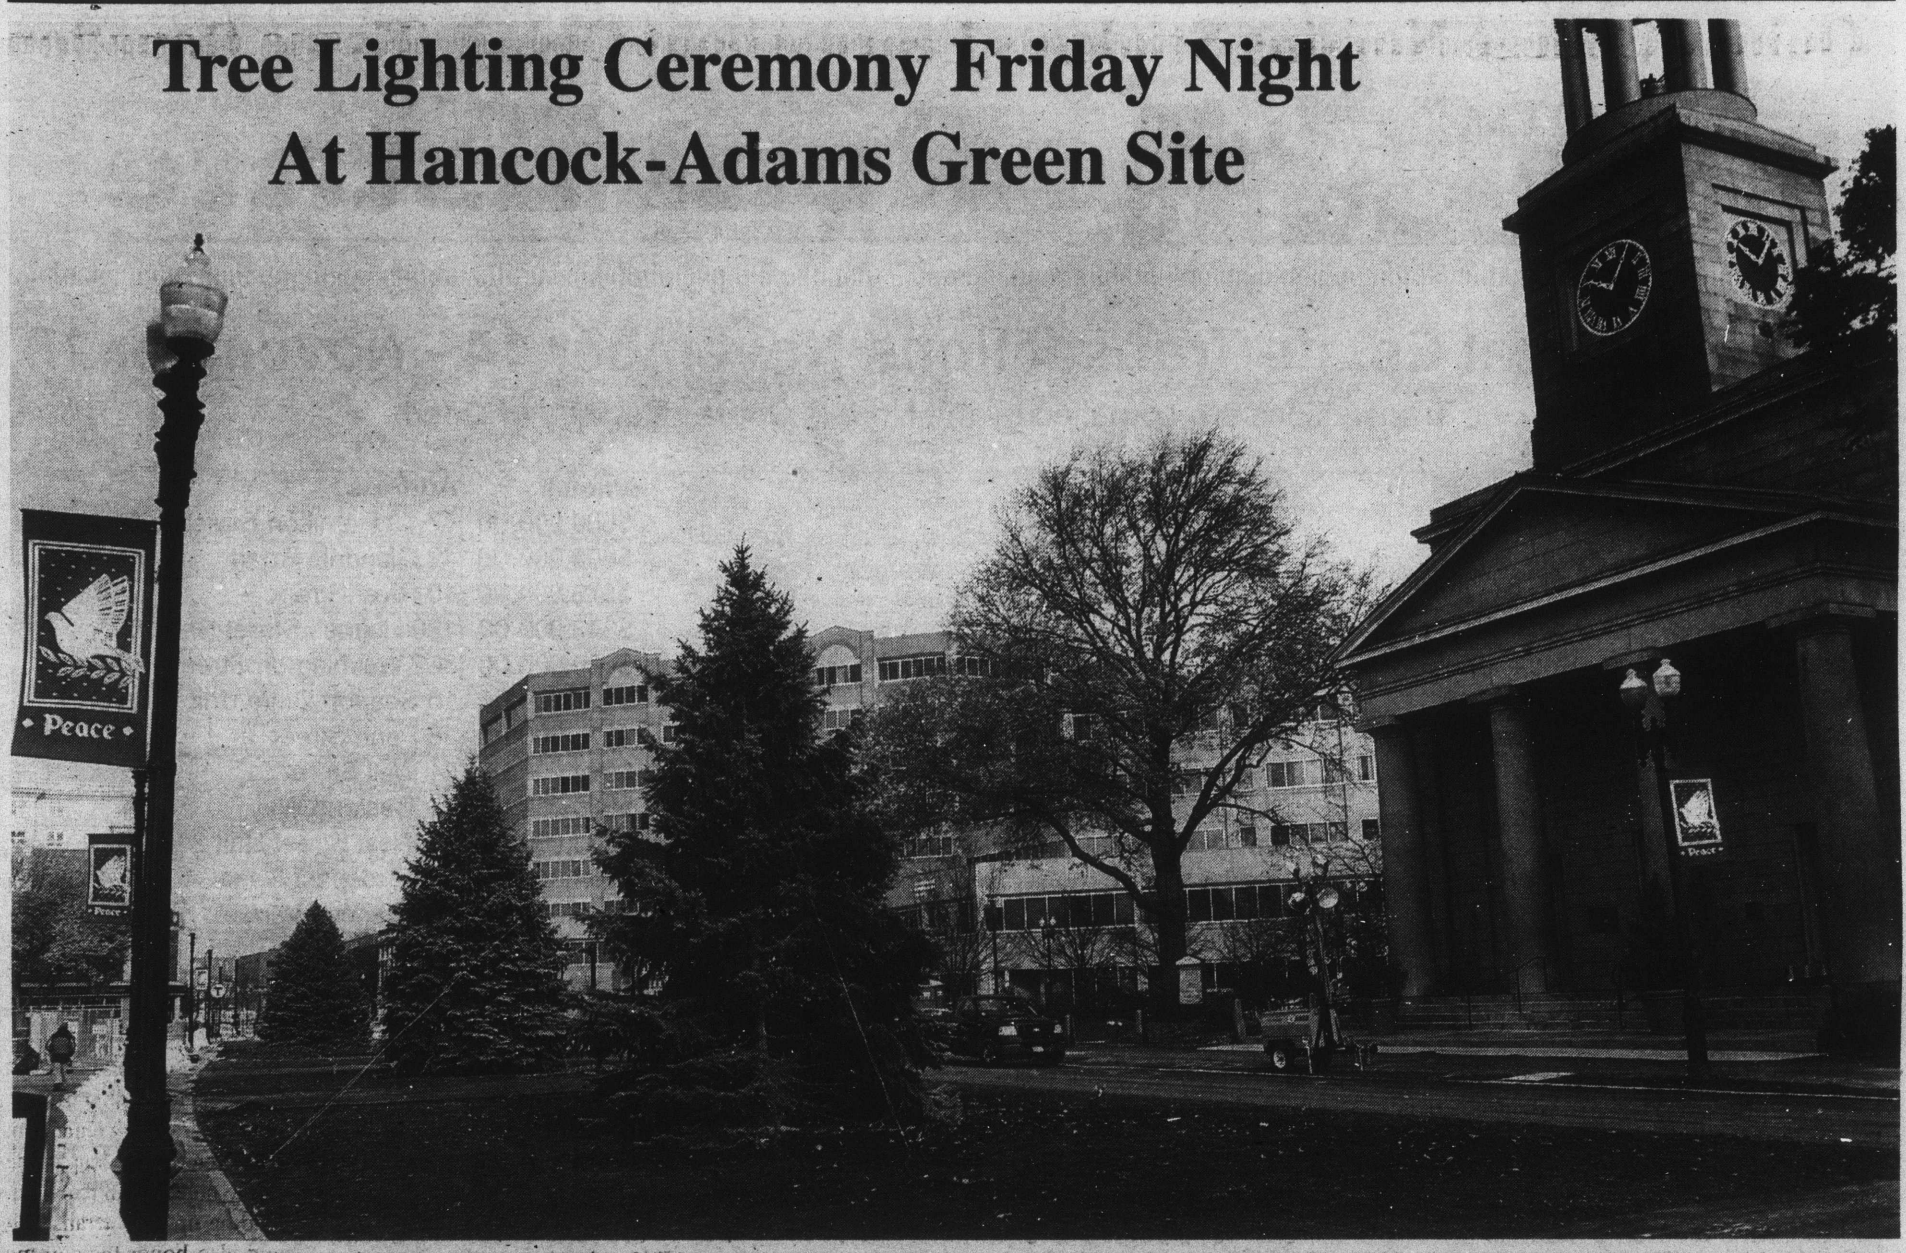
Mike Joyce, a civil engineer, said there is no stormwater system currently in place. If the new building were constructed, he stated, it would not create additional runoff; water that falls on the roof would be directed into a leeching system, and catch basins would be used to control surface runoff.

Sidewalks around the building would be reconstructed, including new handicapped ramps.

Johnson said a traffic study undertaken by John Gillon, formerly a traffic engineer for the city, found the proposal would create "no noticeable increase in delay" along Hancock Street.

The project site is within a half mile of the North Quincy MBTA station, Keener added, and the applicant anticipates many residents of the proposed building using the T to commute to work.

Tree Lighting Ceremony Friday Night At Hancock-Adams Green Site



HANCOCK - ADAMS GREEN – located between City Hall and the United First Parish Church in Quincy Center – is the location for the tree-lighting ceremony that kicks off at 5 p.m. Friday. Mayor Thomas Koch will light four Christmas trees – the three pictured here in the now closed portion of Hancock Street and a fourth near the granite gazing ball – beginning at 6:15 p.m. Two of the trees were donated – one by Robert Adams of Filbert Street and the other by a Ridgewood Lane resident. The other two trees came from Mount Wollaston Cemetery and City Hall plaza. Bogan Tree Services, based on Federal Avenue, volunteered to cut down the trees Saturday.

Allure Spa Participating In 'Small Business Saturday'

Sandra Ishmael, Allure Spa president and owner, invites the local community to celebrate "Small Business Saturday" on Nov. 26th. Ishmael and Allure team are proud of their 23 years in business.

Ishmael contributes the spa's success by listening to the client's needs over the years. The spa owner has built a sanctuary of comfort and relaxation. She also believes in adding value to all services while keeping the prices competitive and affordable. On Thursdays, Allure Spa offers a 10 percent discount to those who are eligible for a senior discount.

"Our mission is to simply care for others," Ishmael said. "This idea has been validated by witnessing many generations including second and third generations of family members that come in to Allure. I am thankful and proud for the wonderful team of women who also share in the mission for caring."

Over the past 23 years, Allure Spa has introduced many positive changes in the business. "To keep up the with evolving spa industry and local competition, we have always grown by taking risks in offering the newest services that emerge in our field," Ishmael, said. This full-service salon and spa has transitioned its spa to a medical spa in the past few years; specializing in facial tightening and firming, skin tag removal, cellulite reduction, laser hair removal, and medical peels.

Ishmael said she and her team provide a unique experience to her clients by offering such medical services in the sanctuary of Allure Med Spa; a tranquility room which offers comfort, warmth and an available cup of relaxation tea.

"Our medical services we offer are the leaders in aesthetic technologies and our clients deserve to be treated in a most inviting atmosphere"Ishmael said.

The community is welcome to visit Allure Spa on Saturday, Nov. 26 on "Small Business Saturday" between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Allure Spa is offering a complimentary $25 gift card when purchasing a value of $200 in gift cards or more (excluding online gift card purchases). They are also offering a 10 percent discount for all retail items including haircare, skincare, makeup and our retail clothing boutique line. Mixed Signals Seen With Norfolk County Real Estate In October

Register Of Deeds William O'Donnell Activity Report

Mixed signals were the theme for Norfolk County real estate activity in the month of October 2016.

"The data collected shows seemingly contradictory figures when it comes to both real estate sales and lending activity," said Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell. "While sales showed a slight year-over-year decrease of 4 percent, the average sale price of residential and commercial property during October was $756,035, a 27 percent increase. Additionally total sales volume, again for both residential and commercial property, was $688 million; it marked a 14 percent increase compared to October 2015."

Mortgage activity also showed some mixed signals.

"The number of mortgages recorded during the month of October was 3,120, a 23 percent increase compared to the previous year. However, total mortgage financing for the month was $2 billion, compared to $3.4 the previous year. The drop-off is largely attributable to a $811 million property financed in Quincy and Braintree in October 2015," O'Donnell said.

The same mixed signals were also seen in foreclosure activity. The bad news was the increase in the number of foreclosure deeds recorded. A total of 34 foreclosure deeds were recorded in October compared to 14 recorded during the same time in 2015.

The good news was a reduction in the number of Notice to Foreclose Mortgage recordings, the first step in the foreclosure process. Seventy-seven Notice to Foreclose Mortgages were filed in October compared to 101 filed in October 2015.

"While I am guardedly optimistic the worst of the foreclosure activity is behind us," O'Donnell said, "these numbers do tell us that some of our neighbors continue to face economic hardship. My office is committed to partnering with Quincy Community Action Programs at (508) 598-0950 to ensure homeowners who have received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage from a lender are getting the help they need. Another option is to call the Massachusetts Attorney General's HomeCorps program at (617) 573-5333."

The number of Homesteads recorded, an important consumer tool available to homeowners, was essentially flat. A total of 1,010 Homesteads were filed last month, compared to 1,016 during the previous October.

"A Homestead provides limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000," O'Donnell noted.

In conclusion, O'Donnell said:

"The real estate sales

No Vote Yet On Bridge St. Residential Building Proposal

By SCOTT JACKSON

The proponent behind a proposed 60-unit residential building in Quincy Center agreed to lop off part of the structure's top floor to address concerns about the view from the Adams National Historical Park, but it will be at least another month before the Planning Board signs off on the plan.

Boston Property Development has proposed tearing down a pair of houses at 23 and 31 Bridge Street to make way for the new five-story building. The developer – based on nearby Greenleaf Street – is also the firm building the 53-unit residential building at neighboring 999 Hancock St., formerly home to Temple Beth El.

Boston Property Development presented revised plans for the Bridge Street project at the Planning Board's Nov. 9 meeting. Ed Fleming, an attorney for the proponent, said the developers had met several times with Marianne Peak, the superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park who had voiced concern during an August Planning Board meeting about the impact the building would have on the view from Peacefield.

Dartagnan Brown, the project architect, said the proponents reviewed several different building designs meant to allay those concerns; in one iteration, most of the wing on the side facing Newport Avenue and Peacefield was removed.

Ultimately the applicants decided to remove most of the building's top floor on the wing facing Peacefield and set back the rest of that side 10 feet, Brown said; in total, the changes to the top floor would remove 3,600 square feet from the building.

The number of units would remain at 60 as originally proposed, the architect stated, and the developer was working through the layout of the building to fit in all of them.

To offset the loss of the square footage, Brown said the number of parking spaces included in the project would be reduced from 98 as initially proposed to 70, plus another 10 available on property the developer owns across the street. The reduction in parking is because the developer would remove a portion of garage located under the building.

Fleming said the trees that separate the Bridge Street parcel from the adjacent MBTA tracks would mostly block out the view of building during the spring and summer.

"During the season the National Park Service is primarily in operation – during the spring and summer seasons – that will be grown in and shade a majority of that building," he said.

Additionally, the developers have removed proposed signage that would have been installed on the top floor of the building facing Newport Avenue.

Peak, during the Nov. 10 meeting, said she was appreciative of the work done by Boston Property Development to address her concerns but said it remains a work in progress. Peak suggested the developer consider moving the proposed building closer to the building at 999 Hancock St., known as Triple 9, and further from the historical park.

"What about moving the building more toward Triple 9 so that you're moving it away from the historic site so that it's more dense in that area?" Peak said. "You'd have more green space on the historic site side and more building on the Triple 9 side where it's built and developed anyway. I don't know if it's an option, but you've got that extra space there to move it a little further back."

"We know it's important for Boston Property to advertise their property is overlooking the Adams National Historical Park…that's a plus for them, it's just not so much of a plus for us to be looking at them," Peak added. "The apartments are still going to sell if they were pushed back a little bit and they didn't have such a grand view."

Coleman Barry, the Planning Board's vice chairman, said he would "defer greatly" to the National Park Service when it is time for a vote on the proposal.

"I advise the applicant to work with them outside the confines of this meeting and make sure that when your proposal is ready to go forward to us again, that there is alignment," Barry said. "That could weigh heavily on my vote to approve this project."

The Planning Board hearing on the application was continued to Dec. 14. Fleming said an independent peer review of the proposal, which includes issues such as traffic and stormwater runoff, was still underway and the applicant was working to address those items.

Plans For FedEx Building In NQ Shelved For Now

By SCOTT JACKSON

The firm hoping to open a North Quincy ground distribution center for FedEx has withdrawn the proposal, but is likely to resubmit a revised plan in the future.

Scannell Properties had proposed renovating a Boston Scientific warehouse at 500 Commander Shea Boulevard, which would have then been leased to FedEx. The courier company would have used the site as a ground distribution center.

The Planning Board allowed the applicant to withdraw its proposal to renovate the warehouse without prejudice during its Nov. 9 meeting.

Board members in September advised the applicant to be ready to present the plans at the Nov. 9 meeting after granting a fourth continuance – the first public hearing on the plan had been slated for this January – or seek a withdrawal without prejudice. If not, board members said they might reject the plan with prejudice, barring a new application for two years.

Robert Harnais, attorney for the developer, sought the withdrawal without prejudice in a letter to the board. He said FedEx and Boston Scientific were working on improvements to Commander Shea Boulevard, and would submit a new proposal in the future.

"Presently Federal Express is working with Boston Scientific and the city of Quincy to help improve Commander Shea Boulevard. It is Federal Express' hope to be able to resubmit their application with improvements to Commander Shea Boulevard in the near future," Harnais said in the letter. "We look forward to returning to the board at a later date."

Several residents living near the proposed distribution center urged the board to reject the proposal with prejudice because of the number of continuances previously granted. They said the plan would only add to traffic woes in the area.

"We've been told FedEx has a right to develop," Dennis Sullivan, a resident of 90 Quincy Shore Drive, said. "I have a right to leave my front door open, but that does not mean it's a good idea, and neither is the FedEx idea."

Coleman Barry, the Planning Board's vice chairman, said he appreciated input from the community, but previous developers had not been penalized for seeking several continuances before asking for a withdrawal without prejudice.

Robert Stevens, a planner with the Quincy Planning Department, said there is no limit on the number of continuances an applicant can receive or a time limit.

The Planning Board on Nov. 9 also gave a positive recommendation to a proposal for a Housing Development Zone on East Howard Street in Quincy Point. City Council approval for the new zone is required.

The new zone is meant to incentivize the construction of a 140-unit apartment building at 116 E. Howard St., now home to a vacant brick office building. The Planning Board granted developers permission for the project in April 2015; those developers later sold the rights to NeighborWorks Southern Mass., a non-profit.

NeighborWorks Executive Director Robert Corley said 20 percent of units in the new building would be leased at market rate, 60 percent would be for workforce housing, and the remaining 20 percent for affordable housing.

Massachusetts allows its 26 gateway cities, including Quincy, to designate Housing Development Zones. Quincy is the only one without such a zone, Corley said.

Developers building in the new zones can receive a local tax exemption and are eligible for a state tax credit.

The Planning Board on Nov. 9 also:

Approved a request to build four townhouse condominiums at 97 Atlantic St. in North Quincy. Eight parking spaces are included in the project.

Approved subdivision plan for 12R and 29 Hoover Ave. The property, near the Braintree line, will be split into four plots for single-family houses.

Veterans Island Annual Tree Lighting Dec. 3

The Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 294, Morrisette Legion Post, will host its annual Tree Lighting Ceremony at Flags for Veterans Island, School and Pleasant Streets, Quincy, on Saturday, Dec. 3 at 6 p.m.

Santa will be there with candy canes and hot chocolate for the children.

The Sons will also add two names to the Tree of Honor: Henry W. Bosworth, Jr., a U.S. Navy veteran of World War II; and his brother, Richard Bosworth, also a Navy veteran of World War II and the Korean War. The lighting ceremony is in memory of the Bosworth brothers who grew up in Quincy Point. Henry passed away in February 2009; Richard passed away Oct. 9 of this year.

The public is welcome to attend the ceremony.

Last Saturday, a group of volunteers took down the 400 flags that decorate Flags for Veterans Island. Volunteers included Quincy firefighters, NQHS Air Force Junior ROTC students, Troop 6 Scouts from Houghs Neck and others. The flags will be placed on the island again next year prior to Memorial Day.

activity experienced in Norfolk County during the month of October clearly shows a tremendous amount of competition for a limited number of properties available. Keys for a healthy real estate market going forward will be the level of available inventory and whether there will be a potential rate increase by the Federal Reserve. My office will be monitoring these issues very closely."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Tuesday, Nov. 15, at approximately 2:37 p.m., Officers Dan Parisi, with his K-9 partner and Officer Michael Eddy were dispatched to a Federal Avenue residence for a breaking and entering call in progress. Moments later, the officers arrived on scene and surrounded the house awaiting additional units to respond.

Communications informed the officers that the male suspect was wearing a green shirt and gray pants. As Officer Eddy checked the front of the building, he heard Officer Parisi yell out, "Show me your hands" repeatedly. Officer Eddy ran to Officer Parisi's location and assisted in detaining a male standing between the two houses.

The male inquired, "What is going on?" When asked if he was with anyone, the suspect said he was alone. Officer Parisi placed the suspect, who was wearing a green t-shirt and gray sweatpants, in handcuffs and advised him that he was being detained pending further investigation.

Sergeant Stephen Igo arrived on scene and joined Officer Eddy as he interviewed the caller, who was crying and said she was scared. She said she is the care-taker for a resident in the building and was sitting at the kitchen table doing school work when she heard banging on the window next to her. She looked out and saw the suspect trying to open the window. She ran to the back door and went outside to get a better look and saw the male suspect hiding behind the bulkhead door. She said she screamed and ran back in the house.

When Officer Parisi first saw the male, he was standing next to the rear stairs, adjacent to the bulkhead, which provided a hiding spot. Officer Parisi asked the caller if she could identify the suspect if she saw him again and she said she could. Officer Paul Matthews, who arrived to assist, brought the suspect out of the cruiser and as soon as the caller saw the suspect, she said, "That's him, that's definitely him."

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Jim Whedbee, who also arrived to assist, noticed two distinct hand prints on the window that the suspect tried to open. At this time, it started raining heavily and the evidence could not be collected. The screen was lying on the ground but the caller said it was attached to the window earlier. The suspect, a 39-year-old Whitinsville resident, was transported to the station and booked on the charge of breaking and entering in the daytime with intent to commit a felony. While being booked, the suspect experienced a psychological episode and was transported to Quincy Medical Center for evaluation.

Nice Work!

In this case, the caller provided excellent information to the Communications operator who in turn forwarded it to responding officers. The caller put herself at risk by opening a door to determine where the suspect was. She was in a secure home and the police were responding and by opening a door she put herself and the person she was caring for in harm. Another option would have been to escape out the front door to the safety of another home as she awaited the arrival of Police Officers.

A NEW SCAM: On Saturday, Nov. 5, Officer James Goldrick investigated a larceny of a cellphone from a residence. The officer spoke to the victim who said that she set up a meeting at her home to sell her Apple iPhone 6S for $400 to an unknown person. She said that she used an app called "I OFFER" and that the transaction and all communication was done through this app, which means that she did not have any contact information on the suspect.

The victim stated that the suspect arrived at her house and handed her four $100 bills and she gave the suspect the phone. The suspect immediately fled towards Sumner Street, which concerned the victim, so she examined the four bills and realized that they were counterfeit.

How did she know?

The four bills all had the same serial number (JB00000000T) and read, "it's not the money, it's a joke" marked on them. There were other markings on the bill that indicated they are fake; "SUVENIR OF AMERICA" and "PRICOL OF AMERICA." Prior to the sale, the victim scrubbed all her information from the phone and disconnected it from the cloud. As a result, she did not believe that the phone could be traced.

Inviting a stranger into your home, especially if you are alone is very risky not just to property loss but also for your personal safety. Selling an item to a stranger is also risky.

If you are intent on making the sale, consider bringing a friend and go to a public place, ideally with a camera system in place. The parking lot or lobby of the Quincy Police Station would be a safer place to meet and if the stranger balks at this, then it should be a clear indication of potential problems.

NEW QUINCY FIRE Lt. Robert Laracy is all smiles as his son, Bobby, pins him at a City Hall ceremony Nov. 15. Laracy has been a Quincy firefighter since August 1996.

Robert Laracy Promoted To Quincy Fire Lieutenant

By SCOTT JACKSON

Robert Laracy, a Quincy firefighter for more than 20 years, was promoted to the rank of lieutenant as family members, friends and fellow members of the department looked on recently at City Hall.

City Clerk Nicole Crispo swore Laracy in Nov. 15 following a brief ceremony in the Great Hall of the James R. McIntyre Government Center. Laracy's 11-year-old son, Bobby, had the honor of pinning his father with his lieutenant's badge.

Laracy, 47, joined the Quincy Fire Department in August 1996. A native of Quincy, Laracy said it is privilege to make lieutenant.

"It means a lot to me as someone who was born and raised in Quincy," he said. "To be able to continue to work with and serve the residents is a privilege."

Laracy's father, Dick, retired from the Quincy Police Department 19 years ago after a 37-year career. Dick Laracy spent his final 11 years with the police as the department's liquor inspector, and retired as a sergeant detective.

Mayor Thomas Koch said Laracy studied hard and worked hard, and now an opening was available for him.

"We're happy for you and know you're respected in the department – obviously – your colleagues are here to join you and wish you well," the mayor said.

"You come from a family of public servants. It's great to see your dad here. He served many, many years with our police department, very dedicated and he looks great – retirement agrees with you."

Fire Chief Joseph Barron noted a number of fellow firefighters, including department and union leadership, were present for Laracy's promotion, calling it "a testament to his good job that he's done and the support he has from the guys in the department."

"Bob has done a great job. I know he is a hazardous materials technician; he's put a lot of time into that process," Barron said. "I spoke with him. I know he's well prepared to take on this responsibility.

"It's a great day for Bob and a great day for his family. There is a lot to celebrate. Thank you all for coming."

Barron said Laracy would be assigned to Fire Department headquarters initially. Laracy was promoted following the late October retirement of Lt. Gerard Ceurvels.

Barron does not anticipate any more promotions this fiscal year, though the department may be hiring additional firefighters. The department has 41 lieutenants with Laracy's promotion.

Creedon Family Field, Other Dedications At New NQHS Athletic Facility

Over 500 Attend Ceremony, Celebrate Recipients, Contributions To Community

CREEDON FIELD DEDICATED – Erin (Creedon) Perkins, daughter of former Quincy Public Schools Supt. Eugene Creedon, accepts a plaque on behalf of her family from Supt. Dr. Rick DeCristofaro (left) and Mayor Thomas Koch (right) after the new North Quincy High School athletic field and facility was dedicated to the Creedon family at a ceremony Saturday. The concession stand, three flag poles and four light towers at the new facility were also dedicated to NQHS alumni, veterans and pillars of the North Quincy community at the ceremony attended by 500 people.

The six Creedon brothers grew up on Kendall Street and played baseball and football in a field across from their home. Decades later, what was a swampy field, has been transformed into a modern athletic facility in back of North Quincy High School on Hunt Street and named for the family of educators, firefighters and veterans.

More than 500 residents along with city and state officials joined families and friends to rename Teel Field to Creedon Field Saturday. In addition to the field dedication, a concession stand, three flagpoles and four light towers were dedicated to several individuals who, like the Creedon family, left their mark on the North Quincy neighborhood. The Creedon family and the individuals honored include North Quincy High School alumni, community leaders and veterans.

Mayor Thomas Koch welcomed the gathering.

"This is a great day for our city," he said. "It's an honor and privilege to welcome you here."

Ward 6 Councillor Bill Harris said one of his first votes on the city council was MARY PRATT (center), 97 years young and a 1936 graduate of North Quincy High School, holds her plaque as a pillar of the North Quincy community after one of the four light towers at Creedon Field at North Quincy High School was dedicated to her during last Saturday's field dedication. With her are Mayor Thomas Koch (left) and good friend Ginny Trainor, Class of 1972. Pratt played professional baseball in the all-female league during the 1940s and inspired one of the leading roles in the movie "A League of Their Own." She also hurled a no-hitter during her playing days.

DR. ALLAN YACUBIAN, NQHS Class of 1958, who inspired the caricature that created the North Quincy High School mascot "The Yakoo," receives a plaque from close friend Frank Santoro, a 1967 graduate of NQHS and retired Quincy High School principal. The concession building at Creedon Field, to be built and named "Yakoo's," was dedicated in honor of Dr. Yacubian and his late brother, Arthur Yacubian.

to approve the final funding phase for the North Quincy field project.

"I couldn't have been prouder to cast that vote," Harris said. "This beautiful facility will serve the neighborhood and so many future generations of our young people.".

The former Teel Field underwent a $12 million renovation over the past several months as part of an expansion of the North Quincy High School campus. The new facility includes a football/soccer field with a synthetic turf, 600-seat bleachers, a concession stand, 130-car parking lot with a student drop off, a sound system, scoreboard and restrooms. It will be used by both North Quincy athletes and youth leagues.

The field was dedicated in honor of the Creedon family, including the late brothers, Eugene and Lawrence Creedon, both of

Results From The 83 Games

Entering Thursday's 84th annual football game between the Quincy Presidents and the North Quincy Red Raiders, Quincy High School holds the edge with a 47-31-5 series record.

Last year, the Presidents defeated the Red Raiders 33-20 for their fourth straight victory.

North Quincy had won the previous three contests from 2009 to 2011 after Quincy reeled off 10 victories in a row (1999-2008).

The contests in 1934, 1937, 1940 and 1983 were scoreless affairs, while the 55th meeting in 1987 ended in a 14-14 stalemate.

The series was last deadlocked at 7-7-3 going into the 1950 game.

Burke To Attend 73rd Consecutive Game

Quincy attorney George Burke plans to attend his 73rd straight Quincy High School - North Quincy High School Thanksgiving Day football game Thursday.

Burke played in the 1947 Quincy-North game - 69 years ago.

Burke is a member of the QHS Football, Baseball and Basketball Halls of Fame.

Burke gave $100,000 to the new QHS for the George G. Burke Fiftness Center to be built. He is also in partnership with Quincy Public Schools and has donated $50,000.

Atty. Burke and Sandra Burke have given $171,000 in scholarships for QHS and NQHS students to attend Atty. Burke's alma mater, the University of Massachusetts.

NQ Seeks To End Win Drought; Quincy Aims For 5th Straight Victory

By BILL GRIFFIN

It matters.

North Quincy is 1-9 and Quincy is 0-10 as the two teams prepare to meet in the 84th edition of the battle for the city championship Thanksgiving morning at 10 a.m. at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

An outsider might glance at the records and think that they surely diminish the meaning of the game. That would be wrong.

This is a rivalry within a city, a rivalry of neighborhoods, a rivalry between kids who have played football with and against each other since they were smaller than the pads they wore on their shoulders. It is a rivalry which will make its way through their future and touch their friendships, their families and their memories.

It is especially meaningful to North. Quincy has won the last four and 14 of the last 17. The seniors on last year's North team went four years, all their high school years, without beating Quincy. This year's seniors saw how tough it was on them, and they do not want to experience the same feeling Thursday morning.

It matters.

"Our kids saw seniors last year, and they want to end the drought. They want to bring the trophy back to the north side of the city. It means a lot to them," said North Quincy Head Coach Mark Nutley.

"This rivalry never goes away. I was out to dinner recently. The hostess sat us at our table. I looked up and there was a picture on the wall of coach (Bill) Reardon being doused with gatorade after Quincy beat us. I took a picture and sent it to my captains. They brought it to practice the next day. I think we're ready to play."

Nutley feels the team that establishes the run will have the advantage. North brings weapons. The first is the offensive line of Ryan Manning, Alex Pham, Devin Ganno, Mike Oldham, Mark Monahan and Jeff Sullivan which has good size and a year's experience playing together

"We're young, and we've had growing pains. But if I had to pick one area where we've improved the most over the year, it would be the offensive line," said Nutley.

Tickets On Sale For Thanksgiving Day Game

The Quincy High School and North Quincy High School Athletic Departments will be selling advanced tickets to the Thanksgiving Day Game until Wednesday, Nov. 23 at 1 p.m.

Tickets will be $5 in advance and sold out of the athletic office at the city's middle and high schools.

Tickets on the day of the game will be $5 for high school students and seniors and $10 for adults.

North Quincy Perfect Seasons In 1966, 1992

North Quincy has twice entered the Thanksgiving Day game with a perfect season on the line: 1966 and 1992.

Ken McPhee had a role in both. On the 1966 squad, he was a starting guard. He was the head coach of the 1992 team.

The 1966 team, coached by Carl Leone, had a 9-0 record, won the Greater Boston League title, shared the Class A crown with Arlington and shut out Quincy, 8-0.

The 1992 team had an 11-0 record, won the Old Colony League title, beat Arlington in the Div. 1B Super Bowl and shut out Quincy, 20-0.

1970 Quincy Team Undefeated

Quincy's 1970 team, coached by Hank Conroy, had a spotless 9-0 record.

The Presidents defeated North Quincy that year, 16-6, and won the Greater Boston League title.

TAKING A BAD BOUNCE

Health officials are warning children and their parents of the potential dangers that trampolines pose. During one six-month period, 40 children (55 percent of whom were girls) sustained injuries that required medical treatment. Most of the injuries occurred as a result of failed landings following simple jumps, attempts at somersaults/flips, or landing awkwardly on something on the trampoline (such as the protective padding designed to prevent falls through the spring mechanisms). In other cases, injuries resulted from children of different sizes using the trampoline at the same time. In these circumstances, the higher energy from the larger bouncer was transferred to the smaller bouncer, which resulted in a mistimed landing or projection to an unexpected height or distance.

This week's column is dedicated to providing some information as to why a trampoline may not always be the safest choice for children. However, a good choice for all ages is chiropractic care - it works, it's safe, and it saves time and money. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we treat the causes of physical problems rather than just the symptoms. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We're currently accepting new patients and invite you to call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. More than half of the trampoline injuries sustained by young children in the study mentioned above caused bruising or sprains (ankles), while a third of the injuries resulted in fractures (elbows and ankles).

84TH CITY FOOTBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

North Quincy Red Raiders vs. Quincy Presidents

Running Game Could Be The X-Factor

By BILL GRIFFIN

There has been a promising sign, an improvement for Quincy in an area which frequently decides football games on Thanksgiving.

The Presidents have had a 100-yard rusher in each of their last three games. Coach Bill Reardon loves to run the ball. Teams that run the ball usually enjoy their Thanksgiving. It can be wet, sloppy, windy or frigid. Running the ball always works. Running the ball is like the U.S. mail. Through rain, sleet, snow, and cold of night...

Quincy (0-10) hopes to continue its successful ground game and supplement it with an improving, young defense when the Presidents face North Quincy (1-9) in the 84th renewal of the ancient rivalry at Veterans' Memorial Stadium Thursday morning at 10 a.m.

Quincy leads the series 47-31-5, including last year's 33-20 victory behind Jahvae Handsom-Fields who set a Thanksgiving Day record for rushing with 296 yards on the ground.

"We've had two different backs go over 100 yards in our last three games," said Reardon. "We're very young, but we've done a good job improving on our blocking assignments. We've opened some holes and the backs have run well."

Against Sandwich, junior Shorn Hawthorne had 118 yards in 11 carries. After returning a punt for a touchdown in the following game against New Bedford, Hawthorne suffered a broken hand and will miss the North game. It is a serious setback for the Presidents. Hawthorne was a home-run threat from any spot on the field. He could break a touchdown on a return, as a receiver, and as a runner.

Dominic Laptiste stepped up with a pair of excellent efforts against New Bedford and Durfee. Against New Bedford, he had 112 yards in 16 carries. Against Durfee, he went for 124 yards on 22 carries. Against New Bedford, he was, by most angles, in from the one for touchdown in overtime which would have given Quincy its first win, but the officials ruled him just short.

"He's a slasher. He follows his blocks and he cuts back well. He's been a solid runner for us," said Reardon.

Sophomore Colin Keaveny took over at quarterback in mid-season and has provided a reliable passing threat for Quincy. Center Patrick Nazzaro, guard Ryan Ahola, and tackle Bernie Van Tassell have played well up front and given Laptiste room to run over the last three games.

"Colin is playing with more confidence," said Reardon. "It's not easy to take over in the middle of the season at quarterback as a sophomore and learn the system. Patrick started the season at guard. Our center got hurt, and he stepped in and did a great job. He had no reps. He just moved over and played well. That's as tough assignment at center.

"Ryan and Bernie have been consistent for us all season." said Reardon.

Along with the running game, Quincy's defense, and specifically its tackling, has developed well. Gustavo DeSouza has been the team's best defensive player at end. Linebackers Josh Rodriguez and J.J. Camara have been steady and solid. Sophomore Mike Lomano has played well in the secondary, especially late in the season.

"We are so young that we had to work on the basics of tackling early in the season," said Reardon. "That's improved. That is the one area where I think we've improved the most. We've also been better recognizing situations and staying with our assignments which has helped our defense."

North will offer several challenges to the Quincy defense. Sophomore quarterback Tim Layden is a dual pass-run threat. Liam nearly 1,000 yards and seven touchdowns as a runner and a receiver. He is dangerous when North spreads him out as he showed with four catches and one touchdown in the first half against Canton.

Sophomore Nathan Sleiman (four touchdowns, nearly 500 yards rushing) is an explosive threat with the speed of a track sprinter which he displayed with a 33-yard bolt for a TD against Canton. Chris and Connor Donaghey, who have each scored a touchdown on a long return, bring quickness and toughness to the wide receiver spot.

Sophomore quarterback Tim Layden is an accurate passer when given time to throw and is also a strong and swift runner.

"Timmy allows us to mix it up a little which is a good thing," said Nutley. "Liam gives us versatility. He does everything well. Sleiman has stepped in and played well at running back. He's only a sophomore, but he's a breakaway threat for us."

Senior captain Tom Koch leads the defense at linebacker. He is healed from a shoulder injury and had 76 tackles in the seven games he played. He has consistently performed at an all-league level and is particularly strong stuffing the run.

Pham (two sacks against Milford, six for the season) and Monahan (five sacks in four games) bring pressure off the edge. Monahan has given the defense a boost on his return after missing five games with a knee injury. Sleiman (four interceptions) and Chris and Connor Donahey provide quickness and experience in the secondary.

"We've been inconsistent because we're young," said Nutley. "We'll make a great play and then make a mistake. I've seen more consistency as we've gained experience. Pham and Monahan are an excellent combination coming off the edge."

Quincy will test North's defense. The Presidents have run the ball well in their last three games. Dominic Laptiste has gone over 100 yards in Quincy's last two games against New Bedford and Durfee. The Presidents have solid linemen in Ryan Ahola and Patrick Nazzaro. Like North, Quincy will go with a sophomore quarterback in Colin Keaveny. Like North, Quincy will likely try to establish the run to make a young quarterback's introduction to the rivalry game a smooth one.

"Quincy has excellent size up front," said Nutlkey. "Laptiste has looked good the last two games. He can run well between the tackles and off the edge. I think both teams will try to run the ball early in the game. Whoever has the advantage in the running game will have the advantage in the game."

O'Connor and Nathan Sleiman are quick, dangerous backs. Connor and Chris Donaghey are breakaway threats at receiver and in the return game.

"We have to get pressure on Layden. He's very accurate when he has time," said Reardon. "Plus, they are huge up front. (Ryan) Manning, (Mike) Oldham, and (Mark) Monahan have tremendous size. We're going to have to do an excellent job blocking to move the ball on the ground."

Quincy has won the last four and 14 of the last 17 against North. That will be little motivation for the Presidents. It may be great motivation for North, but not for Quincy. This is a chance to wipe away what happened this season, not add to what happened in the past. It is a chance to sweep those ten losses from the memory by winning the game they will always remember.

"This is a game the seniors need to win for themselves. I don't think it connects to the past for us," said Reardon. "I'm sure North would probably give a different answer, but for us it's a chance to wash away the taste of a winless season with a victory on Thanksgiving."

Reardon wants to strike just the right emotional tone with his team. It is an unusually young team, its roster lined with sophomores. He needs to inspire his club, talk about the importance of the game, but he also wants to avoid too much hype which could leave his club too tight to play their best.

"I've going to challenge them. I'm going to ask them to play the best football game of their lives," said Reardon. "But I don't want to paralyze them with too much emotion, or they won't play their best. They know what this is about. They know the kids from North. I just want them to be ready to play their best football."

whom served as school superintendents, their brothers Paul, Joe, John and Bernard and sister, Frances.

Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro told the gathering that the Creedon legacy began in the late 1800s when John Creedon's father, Dan, immigrated from Ireland. His son, Peter, purchased the family home at 52 Kendall St. – just a short distance from the new field – where he and his wife, Mabel, raised their seven children.

Peter, who served in the Navy in both World War I and World War II, followed the footsteps of his father and became a firefighter, rising through the ranks to deputy chief. Mabel worked as a cook and manager for 20 years at the North Quincy High cafeteria.

DeCristofaro said that Joe, John, Larry and Bernard graduated from North Quincy High and served in the Armed Forces. After graduating from the Woodward School and Fisher College, Frances raised her family. Joe was a high school principal, John worked as an Army research physicist and Bernard became a middle school principal. Paul died in his childhood.

Lawrence earned his doctorate from Boston University and became a teacher. He served as assistant principal, assistant superintendent and then superintendent from 1969 to 1984. He died in 2012 while lecturing in Mexico.

After graduating Divine Word College, Eugene Creedon worked as a teacher at Quincy Point Middle School where he taught DeCristofaro who was a student. Eugene Creedon went on to be a principal at St. Ann's School, then returned to the Quincy public school system where he served as principal at both the Parker School and Broad Meadows Middle School. He later became director of elementary education and then was named superintendent, a position he held from 1992 to 2001. He died last Christmas Eve.

"I'm proud to say he was my mentor," said DeCristofaro.

He praised the brothers he succeeded as school chiefs.

"As superintendents, Larry and Gene were known for their leadership, being prolific educators, authors… they both had a significant love for their city," he said.

DeCristofaro said it is fitting the field where the multiple generations of a family "hit the baseball, passed the football, wrestled and tackled each other" be named in their honor. He added that it was unlikely the family ever dreamed the field across from their home where they played would be named for them.

"As this beautiful field is renamed today in honor of the entire Creedon family, the youth of North Quincy, like the Creedons of 52 Kendall St., will enjoy this amazing neighborhood athletic environment. As it always has been, the field will be a neighborhood sanctuary, a place to play."

After introducing the members of the Creedon family in attendance, Eugene Creedon's daughter, Erin Perkins, director of Special Education for the Quincy school system, thanked the officials and community for "bestowing this amazing honor to the Creedon family."

"We come here today so very proud of all the family that has gone before us and have instilled in us the importance of service to both the community and country," she said. "Many of us here today have followed in the footsteps of our family. We are teachers, volunteer firefighters, Peace Corps workers, police officers and have heeded the call to serve and protect our county."

Perkins read a reflection written by her father just before he passed away about the impact the field had on his family.

"'When I think of growing up on Kendall Street, my heart is filled with happy memories and so many of them stem from the field. A place where so much of what we did there helped us to grow as boys into responsible, fair-minded adults, ready for war if need be, but more significantly, ready for peace and ready to accept service to our community and city in whatever way we are called.'"

Four light towers – or 'four pillars" as Koch called them – were dedicated to women's baseball and softball legend Mary Pratt; retired North Quincy High principal Eileen Feeney; educator, coach and current School Committee vice chairman Paul Bregoli and the late North Quincy High football assistant coach Pete Zoia known as "Mr. North Quincy" for his longtime dedication to the Red Raider football program as both a player and coach.

Feeney, a 1951 North Quincy High graduate, grew up on Kendall Street behind the field. After graduating from Cornell University, she returned to North Quincy High as a math teacher, dean, assistant principal and principal, retiring in 2000.

She thanked city officials "for finishing something that started in the 1970s," namely to address a re-accreditation requirement to upgrade North Quincy High. Feeney explained that the school was overcrowded and was in need of a new building.

"We didn't get a new building, but we got an addition," she said, noting that seven homes had to be taken to make way for the new wing.

She said the new, up-
